"In spite of all the manoeuvres and objurgations that Colonel Repington could contrivo in both newspapers, so queerly coupled through him, Sir William Robertson went, and no man had ever more reason for a prayer to be saved from his friends. Sir Henry Wilson, our unfortunate Colonel's very bête noir, became Chief of the Imperial Staff. Foch became Generalissimo. Lloyd George remains Premier, and Lord Milner goes to the War Office to introduce by far the ablest régime which that institution has known in the war, much to the advantage of the Allies and country. The Colonel's whole house of cards has collapsed.

Calls for Action.

"There is no need to pursue this analysis further, though the choice of quotations might be multiplied. We defy any one to gain from Colonel Repington's yes-and-no method any coherent view of the present battle and the prospect in France. At one time the boche is said to be deeply chagrined by his checks, hard hit, and licking his wounds. At another time, when it suits the political argument, our army is pictured as jeopardized and almost betrayed under the imbeciles who are trying to conduct the war in London, no comfort being found for the absence of Robertson, in the leadership of Foch, while not only Lloyd George and Lord Milner, but all the British soldiers not the pets or patrons of the clique are evidently reckoned among the imbeciles.

"So much for the whole intolerable system of spurious pretensions, surprising associations, painful efforts to straddle so much for the incurable self-contradiction and weakness, vulnerable at every point, yet rash and foolish enough to carry on with reckless abuse and insidious suggestion the personal vendettas against the statesmen and soldiers chiefly responsible for the Government and administration in the greatest crisis for the country and our allies. It is the system of a faction in hysterics and intrigue in convulsions. On both sides of the Atlantic and at the front it plays the enemy's game and nothing else.

"This was by striving to bring the whole of our present war administration into disrepute, by encouraging indiscipline and distrust from the top to the bottom of the army, by spreading suspicion and doubt through every class of society, by trying to breed dissension and rivalry between the Allies, but especially between Lloyd George and Clemenceau, and by misleading America as to the extent of the British military effort.

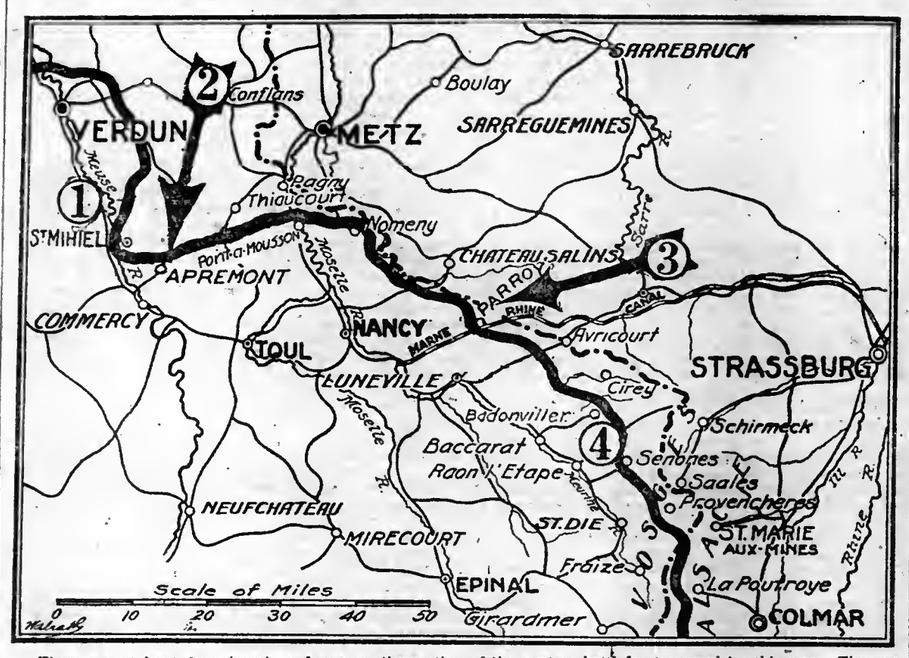
"Is it too much to ask that the American newspapers shall cease to reproduce as representative of British opinion the hysterical, unworthy, discredited stuff which every atable ritish citizen repudiates? What would America think of our loyalty and sense if any British newspaper were systematically to reproduce factitious attacks on President Wilson and his colleagues?

"The truth is accurately the opposite of what Colonel Repington suggests. A unified command under General Foch is achieved, thanks above all to the efforts made by Lloyd George and Milner at their full political risk, and thanks to the example of the generous concession set by the British Government with the hearty support of the United States.

"The St. Quentin disaster was a direct result of the fatal dualism which sophists like Colonel Repington tried to preserve. Apart from that, the British Army has never fought more magnificently than during the last seven weeks, nor was it ever in greater strength or in better heart. The Prime Minister and Milner, with men like General Sir Henry Wilson and General Harington, gave us at last by far the most efficient and modern system of war direction and army management we have had at the British War Office since this struggle began. There must be an end of Colonel Repington's campaign of calumny and demoralization; there must be an end of vendetta and cliques; there must be an end of these things for the sake of the British Army and people and our allies.

"The scandal we have exposed has become the cancer of the public life in wartime. We say that it must be cut right out with unflinching hand. We have proved that the nature of the growth is malignant. To the Ministers themselves the operation belongs. If they are proved incapable of proper surgery they would do well to give place to stronger men, but the events of the last few days justify our hope and belief that Lloyd George and Milner are the men to make an end of this mutinous nuisance. There will be no health in the public service until the virulent mischief-making we have exposed is squelched without remorse."

Where the Germans Attacked Our Troops.



There are at least four American forces on the section of the western battlefront covered by this map. They are in order, from west to east: (1) North of St. Mihiel on the heights of the Meuse; (2) east of St. Mihiel from Apremont toward Pont-a-Monsson, the so-called "northwest of Toul" sector; (3) near Parroy on the Marne-Rhine Canal, where the Germans made their first raid on Pershing's men last Fall; and (4) near Badonviller.

It was near Apremont and Parroy that the Germans made their attacks, according to the Berlin announcement. These points are about 33 miles apart.

KAISER HAS ARMY OF 5,300,000 NOW

in Mesopotamia, and none on the Italian front.

These forces total about 5,465,000. Officers with Germany's allies and other smaller factors would bring the figure to about 5,600,000. For German losses of a permanent nature in the recent Somme offensive a figure of 300,000 may be fixed. This leaves a strength of 5,300,000 as a measure of the military man power at the Kaiser's hands.

When the Kaiser started the war in August, 1914, he had an army of 2,800,000 in actual operation. One year later this army had grown to 4,800,000. By August, 1916, the German Army numbered 6,800,000. In August, 1917, the approximate size of the German Army was 6,000,000. Now it is about 700,000 fewer than that. The difference between the present size of the army and that at the high water in August, 1916, is consequently 1,500,000.

Recruits of the Enemy.

Since August, 1916, recruits have been put in at a rate of 600,000 a year, or 900,000 in all. This indicates the German losses since August, 1916, were 2,400,000 men. The German Army's total loss in the war is placed at considerably more than 3,000,000.

German divisions now have 9,000 infantry, where they formerly numbered 12,000. The Germans started the Somme offensive with an infantry superiority of 300,000 over the French and British forces. Many German divisions have been disrupted by severe punishment, and indications now are that the enemy is repairing the machine before hitting again. He has abundance of man power to feed the machine as soon as it is fixed.

There is little fear of the Austrians helping the Germans on the western front. The best information is that a small amount of Austrian artillery is being used and no infantry. Reports have it that the political situation in Austria is such that a large Austrian force will not be sent to France. This situation gives reason for the calculations made checking the Italian Army against the Austrian and figuring German strength against England, France, and the United States.

Because the great German manpower strength makes every soldier in France and England needed now, it can be seen that Americans are performing a larger military service than is often thought. Every American soldier in the line anywhere from Calais to Belfort adds one fighter to the Allied forces. This means that every American division holding a line on the American sectors adds two French divisions to the force to confront the boche, French divisions being one-half the size of American.

Danger in Ukraine.

It is clear that Germany cannot increase the size of her army from within, and that the certain established ratio of losses will decrease the Kaiser's army. These losses are now running at a rate of more than 1,000,000 a year, and her 1919 class numbers 600,000. However, great attention is being paid to the probable work of Germany in Ukraine. Germans and Ukrainians may some time be fighting side by side.

Some expert observers see in the situation a need for more active propaganda work by America in Russia to curtail Germany's use of her limitless man power against the former allies of Russia. I have heard it suggested that Theodore Roosevelt probably would make a success of such a job. With the political situation existing in Austria, the use of Russian man power seems to offer the Kaiser his only chance to increase his army and always keep it ahead of the Allies as the increasing force of American soldiers is thrown into the balance against him.

LONDON, May 11.—The secret memorandum which Prince Lichnowsky wrote as a record and vindication of his conduct while German Ambassador in England is the most important single document which has come before the world since the first days of the war. It was not meant to become known during the war,' perhaps not within his own lifetime. It was written, not to justify England but to criticise the policy which tied Germany to Austria, and was published without and indeed against its author's will. It may have been composed partly to relieve the writer's own feelings, an impulse which those will understand who are prevented by considerations of public duty from vindicating their conduct to the world. It may also have been due to a sense, natnral to men who have borne a part in great events, that they owe it to posterity to contribute what they can to the truth of history. Anyhow it has exposed him to danger and the persecution of the German Government, and this persecution is evidence of the importance they attach to it as a condemnation of their conduct. The truth of its contents has been confirmed, if indeed it needed confirmation, by the statements of Herr von Jagow, late German Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and of Herr Muhlon, one of the Krupp Directors.

Prince Lichnowsky appears in this document as a man of clear vision and cool judgment, an acute observer of social as well as political phenomena, a good witness both to what he noted during his residence here and to what he knew of the action of his own Government. And now let us see what he records.

Germany's Two Campaigns.

When the war began in August, 1914, the German Government entered on two campaigns, whieb it has ever since prosecuted with equal energy and an equal disregard of honor and bumanity. One of these was the campaign by arms. It suddenly invaded Belgium, a peaceful neutral country, whose neutrality it was pledged to respect and which it has treated with the utmost cruelty, murdering or reducing to the slavery of forced labor its civilian and noncombatant inhabitants. It has similarly enslaved the inhabitants of Poland and has encouraged its Turkish allies to massacre their innocent Armenian subjects.

The other campaign was one of falsehood, conducted by speeches and through the press and intended to mislead public opinion. It was an effort to deceive both its own people and the neutral nations by mendacious misrepresentations of the German aims, purposes, and conduct, and by equally false descriptions of the aims, purposes, and conduct of Germany's antagonists, and especially of the British Government and British people. It tried to represent the war as having been forced npon Germany by Great Britain. Germany, it was said, was merely defending herself against an unprovoked attack. She desired to live at peace with her neighbors, developing her own resonrces, cherishing no aggressive designs. Her enormous army and navy had been created only to protect her against the jealous and malicious enemies by whom she was surrounded, and especially against Great Britain. Britain, it seems, was envious of Germany, being herself a decadent nation. This was the prevailing German view. She feared the commercial competition of Germany and tried to keep the latter out of all foreign markets. British policy, so they said, under the direction of King Edward VII., had formed alliances with France and Russia in order to hem in Germany, and after trying to block Germany's outlets in Africa and Asia contrived this war to destroy by arms a rival whom she could not face up to in trade and manufacturing industry.

While these accusations were brought against Great Britain, attempts were made to excuse the invasion of Belgium by false stories, dropped as soon as they had served their temporary purpose, that Frenob officers had been sent into Belgium to help to organize the Belgian troops against Germany and that French aviators had been flying over German territory.

Effect of German Lies at Home.

Grotesqne as all those inventions were they were repeated with such audacity as to produce some effect in neutral countries, but their chief and more lasting influence was on the German people. A large part of the German press, inspired and controlled by the German Government, had for some time past been holding up England as the persistent foe of Germany. It now redoubled its falsehoods, represented Sir Edward Grey as having plotted to bring about the war and as having urged Russia to refuse a peaceful solution, and it added the equally groundless charge that England had secretly planned with Belgium to attack Germany through Belgian territory. Theso fables, repeated incessantly by German politicians as well as by the newspapers, found ready credence with the German people, easily led by their press, always docile to the orders of their Government, and now swept off their feet by a wave of patriotism and by the belief that they were about to achieve a victory as rapid and complete as that of 1870. It was this conviction of the malevolence and grasping ambition of England that created that ferocious hatred of the English, which has continued to display itself in the treatment of English prisoners and in the exultation over such crimes as the sinking of the Lusitania.

This sudden outburst of hatred in a nation so intelligent startled and amazed us. It can be understood only when we remember that the German Government did everything in its power not only to create hatred, but also to stifle every voice that was raised to let the people know the truth. They never have been permitted to know the truth, and the disappointment that fell upon them when their march on Paris was arrested with the help of a British army and their coasts were strictly blockaded by the British fleet added fuel to their anger and has made it ever since an easier matter to keep the truth from them.

Lichnowsky Tells the Truth.

Now what was the truth? Tbe British people bore no hatred whatever toward the German people. King Edward VII. meant no harm to Germany when he showed his liking for the French, neither did his Ministers when they took steps to remove the differences that bad been causing trouble between ourselves and France, and again when they came to a friendly understanding with Russia. These arrangements were made in the interests of European peace and goodwill, not in order to damage Germany.

British merchants and manufacturers never dreamed of fighting Germany to get rid of her commercial competition. Had such an idea occurred to them they would have reflected that Germany was England's best foreign customer, not to add that two years of even a successful war would have inflicted far more loss upon them than the extinction of German trade competition could have repaired in twenty years.

British men of science and learning adopted the immense contributions Germany had been making to the progress of knowledge, and they had many personal friends in Germany. British statesmen did not desire to add to British possessions nbroad, feeling that we had already all we needed and that the greatest interest of the British Empire was universal peace. No section of our people, neither traders, thinkers, writers, nor statemen, had any idea of the dangers to peace which lay, as we know now, in the mind and purpose of those who ruled Germany. We did not realize what the feudal aristocracy and military caste of Germany were pondering and planning, nor how little weight they attached to considerations either of good faith or humanity. Hence, beyond maintaining the strong fleet indispensable for the protection of a country open to sea attack which did not maintain a large army, we had made no preparations for war, and had scarcely bethought ourselves of what action we should have to take on land if we became involved in war.

In this belief and attitude there may have been less prudence than was needed, but our absence of suspicion is the best proof of how little we expected aggression. It is an absolute refutation of the calumny that Great Britain, with her tiny army, was planning an attack on the greatest military power in the world.

What the Memorandum Shows.

All this every Englishman knows. I repeat it only because it has now received not only confirmation but also valuable further proof in the Lichnowsky memorandum, proof unsolicited and uncontemplated, and moreover unimpeachable because it comes from one who bore a leading part in what it records, and who never meant to let it become known.

First, the memorandum bears witness to the pacific spirit of the British people. Here are some of its words:

"Commercial jealousy about which we in Germany hear so much is based on a wrong conception of the circumstances. Certainly Germany's rise as a commercial power after 1870 and during the following decades was a menace to British commercial circles which with their industries and export houses had held a virtual monopoly. Increasing commerce with Germany, which was the leading country in Europe as regards British exports, had, however, given rise to a wish to maintain friendly relations with their best customer and business friend, and had driven all other considerations into the background, notably in commercial circles. I encountered the most friendly spirit and effort to further our common commercial interests. At English cities to which I was invited by the Chambers of Commeree and Municipalities I was well received everywhere. • • • In all other circles I also met with the most friendly reception and co-operation, at court, in society, and from the Government.

"On account of our fleet alone England would not have drawn the sword any more than on account of our trade, which has been alleged to have produced jealousy and finally war. • • • It was possiblo to arrive at an understanding in spite of the fleet and without a naval holiday intermission of naval shipbuilding."

Secondly, the memorandum shows that the attitude of the British Government of Sir Edward Grey, then Foreign Minister, was entirely pacific. The admirable characterization of Sir Edward it contains is too long to quote, but it testifies to his perfect straigbtforwardneaa and conatant wish to maintain good relations with Germany, and after describing how "the simplicity and honesty of his ways secured him the respect even of his opponents," it adds: "This is a true picture of the man who is decried in Germany as a liar and the instigator of the world war."

The memorandum goes on to show how sincerely Sir Edward had worked for peace, first in 1913 during the Balkan troubles, when he went hand in hand with Germany, "hardly ever supporting the French or Russian claims." "He conducted negotiations with circumspection, calmness, and tact." Frequently when appealed to by Lichnowsky to use his influence with the Russian Government to arrange difficulties between it and Germany, "Sir Edward gladly did this, and his intervention contributed in no small degree to smooth the matter over."

Thirdly, still weightier evidence of the good-will of the British Government is supplied by an account given of the concessions made to the German wishes in Asia and Africa. "Sir Edward Grey," says the memorandum, "after having settled all outstanding points of differences with France and Russia, wished to make similar agreements with us. It was not his object to isolate us, but to the best of his power to make us partners in the existing association. As he had succeeded in overcoming Anglo-French and Anglo-Russian differences, so he also wished to do his best to eliminate Anglo-German, and by a network of treaties, which no doubt would have led in the end to an agreement on the troublesome question of naval armaments, to insure the peace of the world. His plan was, in his own words, without interfering with England's existing friendsbip, which has no aggressive aims and does not entail any binding obligations, to arrive at a friendly rapprochement and understanding with Germany to bring the two groups of powers nearer."

In pursuance of tbis policy the British Government went a long way to meet the German wishes in respect to the Bagdad Railway. They agreed to let it be prolonged to El Basra. They included the whole of Mesopotamia as far as that town in the German sphere of influence, and also the whole district of Bagdad and the Anatolian Railway, i. e., all the centre of Asia Minor. Not less large were the concessions made in South and Central Africa. "The new agreement regarding the interests of Germany and England in the African possessions of Portugal was fully in accord with German wishes and interests. For these the British Government showed the greatest consideration. Sir E. Grey intended to demonstrate his good-will toward us, but he also wished to assist our colonial development as a whole."

These arrangements were embodied in two treaties, highly advantageous to Germany, which, however, the German Government for some reasons of its own had postponed signing so that they remained unpublished up to the outbreak of the war. Had we in England known the inner spirit of the German Government and the use they would make of our concessions the British Ministers might well have hesitated to go so far as they did, but that they conceded so much is the completeat proof of their goodwill and the most convincing refutation of the charges which the German Ministers and press have brought against them.

What Will German People Do?

It would take too long to follow out in this article the constant efforts of the Britiah Government during the fateful daya before the outbreak of the war to avoid the conflict by means of Sir E. Grey's repeated plans of mediation and adjustment. The memorandum shows how earnestly he labored for peace at Berlin, at St. Petersburg, at Vienna, and how all his attempts were baffled by the settled purpose of the German Government to force on the war. Great Britain may, like other nations, have in the past sometimes indulged her ambition, sometimes abused her strength, sometimes embarked in wars that might well have been avoided, but on this occasion at least she is blameless. Never in her long history had she had so perfectly clear a conscience as in the case of this war. Her people neither contemplated it nor desired it. They were driven into it by the action of the German Government, which persisted in pushing it on even when Austria seemed willing to draw back. All had evidently been settled at that famous Potsdam conference when, as the German Ambassador at Conatantinople before Italy had declared war against Austria told his Italian colleague, the Emperor had inquired of his military and naval chiefs whether they were ready for the conflict for which during some months preceding the preparations had been in progress.

Neither when the war began did Great Britain wish to do more than prevent Germany from destroying Belgium and mortally wounding France. Sir Edward Grey spoke truly for the nation when, as the memorandum records, he said: "We don't want to crush Germany."

What will be the result of these disclosures? How will they affect opinion in Germany? There must be thousands of men there who, like Prince Lichnowsky, are not carried away by national vanity and unbridled ambition, but retain respect for tbe principles of good faith and humanity, men who desire to know the truth and will try to make it prevail. Have such men, now that a rent has been made in the veil of falsehood which the German Government has thrown over its subjects, the courage or strength to tell their rulers that they can no longer truat them nor tolerate a aystem which has disgraced Germany in the eyes of the world and brought untold miseries upon her as well as on the peoples she has attacked, or will the change in German spirit and German purposes be brought about by nothing but defeat in the war, defeat which will show that the yoke of military domination under which Germany lies prostrate la condemned not only by its wickedness but by that test which even wickedness muat admit to be decisive, the test of failure?

GERMANS EXPECTED THE OSTEND ATTACK

Harbor Was Brilliantly Illuminated When Vindictive Made Her Dash.

SUNK IN THE FAIRWAY

Cruiser Lies Diagonally Across the Channel, and Mud Is Expected to Block U-Boats.

LONDON, May 11.—More details of the exploits of the crew of the Vindictive and those of the craft accompanying her in her dash into Ostend Harbor are available today. The following narrative is that of a member of the expedition who had exceptional opportunities to observe all that happened:

"When the Vindictive, accompanied by the flotilla, left Dover Harbor Thursday night for Ostend," he said, "the array of shipping made a fine sight as it extended out across the Channel and the vessels skillfully took up the formation which had been alloted them. It was a calm, clear night when we went out, with the sea almost as smooth as glass and the sky just swept with fleecy clouds. The Vindictive, with her three tall funnels, was the feature of the raiding fleet, and showed every indication of rough handling in the Zeebrugge Mole fight; but she had been sandbagged and protected in various ways, to give crew the best chance of safety.'

"Accompanied by the flotilla, she went straight across to Dunkirk Roads, the vessels traveling at a comfortable rate of speed. When we got across the Channel the weather became hazy, but this was an advantage to us. We steamed away from Dunkirk roadstead between midnight and 1 o'clock for the last stage of the great adventure. The Vindictive looked to be traveling quite slowly as she made her way along in the direction of her goal. As we steamed along the German searchlights seemed to be everywhere, sweeping around in arcs, but they seemed to miss our ships for the time. Ostend Harbor was brilliantly lighted by powerful searchlights. Artificial fog clouds were being used to assist our operations, and the fact that it was hazy materially assisted the success of these.

"As the Vindictive neared Ostend it became apparent that the Germans had got wind of our presence, for suddenly there was a regular pyrotechnic display of star shells. The effect was brilliant, but quite undesirable from our point of view. Immediately guns of all sizes opened fire on us, and there was a terrific din.

"The Vindictive and one or two other vessels received hits, and a few casualties were caused by this gunfire. The firing was heavily returned by our ships. Most of the crew of the Vindictive were taken off when the ship was at a little distance from tho Ostend piers, only a few officers and men being left to navigate her between the piers and sink her there. A motor launch which was assisting in picking up the crew, was hit several times by shell fire, and was in a sinking condition when it came alongside the Admiral's vessel, tho destroyer Warwick, to which they were transferred. The motor launch had extensive damage in the fore part, and by order of the Admiral was sunk, as it was apparent that it could not get back to Dover. There was a heavy explosion when the Vindictive sank between the piers.

"It was splendid to see the Admiral during the operations. From the bridge of the Warwick he followed fully all operations with the greatest keenness and with courage that was absolutely infectious. As the men from the Vindictive were brought alongside in the motor launch he shouted inquiries to them as to the success they had had in sinking the vessel, and as to her position, and he received the reply: 'We have sunk her, all right. She is well up to the pierhead.'

Germans Expected the Attack.

"Tbe Germans evidently anticipated our coming, as they had sunk fresh mines in the Channel and in the neigbborhood of Ostend. The Zeebrugge expedition was a surprise; but this time they were undoubtedly expecting us. We succeeded, all the same. It was 4:30 this afternoon before the destroyer Warwick reached Dover Harbor."

Another naval man, who took part in the action, said that when the British were off Ostend they could hear the Germans on the warships in the barbor yelling out orders. Men from the Vindictive and other vessels, who were under fire for forty minutes in the vicinity, said: "It was a fine piece of seamanship to put her in the position she now keeps which effectually blocks the entrance."

People at Dover noticed before tho Vindictive left port that she bad painted on her funnels some flags, evidently in international code. The flags could not be made out from shore, and thero has been a good deal of wondering as to what they represented. It has been suggested they conveyed to Germans at Ostend the compliments of the British Navy.

Describing the escape of the destroyer that rescued the Vindictive's crew, a young subaltern said:

"'Within a moment of the beginning of firing one of our destroyers, which were then leading, dashed forward at top speed for a minute or two, ranged up broadside on to the Vindictive, closed in to her as if it were a boarding party, and began to bring aboard the destroyer the killed and injured remnant of the gallant old ship'a crew. Thia was hazardous work. The men were on the upper deck, and all who approached them were subject to the danger of machine gun fire, which was furious whenever they appeared. Luckily not one of tbe rescue party was hit, and so far as we knew when we arrived back at our base, we brought with us all five who had been killed and all the wounded. The latter we placed on the hospital ship in the harbor, and they are being cared for there tonight. As soon as the destroyer got the dead and wounded aboard she backed a few yards slowly, then swung round and dashed full speed toward our squadron. Up to that time she bad been sheltered by the Vindictive herself, against whose broad side she found a haven of security from gunfire; but as soon as she left her position alongside the old ship she was within range of every battery gun on the coast, as well as machine guns, but the smoke acreen acted splendidly.

"'Not a gun was fired by any of the batteries that could have reached us, and the only reason one can imagine for our immunity is the fact that the smoke screen almost immediately obscured all of us from view. Just as we turned away from the scene, we heard a muffled roar, not a loud one, but enough to tell us the charge on the old Vindictive had blown her up—and we could just see her settling as we steamed into the smoke cloud. Indeed, by that time she was well down, and there is no doubt whatever that we succeeded in the task we set out to accomplish.

"'Our airplanes helped us at Ostend. There were not many of them—just two or three at most, I should think. They were of service in distracting the enemy's attention, and, as they have paid similar visits for nights past, it is possible that the Germans thought their attack merely one of the usual kind, and were prevented from anticipating any other event.'"

Keyes and Lynes in Command.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DOVER, May 10.—Vice Admiral Sir Roger Keyes, who commanded the fleet which took part in the recent raid on Zeebrugge, was in charge of last night's attack on Ostend, once more making the destroyer Warwick his flagship.

The actual planning of the attack was in the hands of Commander Hubert Lynes. Tho crew of the Vindictive numbered fifty-two, mostly taken from officers and men of the Brilliant, which took part in the former operation; but some of the men were on the Vindictive herself at Zeebrugge. These were an Engineer Lieutenant and four engine-room artificers. Admiral Keyes considered that the Vindictive men had done their bit, but the Engineer Lieutenant and his four men rejected the suggestion that on this occasion they should stay behind. No one but themselves could manage the Vindictive's engines, they said.

Channel Is Partially Blocked.

LONDON, May 11.—The old cruiser Vindictive went to her last berth 150 to 200 yards within the piers forming the entrance to the harbor of Ostend under a terrific fire from the German naval guns and machine guns on the shore, according to the Central News.

Preparatory to the raid into Ostend the naval air force bombarded the town and dropped bombs continuously on the harbor works, causing fires. Later the airmen were assisted by destroyers and monitors in bombarding the enemy positions heavily.

The Vindictive experienced the greatest difficulty in finding the entrance to the harbor. The enemy employed star shells and searchlights extensively, and for twenty minutes the vessel was in full view of the enemy batteries. As she cruised up and down seeking the entrance she was hit repeatedly, and several casualties were sustained. It was 2:20 o'clock when the piers were sighted almost alongside, and then the German machine guns opened a fearful fire.

Having found his bearings, the Captain swung his concrete laden cruiser around and rammed her stem against the eastern pier, leaving his Lieutenant to work the engines with the object of sending tho ship across the channel. He then discovered that the cruiser was aground aft and that it was impossible to turn her any further. He called his crew from the engine room and stokehold and then set off explosive charges.

Airmen, according to the Central News report, say the Vindictive is lying submerged at an angle of forty degrees at the eastern entrance, with her stem against the pier. It is obvious that a vessel 300 feet long lying at this angle does not effectively block a channel some 320 feet wide, but a very useful purpose has been served.

A partial and very serious blockade has been achieved, and under the conditions of tide and rapid silt prevailing on the Belgian coast the obstruction will certainly tend to increase. It is not asserted that the sunken cruiser will prevent the egress of submarines, or even entirely stop that of destroyers. However, it will materially hamper both, and that is important. German light craft will not be able, when pursued by British forces, to rush at full speed into the harbor, as they have done heretofore.

Commander Lynes's Own Story.

Commander Lynes, who conducted the blocking operation at Zeebrugge, was in command on the present occasion. He tells the following story:

"Weather conditions at the start were in every way suitable. There was a light northwest wind. The sea was favorable to small craft. There was a clear sky and the visibility was good. The outward passage was made without interference on the part of the enemy. The small craft were all dispatched to their stations, with destroyers in support, and two coastal motor boats were told off to torpedo the piers. Before the arrival of the Vindictive, until 1:45 o'clock, the enemy waa remarkably quiet, but just at this time the Germans began to open fire. Star shells showed that the smoke screens were progressing excellently.

"At about this time the sky, which hitherto had been almost unclouded, began to be partially obscured by low, drifting clouds. In about ten minutes before the Vindictive was due at her destination, a sea fog set in. This stopped our air attack. Indeed, for a time even the searchlights could not be seen. This state of things continued for almost an hour, when it cleared sufficiently for the air attacks to be recommenced.

"It was a lurid scene when the Vindictive arrived at 2 o'clock, practically program time. There was a thundering of guns on sea and land. The exploding of bombs from airplanes added to the din, and there was an occasional cry of agony from some one mortally wounded. Searchlights criss-crossed above, and the whole scene was illuminated with flashes and star sholls. This was the picture for a full hour.

"The Vindictive cruised about for twenty minutes in the fog, looking for the entrance to the harbor, which she eventually found. She sank herself about 200 yards inside the eastern entrance. The Vindictive's crew was rescued by a motor launch, which brought off two officers and thirty-eight men, and another which went alongside and took off a Lieutenant and two men. Two other motor boats detailed for rescue work searched the shores carefully under heavy fire, but found no one."

BERLIN DENIES DAMAGE.

Says the Vindictive "Sank Outside the Navigation Channel."

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—A German official account of the attack on Ostend says:

"The second British attempt found our marine corps as well prepared as the first. The reasons why only Ostend was attacked this time are not clear. The British developed a heavy artificial fog off Zeebrugge at the same time, but this was obviously to distract attention.

"The enemy opened fire at 2:45 from the sea on our batteries. The fog was developed a few minutes later. Two cruisers were sighted in the fog east of Ostend at 3 o'clock, and our batteries opened a well-aimed fire.

"After a curtain of fire had been placed over the entrance to the harbor one cruiser turned westward. The other reappeared before the entrance at 3:30 and, being very heavily bombarded from all sides, sank outside the navigation channel. Several objects caught sight of were bombarded.

"The stranded cruiser appears, from the papers found, to be the Vindictive.

"Our losses were again gratifyingly slight."

LONDON, May 11, (via Ottawa.)—Admiral Jellicoe's prediction that the submarine menace would be ended by August is now recalled, not only in connection with the Zeebrugge-Ostend exploits, but by the closing of the North Sea from the Orkney Islands to Norway by the greatest mine field ever laid.

Millions in mines and money have been devoted by the British Government to this North Sea barrier, which the Germans will be able to evade only if they use Norwegian waters. The completion of the mine fields and the Belgian coast operations are regarded in naval circles ase the most important naval undertaking of the war, and confidence is felt that thia aggressive policy will be further extended.

CLINCHES RUMANIA BY ANOTHER TREATY

Germany by a Politico-Legal Agreement Requires All Sorts of Indemnities.

MUST PAY FOR WAR DAMAGE

London Believes Berlin Will Yet Force Brave Queen to Abdicate.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—Under a supplementary-legal political treaty between Rumania and Germany, the former country must indemnify German Consular officials for all damage suffered by them during the war, or done to Consular buildings. Rumania renounces indemnification for damage caused in Rumania as a result of German military measures, including all requisitions and contributions.

Within six months after the ratification of the peace treaty Rumania must redeem notes, issued by the Banca Generale on the order of the occupation administration, and will not put them in circulation against balances or deposits, held by the German Reichsbank for covering.

Another clause provides that Rumania shall indemnify Germans for all damage suffered by them on Rumanian territory by the result of military measures of one of the belligerent powers. This stipulation also applies to losses which Germans suffered as shareholders of undertakings in Rumania. A commission, having a neutral Chairman, will fix the amount of such losses.

Rumania will also indemnify neutral nations for damage caused them on Rumanian territory as a result of German military measures.

Other clauses provide for the restoration of abrogated treaties, the resumption of the ordinary relations between debtor and creditor, and the exchange of prisoners. Germans who were in the Rumanian public service before the war will be restored to positions with equal salaries or receive fair compensation.

Rumania will grant amnesty to her subjects for their political conduct, or military conduct based on political grounds, during the war. Another clause provides that various rights shall be accorded German churches and schools in Rumania.

Clause 11 says that "Rumania, after having obtained the consent of the Rumanian National Bank, agrees that balances and deposits of the National Bank now in the German Reichsbank shall remain in the Reichsbank's charge for five years, and if Rumania falls behind in her installments, for ten years, as security for Rumania's public debt and service as regards German subjects, and may also, if necessary, be drawn upon to pay interest and redeem Rumanian bonds."

A Conservative newspaper, which has been resurrected at Bucharest since the conclusion of peace, says that the Rumanian national debt amounts to 10,000,000,000 lei, (normally about $2,000,000,000.) This does not take into account destroyed material. Direct taxes will be increased, an income tax will be imposed, and a complete system of financial laws enacted to meet the requirements of the Treasury.

Rumania's Queen Won't Give Up.

LONDON, May 11.—The signing of the treaty of peace between Germany and Rumania will be by no means the last action in the Rumanian tragedy, according to the view current here.

The announcement by German newspapers that Queen Marie would rather abdicate than reign over the country under the German peace conditions is held to be a case of the wish probably being father to the thought. The Queen was largely instrumental in bringing Rumania into the war on the side of the Allies, and she has fought stubbornly for months to avert peace. Even now that peace has been signed, it is predicted that she will continue to be a formidable obstacle in the path of the German plans for "penetration."

In a talk with The Associated Press correspondent at Jassy the day before his departure from that city Queen Marie said:

"I shall never become reconciled to a humiliating peace with Germany—never! And I hope, indeed I know, that I shall have the support of Americans as well as Rumanians in continuing the fight against the invader. The time is a critical one for Rumania, but we know we are right and our courage is undaunted. We have been through critical times before. We have borne great hardships and undergone great suffering. Greater hardships and sufferings are perhaps in store, but I continue to hope. It is only a woman's hope, but I cannot abandon it."

The Wilhelmstrasse is probably considering ways and means for ridding Rumania of the Queen's influence. As a preparatory step, the German newspapers apparently have been instructed to speak of her as planning abdication. It seems safe to predict that she will never abdicate unless forced to do so, as she is known to be imbued with a deep sense of responsibility to the Rumanian people, whom she, by every indication, deeply and sincerely loves.

It seems likely that the only reason why Germany has not already insisted upon the abdication of the Queen is that King Ferdinand is a member of the Hohenzollern family and, therefore, is still regarded with some consideration by the German rulers.

If both the King and the Queen are deposed it would naturally follow that exile would be imposed upon Crown Prince Charles, who is in close sympathy with his mother in her bitter hatred for all things German. The likeliest candidates for the throne in such a contingency are young Prince Nikolai, who is a schoolboy, and King Ferdinand's brother, William, who is a general in the German army.

The affairs of state will probably be intrusted to Peter Carp as Premier. M. Carp, who is more than 80 years old, held the premiership for a time in ante-bellum days and was regarded as one of the ablest diplomats in Rumania. He has been pro-German throughout the war, although two of his sons lost their lives in the Rumanian army at the hands of the Germans.

M. Carp was opposed to Rumania entering the war, asserting that Russia would not be a dependable ally and that the campaign would be a long series of disasters for Rumania.

Intrigues Likely at Jassy.

Now that the Germans have succeeded in obtaining the formal signatures to the treaty, which they have so carefully drafted, they will put into effect rapidly, it is thought, measures designed to make Rumania most useful to them. A series of intrigues and political manoeuvres similar to those recently carried out in the Ukraine is expected to develop at Jassy.

A plausible excuse for the use of the mailed fist to Rumania may be found by the Germans in the difficulties likely to be encountered in obtaining the ratification of the peace treaty by a Rumanian legislative body. A large proportion of the members of the Rumanian Parliament left the country when a German peace became inevitable, and it is doubtful whether it will be possible to assemble a quorum to ratify the treaty. Even if a quorum can be gathered many Deputies are counted upon to support the Queen in opposing ratification, thus giving the Germans an opportunity, if they choose to take it, of dealing with the Rumanian Parliament as they recently dealt with the Ukrainian Rada.

Criticism is being heard in Germany and Austria regarding the peace treaty of Bucharest. The Leipzig Volkszeitung says:

"Altogether, this treaty is no pesce by understanding, but a pure mailed fist peace. It contains open annexations and concealed war indemnities which have to be paid. Its economic promises are no less burdening for Rumania than as if money indemnities had been imposed."

The Vienna Neues Wiener Tagblatt warns Austrians against seeing in the conclusion of peace an act of "sentimental reconciliation and thinks that Rumania concluded it because she was forced to and because she hopes for a complete reversal at the world's peace congress."

GERMAN 'FAMILY BARRACKS.'

Reichstag Votes 500,000,000 Marks for Housing Purposes.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—There is a shortage of 750,000 small dwellings in Germany, according to Lieutenant Paul Goehre, Socialist, who spoke in the Reichstag on Friday. He said that in most large towns there were no more empty houses, and that young married couples had to live in furnished rooms, rents having increased 50 per cent.

The House unanimously adopted recommendations of the Dwelling House Committee, which included an advance by the State of 500,000,000 marks and the construction of family barracks.

GREAT DEEDS DONE BY HAIG'S AIRMEN

Fifty-three German Machines Were Downed in Two Days' Battles in the Air.

MANY FIGHTS AGAINST ODDS

Two British Machines Tuesday Fought 20 of Foe, Downing or Disabling 13.

LONDON, May 11.—Thirty-five German machines were brought down by British aviators on Thursday and Friday and eighteen were driven down out of control, according to the official reports of aerial operations. The report for Thursday reads:

The cloudless weather on Thursday enabled our airplanes to carry out a full day's work. More than twenty-four tons of bombs were dropped on different targets, including important railway stations at Tournay, Marcoing, Chaulnes, and Cambrai, and billets at Carvin, Péronne, and Chipilly, and the docks at Zeebrugge.

Fighting in the air was more or less continuous, and it was particularly fierce toward dusk. Twenty-seven German machines were downed, twelve were driven down out of control, and four hostile observation balloons were destroyed. Six of our machines are missing.

During the night four and one-half tons of bombs were dropped on the docks and at the entrance of the canal at Ostend and three and one-half tons on Péronne, Chaulnes, and Bapaume. All of the machines returned.

The statement dealing with operations yesterday, reads:

Low clouds and mist prevented flying on Friday until 5 P. M. After this hour the weather cleared on a small part of the front and great aerial activity took place in this sector until dark.

Over fourteen tons of bombs were dropped on Peronne, Bapatume, Thielt, Doual, Zeezrugge, and the docks of Bruges.

Hostile scouts were very active and made repeated attacks on our bombing machines. Eight German airplanes were brought down in air fighting and six were driven down out of control. Nine of our machines are missing. One reported missing on Tuesday has returned.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 11, (Associated Press.)—There has been much air fighting in the last few days, and the British airmen have sustained the great reputation established early in the war. Scores of battles might be recounted in which the British airmen triumphed over larger numbers of the adversary.

Several days ago near Ypres a British machine attacked five Germans single handed. The Britisher fought one of the enemy until he turned tail and fled. He then went after another German, and pressed the attack so hard that the enemy was forced into a nose spin in an attempt to escape. The ruse was futile, however, for the Britisher followed him down, firing steadily into the German machine with his machine gun until the latter turned on its back and fell, plummetlike.

Another British plane was attacked by six enemy machines, which came at it from below and behind. The British observer opened fire at close range, riddling the leading German machine, which dived and then burst into flames. The British pilot got away safely.

In addition to destroying eight of the twenty German airplanes, which, as related yesterday, were engaged Tuesday by two British machines, the British aviators sent down five others damaged. The battle began when the British aviators attacked seven German planes. Two other enemy formations came up, raising the total of German machines to twenty, but instead of retiring the two British fighters pressed the attack.

In and out among the enemy force these airplanes, with their crews, swirled and charged, working their rapid fires like mad. One Britisher got on the tail of a big German machine and riddled it with bullets. The enemy airplane hung quivering in the air for a moment and then, turning its nose toward the earth, crashed down with sheets of flame bursting from it.

The seven other German machines were shot to pieces in succession, and took the final plunge, three leaving a wake of fire and black smoke to tell the story of the fate suffered by the men strapped in their seats. The five other enemy machines, forced to abandon the fight because of their crippled condition, were seen to dive away in the hope of reaching the ground safely.

Thirty minutes had sufficed for the two British machines to accomplish all this. Only seven of the twenty enemy planes remained in the air. The British had used up all their ammunition in the mêlée, however, and they withdrew in safety.

But fighting planes are not the only ones that have been busy. The British bombing squadrons have been active destroying railroads, billets, ammunition dumps, and bombing enemy troops and transports. Tons of high explosives have been dropped among masses of the enemy at night, causing heavy casualties. The British machines also have been employed constantly in attacking the infantry from low altitudes with machine guns, and in many cases much slaughter has resulted.

The artillery planes have been doing invaluable service directing the fire of British guns, and this represents one of the most important phases of the duties of the air corps.

FRENCH DEPUTIES GREET LABOR MEN

Premier Clemenceau in Chamber to Welcome Americans Before They Leave for England.

EDITOR PRAISES MISSION

Has Done More to Save France Than a Whole Army at the Front, Says Loyson.

Paul Hyacinthe Loyson, son of "Pere Hyacinthe" and editor of The Rights of Man, has written the following for The Associated Press concerning the American labor delegation with which he visited the French front:

"In sending over this delegation as much has been done for the salvation of France as by Secretary Baker in dispatching a whole army to our front.

"Never have our men been in such high spirit since 1914, but allowance must be made for a certain nervous strain at the rear as a consequence of forty-six months of war. Moreover, this natural phenomenon has been deliberately exploited by a small number of perverted persons, who advocate a patched-up peace."

LONDON, May 11.—The American labor delegation, which has been visiting Paris, arrived here today.

The members of the mission have prepared to hold several mass meetings at industrial centres in England during the early part of next week. After finishing their labors on Wednesday, they will be received by the King, and be dined by the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday.

The delegates are elated over their reception in France, and the privileges extended to them by British and French officers at the front. They believe that an explanation to the masses of what America is doing in the war will result in a more pronounced spirit of co-operation among workers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A diplomatic dispatch from Paris today relative to the visit of the American Labor Mission says:

The Amsterdam mission left Paris yesterday. The last day was marked by a series of striking events, when the representatives of both nations had the opportunity of expressing forcibly their sentiments of unity and their inflexible will. The French press emphasizes the importance of this brotherly meeting. L'Homme Libre says:

"France yesterday fêted at her capital the American mission. At the Quay d'Orsay, the Hotel de Ville, the Palais Bourbon, the delegation from the great sister republic came in touch with Paris, the heart of France, with her Government, and her Parliament.

"The day before and two days earlier the mission had seen in line facing the enemy the magnificent armies of the Entente. It returned deeply stirred by the finish of the troops when it had been led amid so much heroism and glory to the temples now made immortal by [illegible] that [illegible] Teutonic barbarism has forever set its shameful mark, which Serapis is irretrievably our great allies enlisted Rheims and Verdun the unrivaled testimony of resistance and endurance of our poilus, the living and victorious heroes.

"They saluted the unity of the Entente, the unity of will, the unity of abnegation, of our France, mangled, but never so proud. Here are all our social classes, all our national forces melted into a single mass, a single force, which greeted the representatives of all social classes of the national forces equally united of the young and powerful America."

Before leaving James Wilson made a statement which The Echo de Paris sums up in these words:

"We, the representatives of the great labor movement of America, ask the workmen of France and of all the allied countries to persevere in their resolution to continue the war in its branches—military, economic, and moral—until the desires of the Governments and nations are fulfilled. Together we shall win this struggle, which has been forced upon us body and soul. All our efforts shall be doubled to this task."

At the end of the dinner, which was given Friday evening, Abbe Vetterle, Deputy from Alsace-Lorraine in the Reichstag, voiced the sentiments of the conquered provinces. After having explained why the Alsace-Lorrainers did not want an plebiscite, which would be a recognition of the right of conquest, Abbe Vetterle added: "We are happy, knowing that American troops are facing Strassburg. When we shall have regained our Alsace, we shall inscribe on the same banner, 'Vive Alsace-Lorraine! Viva L'Amerique Liberatrice!'" easily be a repetition of the "Sicilian vespers."

ALL GERMANS LAUD RUMANIAN TREATY

Both Centre speakers said that their party must reject all responsibility for the proceedings in Ukraine and elsewhere, and Dr. Erzberger demanded the publication of that part of the Brest-Litovsk treaty which was still kept secret.

Haase, Independent Socialist, put forward a demand for the withdrawal of German troops from Ukraine.

To these criticisms the Government returned no reply.

The debate, in short, shows the hopeless muddle of the whole situation, caused by the complete abdication of the Government to the military authorities.

I learn that serious fear is evident in Berlin political circles regarding the safety of considerable sections of the German troops, the strength of which is not great, and the lines of communication of which are very long. It is clear that the ill-will of the populations being ground down and exploited by the military goes on increasing, a fact which the German censor is careful to conceal.

GEN. RENNENKAMPFF SLAIN?

Berlin Hears Russian Commander Was Murdered by Bolsheviki.

COPENHAGEN, May 11. — General Rennenkampff, a Russian commander in the Japanese and present wars, has been murdered by the Bolsheviki at Taganrog, Southern Russia, according to the Social Democrat of Berlin.

In the Japanese war General Rennenkampff commanded a Cossack cavalry division. He was a well-known figure as Governor General of Trans-Dakalia. In 1914 he gained successes against the Germans in Poland and East Prussia, only to be defeated by Field Marshal von Hindenburg. In 1915 he was placed on the retired list, and in June, 1917, was arrested by the Provisional Government for offenses against the Government and interned in the Fortress of St. Peter and St. Paul.

BAVARIAN CAVALRY FOR THE UKRAINE

the Government was compelled to protest against the brutal methods marking the arrest of members of the Chamber.

Another article reports that the First Division of the Ukrainian Army, which has been stationed at Kovel, has been disarmed by the Germans because of anti-German feeling among the troops. This development is of particular interest in view of the fact that the First Division was composed largely of former prisoners of war, who, after having been thoroughly dosed with propaganda in German and Austrian prison camps, had been released after peace had been made with the Ukraine so that they might return home and form the nucleus of a new Ukrainian army that was to co-operate with the troops of the Central Powers.

FINNS ON THE ARCTIC.

Said to Have Seized Boris-Gleb, on the Edge of Norway.

STOCKHOLM, May 11.—It is reported from Kirkenes that a small detachment of Finnish Government troops has arrived at Boris-Gleb and hoisted the Finnish flag, declaring the district Finnish territory.

Boris-Gleb, which lies on the west bank of the Pasvik River, is only about a square kilometer in extent and is almost entirely surrounded by Norwegian territory. It was reserved to Russia under the border regulation treaty of 1826. If the occupation is maintained, and if the Finns can establish communication from the Finnish border to Boris-Gleb they will have access to the Arctic Ocean.

The region to which the above dispatch refers lies to the north of Lake Ensra and south of Varanger Fjord. Boris-Gleb is seven miles south of Kirkenes, which is situated on a headland of Varanger Fjord. In the past Kirkenes has been reached during the Summer by a steamer sailing twice a week from Vadso, Norway.

COPENHAGEN, May 11.—It is reported from Helsingfors that the Finnish Landag will be summoned for May 15, the same day that General Mannerheim, Commander of the Government forces, will make a solemn entry into the city. There are now only ten of the Socialist members of the Landag at the capital, the others having been killed or captured, or having escaped to Russia. The Government has demanded that fifty of them be returned from Russia for punishment.

The general opinion in Helsingfors is that the offensive against Russian Karelia and Petrograd will be abandoned.

CITES OUTRAGES IN UKRAINE.

Scheidemann Demands Disclaimers from Berlin Government.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The manner in which German officers and troops treated the members of the Ukrainian Ministry and members of the Rada has been exposed in the Reichstag by Philip Scheidemann, the Socialist leader. Although Germany and the Ukraine are on terms of peace, the Rada was dispersed by military force and members of both the Ministry and the Rada were arrested.

This treatment of their governing bodies aroused the Ukrainian people, and "disorders" occurred, according to the German official report, which says also that "the country is threatened with anarchy." The German Minister to the Ukraine promised to inform Berlin, but apparently nothing has been done by the Imperial Government to remedy the violation of neutral rights.

Detailed information of what occurred has been received by the State Department in a cable dispatch. The dispatch said that Vorwärts, the leading Socialist newspaper of Berlin, said in its issue of May 7 that in the Reichstag Main Committee Herr Ebert complained of "the entirely inadequate reports published of debates on affairs in the Ukraine," asserting that they only misled the public, all the more so since the censor forbade any reports on the action taken against the Rada. The committee then voted to raise the injunction of secrecy on debates, and Herr Scheidemann read in committee the following official report, dated April 26:

"Yesterday at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the building in which the Central Rada sits was surrounded by men in the uniform of German officers and soldiers, and members of the Central Rada, as well as members of the Government who were assembled for the session of the Rada, were searched and arrested. Those present were ordered to hold up their hands. Their treatment was rough and discourteous. The protest of the President of the Central Rada, Professor Hruschevsky, against the arrest of members of Parliament in the Parliament Building was disregarded. More than this, physical force was used against Professor Hruschevsky during the search. All private papers and documents of the Central Rada were taken away from Professor Hruschevsky, and the search lasted three and a half hours. Without any warrants of any sort being shown, the following Ministers were arrested: Minister of the Interior Tkatschenko, Minister of Foreign Affairs Lubinsky, Minister of War Schukovsky, and Director of the Political Administrative Department Kajevsky.

"The German Minister, Baron Munim, was informed of what had happened, and asked whether the case was known to him. As representative of a State friendly to the Ukraine, the Minister was requested to inform the German Government. The Ukrainian Government filed a decided protest against such conduct with the German Minister, and pointed out the serious consequences to which such interference might lead. The German Minister promised to inform his Government of the events, and remarked that what had taken place in the Central Rada was unknown to him. At 8:30 in the evening the Ukrainian Minister-President was notified by the German Consul General that the statement of the Ukrainian Government had been transmitted to Berlin. Other members of the Central Rada and the Government protested similarly against this interference in the internal affairs of the republic, against the violation of the Constitution, of international law, and the usages of nations. The report spread like lightning throughout the Ukraine. Disorders are reported from various localities, so that the country is threatened with anarchy."

Herr Scheidemann closed his speech by advising the German Government not to continue to play the part of a figurehead. If it were not in agreement with occurrences in the east, it should openly place responsibility upon those who were to blame, he said

ITALIANS TAKE A HEIGHT ON THE PIAVE FRONT

Storm Monte Corno and Capture 100 Prisoners and Two Cannon.

ROME, May 11. — Italian troops stormed Monte Corno, on the Piave front, and took about 100 prisoners, two guns, and four machine guns, on Thursday night, according to an official statement issued by the War Office, which says:

In the Vallarsa Thursday night, after brisk fighting, light detachments of our infantry stormed the strongly organized height of Monte Corno, capturing about 100 prisoners, two guns, four machine guns, and some war supplies.

Several patrol encounters occurred yesterday in the Concalaghi, Frenzela, and Ornic Valleys. The enemy left prisoners in our hands.

There was intense aircraft activity. One of our airships dropped a ton of bombs on the Mattarello railway station. Three hostile airplanes were brought down and one Drachen was set afire by British airmen.

BERLIN SAYS LANSING TRIED TO FOOL SWISS

Calls Dispatch on Grain Shipments "Most Malignant Attempt to Distort Truth."

CHARGES HOLDUP OF FOOD

Alleges German Plan for Rationing Switzerland by Safeguards for Ship Service.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—Semi-official comment on Secretary Lansing's telegram to the Swiss Government on May 6, which has been received here from Berlin, terms the telegram a most malignant attempt to distort the truth for the purpose of throwing the blame on Germany if the United States Government fails to keep its promise to Switzerland.

The American Government is accused of holding up five Dutch ships laden with food for Switzerland for months, and finally requisitioning them. The semi-official comment continues that the American Government then suggested that these ships might be permitted to sail, but only under the American flag. The Swiss Government requested Germany to grant safe conduct despite the enemy flag. The German naval authorities opposed this, but proposed provisioning Switzerland by safeguarding for the entire duration of the war special shipping service ships which should be protected as much as possible from incidents with the German naval forces by a distinguishing mark. They could not guarantee, however, that orders would immediately reach all naval forces and pointed out the danger of an unfortunate incident in the first three months.

The Swiss Agency announced, accordingly, on April 23, that the American Government had agreed to the flying of the Swiss flag beside the American flag. The American Government would, therefore, no longer have any ground to fail to fulfill its promises to supply food.

In order to withhold from Switzerland its purchased supplies, the statement continues, and use them in France for Entente purposes, fables about the German blockade are told. Vessels are sent from Atlantic ports under the escort of warships, danger of their being destroyed by German forces being thus created. Besides preventing the permanent provisioning of Switzerland independently of the Entente nations, the posibility is thus created of an incident with which to inflame the Swiss people with the story that the German naval authorities prevented the provisioning of Switzerland.

The telegram from Secretary of State Lansing referred to above was handed to the Swiss Government by Pleasant A. Stovall, American Minister, on May 6. It stated that the United States Government would send food ships to Europe with provisions for Switzerland in spite of the operations of the German submarines, and that the German demand that a period of three months be fixed before the shipments started would be disregarded.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 11.—The United Railways Company of St. Louis was granted the right to charge a 6-cent street car fare in that city by the State Public Service Commission today. APPROVE HEALTH PROMISES

Gorgas Tells Copeland Specialists Are Necessary to His Department.

Letters from Surgeon Gen. W. G. Gorgas of the army and Lieutenant F. J. Osborne of the Sanitary Corps of the army, congratulating Dr. Royal C. Copeland, Health Commissioner, on his announced desire to keep the Health Department efficient, have been received by Dr. Copeland.

Surgeon Gen. Gorgas said he was pleased to hear from Dr. Copeland that the policy of the department would be to maintain the highest standards for health conditions in New York. Lieutenant Osborne said he was gratified to learn of the prompt action taken by the Health Department in carrying out the provisions regarding persons suffering from a specific disease. The letter of Dr. Gorgas follows:

War Department.
Office of the Surgeon General,
Washington.

Royal S. Copeland, M. D., Department of Health, 139 Centre Street, New York, N. Y.:

My Dear Sir: I am pleased to learn that the policy of the New York Department of Health will be to make every effort to maintain its past traditions of efficiency. This is an era for specially trained service in preventive and progressive medicine. To meet the needs of modern municipal health administration it is absolutely essential that highly qualified and especially trained men and women in preventive medicine and sanitation shall conduct the specialized work.

Accept my congratulations for your stated endeavor to maintain the highest standard for health conditions in New York City.

Very sincerely yours,
W. C. GORGAS,
Surgeon General, U. S. Army.

In part Lieutenant Osborne's letter said:

It is gratifying to note that a simple letter calling your attention to the problem and the possible lines of co-operation was all that was necessary to set in motion the whole municipal machinery—health, police, and court.

May I take this opportunity of congratulating you for the promptness with which this work has been put in operation and to express my appreciation for the interest and effectiveness displayed by Dr. Harris in this same respect?

I shall be glad to confer with you or with any other persons connected with this effort at any time.

Commissioner Copeland wrote to Corporation Counsel Burr on Friday requesting that the charges in the case of Lucius P. Brown, the suspended Director of the Bureau of Food and Drugs, be accelerated so that Mr. Brown may have a speedy trial. The Commissioner assured the members of the Labor League, who called on him, that he would continue the work along the lines of industrial hygiene.

It was announced yesterday that application to keep cows from resident of sparsely settled parts of Richmond will be received at the Department of Health.

MEMORIAL DAY AT FRONT.

French Will Join Americans in Decorating Soldiers' Graves.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 11, (Associated Press.)—The French are preparing to join the Americans in the observance of Memorial Day. American graves scattered here and there behind the fighting front, with their simple wooden crosses, will be decorated by the comrades in arms of the fallen.

It will have a new significance on this side of the ocean, as it will be the first time that American Memorial Day will have been observed in a foreign land.

PLEA TO BAR GERMAN IN THE HIGH SCHOOLS

Dr. Tildsley Proposes That No More Classes in Language Be Formed.

WILL HAVE STRONG SUPPORT

Resolution to be Considered by the Superintendents of Schools at Their Meeting on Friday.

Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Public High Schools, yesterday submitted to the Board of Superintendents of Schools a resolution proposing that no more classes in German shall be organized in the high schools after the close of the present school year. The resolution, said to be strongly supported for adoption, will come before the next meeting of the Superintendents' Board, tentatively set for next Friday. Educators attending the regular meeting of the New York Association of High School Teachers of German in Washington Irving High School, Irving Place and Fifteenth Street, yesterday manifested considerable interest in the projected elimination of German. The general impression among the delegates seemed to be that if German is voted out of the city, the State will take like action, thereby exerting a strongly adverse influence on the national teaching of German.

The principal paper read at the meeting was offered by Dr. Wheelock, Acting State Commissioner of Education, and dealt from many fresh angles with the modern language situation. In a paper entitled "Damming German," Dr. William R. Price, State Inspector of Modern Languages, presented a symposium on whether German should stay or go. The results of the symposium indicated that while some teachers in the State were in favor of dropping the language altogether, the majority favored its retention on academic grounds.

The Brooklyner Freie Presse, the only daily published in German in Brooklyn, issued its last paper yesterday. An editorial stated that the newspaper would cease publication because "it is its conviction that by so doing it will better serve the unity and homogeneity of the country's population." In a parting word of advice to its readers the Freie Presse said:

"One of the most drastic measures is just about to become a law. It prescribes heavy punishment for disloyal acts and remarks. It prohibits every unjustand scurrilous criticism and limits the freedom of speech. This measure is an impressive admonition of the earnestness of the hour and an appeal to reason and conscience.

"May our readers always keep that in memory and be guided in their doing and thinking. With all our powers and with the best motives we have lately endeavored to alleviate these conditions for our readers. There is only one leading thought today. Whatever one does shall be done for the best of the country. With this in mind we will today say farewell to our readers."

BIG WOODEN SHIP LAUNCHED

City of Bonham Is One of the Largest of Her Kind Ever Planned.

ORANGE, Texas, May 11.—The City of Bonham, one of the largest wooden ships ever planned, was launched successfully here this afternoon. The vessel is 320 feet long and 47 feet wide. It was designed by A. A. Daugherty, whose plans have been accepted as a model by the United States Shipping Board.

URGES METHODIST UNITY.

Daniels Points to Step Taken by Allied Armies as an Example.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 11.—Secretary Daniels, speaking tonight before the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, urged all branches of American Methodists to unite into "one mighty army of militant Methodists."

Reciting how the recent unity of command in the allied armies in France had mobilized the forces of civilization into one invincible army to meet the Prussian onslaught, the Secretary of the Navy asked if this wise action did not afford a convincing reason why American Methodists should do likewise and gain strength and solidarity "in the onward movement of their mighty Christian arm."

"In this supreme hour," continued the Secretary, "when sectionalism has blossomed into national unity, and love of the Republic has broadened to make possible freedom and democracy of all nations, the supreme duty of Methodists, North and South, is to make any and all sacrifices that may be necessary to mobilize Methodists into one mighty church. There is no excuse for a Northern Methodist Church in Atlanta or a Southern Methodist Church in Seattle. If politicians and business men have forgotten there was a Mason and Dixon's line, the Methodist churches cannot wisely longer march in separate columns under separate organizations."

Secretary Daniels denied that this war showed that Christian civilization has failed. "It alone is the star of hope," he said. "A study of Prussianism discloses that in that country the State had usurped the place of God and that spiritualism had given place to materialism. No people could wantonly wage war for spoils who had not repudiated the teachings of Jesus Christ."

BUSINESS WOMEN AID.

Y. W. C. A. Plans Organization to Help Inexperienced Girls Get Jobs.

A national organization whose purpose will be to mobilize business women with the definite aim of training inexperienced girls to fill positions left vacant by men going to war was formed yesterday at a meeting of representatives of business and professional women from all over the country meeting with the War Work Council of the National Board, Young Woman's Christian Association, at the latter's headquarters, 600 Lexington Avenue. This was the first of a two-days' conference called by the board, which is financing the expense of the visiting delegation, as it desired to get the opinion of these women of the business world on the situation.

Miss Florence Simms, Industrial Secretary of the Y. W. C. A., said that there were 9,000,000 business women in the United States who should be interested, and Miss Florence Spencer of the National City Bank said that the business women of the country wished to serve as a group, not as individuals.

A committee was appointed to draft plans for the new organization. Miss Mary Johns Hopper of the Provident Life and Trust Company was made Chairman; Miss Lena M. Phillips, Executive Secretary for the business and professional women, who is a practicing attorney of Louisville, Ky., will draft the plans and the reports will be heard this afternoon. Plans will be on broad lines enabling Protestants, Roman Catholics and Jews to co-operate in the direction of the new organization. Miss Ethel Bagley, a sister of Mrs. Josephus Daniels, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was one of the delegates present.

FRANKFURTER'S NEW POST.

Harvard Man Appointed Administrator of War Labor Activities.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Felix Frankfurter of Harvard University was appointed by the Secretary of Labor today as Administrator of War Labor Activities.

The creation of the office is designed to bring under central control the labor activities of all Government departments having to do with the production of war materials. Mr. Frankfurter will co-ordinate the industrial sections of the War and Navy Departments, the Shipping Board, the Department of Agriculture, and the War Industries Board. Heretofore all of these departments have acted independently in obtaining their labor supply and in making wage awards.

Mr. Frankfurter has been serving as assistant to the Secretary of War. He recently returned from England and France, where he studied war labor activities.

He said today that the new office would work for uninterrupted maximum production, and would also attempt to distribute adequately the country's labor supply to meet the needs of war industries.

"Steps will at once be taken by the Government as employer, through whatever department it may be operating, toward uniformity of treatment so as to secure stability of conditions and therefore the needed production," he said. "I shall have the benefit of the experience and support of the able industrial services of the different departments of the Government. All are agreed on the end to be attained—maximum production under the fairest conditions—which alone will insure the quickest winning of the war."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The members of the Policies Board of the War Labor Administration, over which Mr. Frankfurter will preside, will be Stanley King, representing the War Department; Franklin D. Roosevelt, representing the Navy Department; Dr. C. L. Marshal, representing the Shipping Board; Hugh Frayne, representing the War Industries Board, and William H. Taft and Frank P. Walsh, representing the War Labor Board.

MAKES PUBLIC GERMAN LIE.

State Department Gives Out Reports of Insubordination in Camps Here.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A German wireless message saying that grave insubordination is a daily occurrence in American Army training camps was made public today by the State Department as an illustration of the lengths to which the German Government is going in an effort to keep up the spirits of the civil population. The message, which was sent out May 9, and which was given out by the State Department without comment, said:

"According to information from Christiania, Norwegians recently arrived from America say that grave cases of insubordination occur daily in American training camps. At first, breaches of discipline were punished by death, but this was stopped owing to the number of cases. In a particularly flagrant instance all the soldiers in a camp acted collectively, and obtained not only immunity for the mutineers but punishment for all officers. Furthermore, much damage to works and material is being done."

German wireless messages are sent out for circulation in neutral countries and for the information of German diplomatic representatives abroad. Officials have no doubt that the foregoing statement was given general circulation throughout Germany, as well as in Austria-Hungary.

TO HEAD MARINES IN FRANCE

Gen. Lejeune Ordered Abroad to Succeed Gen. Doyen, Who Is Ill.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Brig. Gen. John Lejeune has been ordered to France to command the brigade of marines there, succeeding Brig. Gen. Charles A. Doyen, invalided home. In the interim the brigade will be in command of Brig. Gen. James G. Harbord, who has been a member of General Pershing's staff.

General Lejeune has been in charge of the marine training camp at Quantico, Va. He will be succeeded there by Colonel Smedley D. Butler, who commanded the marines in Haiti during the recent disorders there. General Lejeune has been mentioned as prospective commander of the full division of marines to be organized in France.

KING REVIEWS AMERICAN TROOPS

the Queen Victoria Memorial, and away on either flank spread other great crowds up to the borders of the parks. Then in front of the palace gates were the King and the Duke of Connaught, with the two Queens and a little group of royalties behind them.

As the head of the column appeared the Guards' band struck up a lively march and the King returned the salute of Colonel Whitman. He passed and then, coming back to the reviewing point, was presented by General Biddle to the King, Queen Mary, and Queen Alexandra. He took his stand between the King and the Duke of Connaught, and was kept busy answering their comments as the men swept by. They marched well and briskly, with a more elastic step than the British bands which accompanied them, and their equipment called forth favorable comment. It seemed less cumbersome and better distributed than the cumbersome packs of the British Tommy, and was certainly far more sightly. Some doubt, however, was expressed as to their boots, and officers who knew what campaigning in France was were even inclined to wonder if they were heavy enough.

King Returns Salutes.

To every officer the King returned a salute punctiliously, and as the Stars and Stripes went by he came stiffly to attention. At last the long column had all filed past, and the King turned and complimented Colonel Whitman on the excellent impression his men had made. He then brought the ceremony to a close by inspecting the Guard of Honor, and the Colonel talked to Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra while that was in progress.

From the palace the troops proceeded to the United States Embassy, where they passed before Ambassador Page. Then they marched back to Wellington Barracks for an al fresco meal before they set off for their trains. For an hour or more they were in possession of the barracks yard and lined the railing to chat with crowds who gathered to speculate on the men from across the sea. A few of the men were of red Indian blood, and they particularly attracted attention.

There were many requests for buttons and souvenirs, and many chaffing remarks were exchanged. Soon after 3 o'clock the march to the railway station began amid even denser crowds than before. It was a half holiday and a beautiful afternoon, so that Westminster Bridge and all approaches to the station were packed with people who showed by their cheers how fine an impression the American troops had made.

Troops From New York City.

LONDON, May 11, (Associated Press.)—Troops of the national army of the United States arrived in London this morning for a parade through the principal streets of the city. There was a regiment of three battalions in line.

The Americans, who were practically all from New York City, marched in columns of fours from Wellington Barracks over a three-mile route, circling that part of London in which are situated the Government offices, the embassies, and the principal public buildings.

With American preciseness the parade kept exactly to the time-table which was laid out for it by the British and American military authorities. The first men filed out of the parade ground at Wellington Barracks into the famous Birdcage Walk at exactly 11:45, passed the War Office at 12:15, the United States Embassy at 12:45, and reached Buckingham Palace at 1:05.

The American troops came through the archway of the Horseguards Parade into Whitehall to begin the march through the West End streets and thence to the embassy and Buckingham Palace. Members of the War Cabinet, including Premier Lloyd George, Chancellor Bonar Law, Viscount Milner, and J. Austen Chamberlain, came out on the balcony at the War Office and watched the scene with interest. When the American flag was carried past Mr. Lloyd George led in the cheers, which were taken up by other members of the War Cabinet and the people in the streets.

Message From the King.

On arriving at Wellington Barracks at Hyde Park each American soldier received a personal message from the King. The envelope bore the royal arms and these words: "A message to you from his Majesty, King George V." The message was on the note paper of Windsor Castle, and was written in fac simille of the King's handwriting. It was as follows:

"Soldiers of the United States, the people of the British Isles welcome you on your way to take your stand beside the armies of the many nations now fighting in the Old World the great battle for human freedom.

"The Allies will gain new heart and spirit in your company. I wish I could shake hands with each one of you and bid you Godspeed on your mission."

The route of march through London was past the British Admiralty, the British War Office, the United States Embassy, the American Navy Headquarters, the American Army Headquarters, the American Red Cross and American Nurses' Home, and Buckingham Palace for the march past King George and General Biddle, U. S. N. A., commanding the American forces in the United Kingdom.

Ambassador Page reviewed the troops from a point just in front of the embassy steps. To his right and left and slightly behind him were Vice Admiral Sims and Colonel Slocum and a detachment of United States troops, as an embassy guard. The troops moved in columns of fours, taking about twenty-five minutes to pass.

The embassy staff viewed the parade from the windows of the building, where also were stationed many Americans, men and women, identified with the war work. Among them were Miss Mabel Boardman of the American Red Cross and Bishop Brent, both just back from France, and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, widow of the Ambassador.

Applaud Baker's Statement.

Secretary Baker's statement that more than 500,000 men are now in France has much prominence in the press and is cordially commented on. The Daily Telegraph describes America's effort as a wonderful feat apart from other vast work of its war organization. It recalls the German sneers at America's efforts and says that when Secretary Baker's announcement leaks out in Germany the public there will realize, in this as in many other matters, that they had been grossly deceived by their rulers.

The Daily Mail says that if anything is needed to add to the heartiness of the greeting awaiting the American troops in London today it is supplied by Secretary Baker's announcement. "The dispatch of a half million men is really a great achievement, the Mail says, and adds:

"America has had immense and unlooked-for difficulties to contend with. She hasn't overcome all of them, but is fast getting the better of them. There is very much to be done before America's weight is fully felt, but the Government and people of the United States are sparing nothing that will enable them to do it."

"We hope London will give our blood brothers a big welcome," says The Daily Express. "There is no need of half-hearted enthusiasm about the fruits of the American alliance, and we utterly deprecate the impatience that would rush the great American effort before it comes to full preparedness. Feverish haste was not Lincoln's note in the war between the North and the South. For nearly two years the South had things all its own way, but all the time the North was doggedly preparing the implacable forces to which the chivalrous Lee ultimately surrendered."

No Mere Units in a Machine.

The Times says: "The King's letter symbolizes the spirit in which the American soldiers enter their warfare. Every individual is animated by conviction. They are no mere units in a war machine."

The Star says of today's ceremonies:

"London is giving the Americans a right real London welcome. She is cheering the tall lads, who have come three, or four, or five thousand miles to help our brave lads in this struggle. London is a shy old lady, but today she is throwing her bonnet in the air. She is not staring at the American boys, like a stepmother; she is taking them into her arms, like a mother. Their own mothers will be comforted when they hear how London has hugged these gallant American boys.

"Nothing is too good for them. We must all get busy, so that every American boy in every camp will feel that this is his second home, every British mother his mother, every British girl his sister."

"All our people," the Westminster Gazette says, "will echo the message of welcome to the United States troops which the King has written. The departure from precedent which is involved in writing the letter is welcome in the humanity of its touch. The German calculation that the operations of submarines would prevent America from playing an effective part on the Continent of Europe has proved not the least of the blunders Germany has made since the war began.

"Americans are already giving substantial aid to the Allies, and before long will stand in France as a completely organized army of such formidable dimensions as should give the Allies an advantage in numbers of which nothing can deprive them."

AMERICANS DUBBED "HUSKIES" IN LONDON

New Name Takes Popular Fancy as Our Troops March Through Capital's Streets.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 11.—Lloyd's Weekly says: "London has found a new name for the American soldiers who paraded her streets yesterday. 'They're a husky lot,' said one or two Americans in the crowd to each other, and the word quickly caught on. 'Bravo, the huskies!' 'Cheer-o, the huskies!' the crowd was quickly yelling with the true Londoner's love of a new catchword. 'The huskies! The huskies!' They tossed the word from one bunch of people to another all the way along the route from Waterloo to Wellington Barracks and it broke out again later among people standing three or four deep along Picadilly and among dense masses of people who were awaiting the culmination of the march in front of Buckingham Palace, where the King took a salute from the soldiers of freedom.

"The crowd which watched their progress along the streets seemed to be touched by some feeling that these boys took their mission very seriously. There were great bursts of cheering, of course, but for the most part the welcome by the people of London was shown in ways less spectacular, perhaps, than the frenzied waving of flags and sticks, although there was plenty of that also. Women in the welcoming crowds seemed specially touched by the youth and solemn bearing of the boys who passed along to music of their own and English regimental bands. 'God bless you,' they softly said; and, if many of the whispered benedictions did not come to the ears of the soldiers they were meant for, they seemed to sense a special friendliness of the crowd. They smiled as they passed along and reserved special friendliness for bunches of shill-voiced children who waved miniature Stars and Stripes almost in their faces wherever they could momentarily evade the watchfulness of not too stern police.

"It was a great day for London, a still further cementing of the alliance between the peoples of Britain and America."

BURLESON AND CREEL REPLY TO ROOSEVELT

Postmaster General Declares Colonel Has Failed to Back Up His Charges.

SAYS HE OBSCURES ISSUE

Chairman Creel Gives Out Copy of a Letter He Wrote to the Editor of The Metropolitan.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Both Postmaster General Burleson and George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, came back today at Colonel Roosevelt for his statement published this morning accusing the Post Office Department of animosity toward publications that criticised the Administration while upholding the war and failing to punish publications that directly or indirectly aided Germany because they were friendly to the Administration, also taking Mr. Creel to task for having attacked the Metropolitan Magazine and Collier's Weekly.

Mr. Burleson gave to the press a brief statement indicating that Colonel Roosevelt had failed to make good his promise to back up his prior charge of the treatment accorded publications that failed to support the Administration in contrast with the treatment accorded those that were friendly to the Administration. Mr. Creel's response was in the form of a letter that he had written some time ago to the editor of The Metropolitan, who had taken him to task for critical comment on editorial matter relating to the conduct of the war.

Says Colonel Obscured Issue.

Mr. Burleson's statement was as follows:

"It is not surprising that Colonel Roosevelt is dissatisfied with his first attempt to support the truthfulness of his charges against the Post Office Department, and, recognizing it will prove disappointing, promises another effort by the way of the extension of his remarks in the Congressional Record. It may be a helpful suggestion to him if in his second reply he does not attempt to obscure the issue by dragging in any more irrelevant and extraneous matter. Neither Mr. Creel nor the officials of the Department of Justice had aught to do with the serious charges laid at the door of the Post Office Department. I await his final effort to prove his accusations against me."

Mr. Creel is in New York, but he telephoned from there to the Committee on Public Information to give to the press a letter that he had written some time ago to the editor of The Metropolitan, who had criticised Mr. Creel in a letter to the latter which had been published in newspapers. Mr. Creel's letter follows:

Washington, D. C.

H. G. Whigham, editor of The Metropolitan Magazine, New York, N. Y.

My dear Mr. Whigham: As you gave your letter to the press almost before its receipt by me, I assume that your purpose was publicity rather than any real desire to ascertain my point of view. There were, however, certain paragraphs that are entitled to decisive answer.

The Metropolitan said that Mr. Garfield had "no knowledge of coal mining or coal distribution, and no executive experience whatever." We quoted his record to show that he had had experience in coal mining and coal distribution, and that he had had executive experience. You reply that his "record of eighteen or twenty years ago has nothing to do with the case." We believe it has. Whether he had the knowledge and experience yesterday or eighteen years ago, he had the knowledge and experience. You say his is "a puny record." It is your privilege to think so. We are not trying to correct your judgment, but only your misstatement of fact.

Not Worried About Criticisms.

You ask whether we consider it right to use the appropriation of the committee to defend members of the Administration from criticism. We consider it right to spend that money to defend the Government and its war measures from misstatements that weaken the faith of the nation in the nation's war work. We are not worried about criticisms. We are worried about falsehoods. You are welcome to say what you please in criticism of Mr. Garfield and his fuel order, but as soon as you begin to misinform the public about matters of fact the Committee on Public Information believes it has a right to intrude.

We reply to The Metropolitan for the very reason that we do not reply to anti-war or anti-American papers. They are known to be what they are, but the reputation of The Metropolitan for loyalty gives weight to its misstatements.

We do not believe that this war is entirely The Metropolitan's war. We do not believe it is entirely the Administration's war. We understand that it is the country's. We appreciate your impatience with a country that did not follow you into Belgium in 1914 or set out with you to avenge the Lusitania as soon as it was sunk; and we appreciate your impatience with an Administration which you are always "two years ahead of," as you say. This is doubtless an imperfect world, an imperfect country, an imperfect Administration. All the more reason why The Metropolitan should be perfect. All the more reason why we should correct your most imperfect utterance about Mr. Garfield and his experience.

Can't "Get Together."

The terms on which the Administration "will find no more enthusiastic supporter than The Metropolitan" are difficult terms. The committee has no power to accept them. The question of who are "the best men to prosecute the war in a vigorous fashion" would surely prove perplexing. And your statement that the Administration is conducting "long-distance peace negotiations with Germany" shows how impossible it would be for the Government to make its foreign policy agreeable to the editor of the magazine.

There are still other reasons, however, why we cannot "get together," as you propose, for the purpose of letting "you help to the best of your ability." To be perfectly frank, I do not feel that either The Metropolitan or Collier's Weekly—and I couple them, since both are owned by Mr. Harry Payne Whitney, and have an identic policy—has the slightest desire to be of help except upon their own terms, and that those terms are concerned with political concessions and partisan advantages.

These two periodicals, more than all others, have steadfastly refused to put country above party and patriotism above prejudice. I do not quarrel with your attacks upon men, for that's your privilege, but in these attacks you have not scrupled to sap the people's faith in our institutions.

Both Collier's and The Metropolitan conducted campaigns of extreme violence against Secretary Daniels, giving the impression that the navy of the United States was a junk pile, its personnel demoralized, and its effectiveness destroyed. Today, when these attacks are seen by all men to have been lies, you refuse to rectify these wrongs, and have devoted not one inch of space to chronicling achievements that have made our first line of defense a thing of power.

Your search is never for facts, but always for some confirmation of prejudice. Tremendous achievement goes unnoticed, while you give full space to the petty failure. It is in this permanent emphasis upon the mean and nagging that unfits The Metropolitan and Collier's for patriotic comradeship. Mere protestation that you are "for the war," and have been for it since 1914, will not conceal a record of persistent sabotage. Very truly yours,

GEORGE CREEL, Chairman.

FURLOUGH BILL INTRODUCED

Provides Government Shall Give Soldiers Free Transportation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Representative Mott of New York today introduced a bill granting furloughs to enlisted men to visit their homes, and authorizing the Director General of Railroads to furnish them with free transportation on such furloughs. The bill only applies to men stationed within the United States, and provides that furloughs may be issued at least once a year.

"The main purpose of the bill," Mr. Mott said, "is to enable the men of the national army to visit their homes free of traveling expenses just before leaving for the other side. It is now the practice, wherever possible, to grant such furloughs, but with the wide distribution of men the expense involved is oftentimes prohibitive. The Government now controls the railroads, and free transportation should be furnished, even if it involves expense to the Government.

"It is necessary oftentimes to make the leaves of absence so short that it is a great hardship on the men to pay their expenses out of their pay, which is largely needed for the support of their families and for payments on Liberty bonds, which the soldiers are taking so generally. The nation is dealing so generously with its soldiers that it should not hesitate to enact this law which, in many instances, will give the soldiers an opportunity to pay a last farewell to their families."

GERMAN VIEW OF NEW FOE.

Thinks Guatemala Will Protect Teutons and Their Property.

AMSTERDAM, May 11.—Commenting on the declaration of war by Guatemala, the Norddeutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says that according to a telegram to Berlin, it was declared in Government circles in Guatemala that the breaking off of relations would have no effect on the treatment of Germans settled there, and that no change would occur in this respect, even if it came to the worst. It is expected that this conception still prevails in authoritative circles in Guatemala.

In any event, the German Government will do everything possible to prevent harm being inflicted upon Germans or damage being done German property in Guatemala, and will demand satisfaction for any injuries to German interests there.

READING'S WARNING ON FALSE OPTIMISM

Burke, upon keeping the sovereign authority of the country as the sanctuary of liberty. Under the latter system two great commonwealths have been evolved as steps in the development of the human race upon this earth, the one sprung from the loins of the other, and with all the virility and enthusiasm of its young manhood now fighting alongside of the elder, to vindicate those ideals to which both the British Empire and the American Republic are dedicated.

"There is no essential difference, either of purpose or of principle, between these two great commonwealths. You are a great democracy based upon the principles of justice and liberty, and this is equally true of the British Empire. Were it otherwise it would crumble and die, as have other great empires that preceded it.

"We learned our lesson in the past, and today, wherever the Union Jack flies, it stands for justice and liberty. I would I had time tonight to examine each stone in the mighty fabric tested by your standards. I do not dwell upon the support of the great self-governing dominions like Canada, Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand; these are bound by ties which, though light as gossamer threads, are strong as links of the finest steel ever forged. They are bound to the British Empire by no ties save that of affection; their devotion to the old country in this day of sacrifice is being sealed every hour in their blood. Their loyalty springs from a pride of partnership in a common purpose, as close as that which unites your own States. It is fortified by the conviction that it is in their truest interest and for the benefit of humanity.

"But it is not only the great dominions of the empire that have given such splendid support. India has given proof of her devotion to the empire by her attitude in this time of crisis. To speak only of the last five years, India has assimilated our ideas and awakened politically to western ideals; the efforts made unremittingly by Germany both before and since the war to start disaffection in India have met with failure. The measure of that failure may be judged by the devotion with which the native rulers and their followers rallied to the flag, and by the contributions in men and money made for the furtherance of our country's cause. Perhaps the beneficence of British rule has never been better demonstrated than in Egypt and the Soudan, which has been converted into a prosperous and happy country.

"Whatever criticism may be directed against British rule, it will not, I think, be denied that it is administered throughout its farflung dominions in a spirit of justice to all. This, indeed, is the greatest jewel in its diadem—from it radiates the lustre of civil and religious liberty.

"And so together, you Americans, we British, and our heroic French and other allies, continue on our way, determined that our system shall prevail in the end. There is no room in the world for a military despotism which is a constant menace to and is indeed directed against the rest of the world. But let us beware of a false optimism; therein lies grave danger. The issues are immense and the efforts must be proportionate.

"We must look facts steadily in the face, neither be too elated by a momentary victory nor depressed by a temporary defeat, but keep our attention steadfastly concentrated upon our aim, allowing nothing to deflect us from our purpose, prepared to bring all that may be necessary by way of sacrifice to the altar of our common cause, until the victory of a just and lasting peace has been secured for the benefit of humanity."

CALLS ON NATION TO HONOR MOTHERS

Pray for Them on This, Their Day, Says President, and for Their Fighting Sons.

BAKER'S WORD FROM FRONT

"Our Boys Are Cheerful, Earnest, and Full of Fight," Secretary of War Declares.

DANIELS TO BRAVE MOTHERS

Their Courage Reflected in Their Sons—Messages from Prominent Women.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—A nation's unity tomorrow in reverence and in homage to motherhood was asked tonight by President Wilson in a Mothers' Day message to the American people. The President's message, issued in response to a House resolution, read:

I take the liberty of calling special attention to the fact that this is Mothers' Day, and I take advantage of the occasion to suggest that during this day our attention be directed particularly to the patriotic sacrifices which are being so freely and generously made by the mothers of our land in unselfishly offering their sons to bear arms, and, if need be, to die in defense of liberty and justice, and that we especially remember these mothers in our prayers, praying God for His divine blessing upon them and upon their sons whose whole-hearted service is now given to the country which we love.

Messages to American mothers also were issued by Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of the Navy Daniels, and Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Chairman of the Woman's Committee of the Council of National Defense. Mr. Baker's message read:

To the Mothers of America:

I bring you a message from your boys in France. They are cheerful and earnest and full of fight—as proud of their country as their country is proud of them.

From you they yet draw inspiration, and to you they send a message filled with determination and with hope. They hope to make this war the last war that America will ever have to fight against a military despotism, and they want to fight till that hope has been achieved.

They ask you to be of good cheer, to be with them fondly in your thoughts, and to sustain your hearts in the day of battle as they will sustain theirs. NEWTON D. BAKER.

Following is the message from Secretary Daniels:

To the Mothers of Defenders of Democracy:

The courage of the mothers in the homes is reflected by the bravery of the men at the front. It is always true that the morale of a nation's soldiers and the ideals for which they fight are born in the spiritual heroism of a nation's mothers. Let the nation join in international prayer to all mothers of defenders of democracy to cheer and strengthen them, their sons, and the nation itself to fight to win the fight that must be won.

Our country stands before the world as a nation fighting for the ideals of nations, and the world knows that the mothers of America are sending men of ideals to the front. In that lies our strength. Faith and prayer are the two basic supports of national idealism. International prayer, for all mothers of democracy—there are thirteen millions of them—cannot but aid every soldier in camp or trench as well as strengthen every mother at home. JOSEPHUS DANIELS.

Here is the message from Dr. Shaw:

To the Mothers of the World:

The mothers of the world are one in sacrifice, hope, and pride in their sons and daughters who are serving their country while their sons are on the battleline. The mothers rejoice that they, too, may serve in the same great struggle for justice, and that with every rising and setting sun their prayers of gratitude ascend and their hearts rejoice that they are the mothers of men who hold that honor is more precious than life and that the crowning glories of a nation are justice and mercy. ANNA HOWARD SHAW.

The National Association of Mothers of Defenders of Democracy announced tonight that it had set aside tomorrow as a day of prayer.

"The result desired," said the announcement, "is to cheer, console, and strengthen the hearts of the mothers who have sons in the camp or trench, and to secure through mothers' letters to sons a higher spiritual soldier morale."

CHEER FROM FRENCH MOTHERS

Miss Jarvis Gets Messages from Mmes. Joffre and Poincare.

PHILADELPHIA, May 11.—A tribute from the mothers of France to the mothers of the United States, especially those whose sons are fighting alongside the French and British armies overseas and with the allied naval forces, has been received from Mme. Joffre, wife of the famous French commander, and Mme. Poincaré, wife of the President of France, by Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mothers' Day, which will be celebrated tomorrow.

The letter from Mme. Joffre, sent by Mrs. Hallie Clough Sharp, wife of the American Ambassador to France, to Miss Jarvis, follows:

"To the Mothers of America:

"Our hearts are with yours, American mothers, in this day set apart to consecrate motherly love, and this sweet name of 'mother,' which, together with that of 'father,' is the most beautiful and holy after the name of God.

"At the dawn of this day an intense emotion will thrill you, for your sons will no more ne there with their radiant youth to manifest their respectful devotion. They have left after having received your blessing, accompanied by your heroic smile. They have crossed the ocean to fight gallantly together with our own sons in the gigantic battle which the world is waging for the liberty of humanity.

"Their presence brings to France a new token of the justice of our cause.

"We wish you to feel our maternal hearts beat in unison with yours, notwithstanding the distance—these hearts which are brutalled in such a terrible struggle between our immense tenderness and the sacrifices exacted by the great lawe of conscience and honor.

"At this moment, an everlasting union is sealed between France and the United States. Together our sons are shedding their blood, and we, mothers, accepting their sacrifices, offer the life of our hearts in the same feeling of absolute confidence in victory.

"But it is not only by words, even the most sincere, that we wish to express our affectionate recognition.

"An association has been constituted in Paris to offer to the American Army and Navy the hospitality of our French homes. Our endeavor is to invite honorable French families to open their doors to your sons and procure to them a few days of relaxation, during which they may be surrounded by home atmosphere.

"These relations will establish a better understanding in the future, and they will form friendships and common ties which will bring us closer together.

"We wish to assure you that, during the time your sons remain in France, we will consider it a sacred duty to do everything in our power to comfort them."

The letter from Mme. Poincare, also forwarded by Mrs. Sharp, says:

"At the moment when the United States, true to their very touching custom, are about to celebrate 'Mothers' Day,' allow me to say, in the name of the three societies of the French Red Crose, how earnestly we wish to share in this demonstration of gratitude toward the valiant mothers who have reared the children of noble America, and how deeply our sentimenta are in unison with theirs on this boly occasion. From the very beginning of the war, American mothers, with tender care, sent us their children's toys to serve for our own. Then they themselves came among us and enlisted, in ever growing numbers, in our hospital units. Even before your great country entered the struggle they lavished upon us treasures of devotion and of generosity.

"Now that they are their husbands, their brothers, and their sons cross the ocean to France in order to fight under the Star-Spangled Banner, their courage is put to the severe test which the women of France have experienced during so many months.

"They may rest assured that their dear ones, whom their thoughts are accompanying upon the battlefields, will find here the most cordial of welcomes and the most attentive care.

"I earnestly hope that this assurance may bring comfort to them. In spite of distance, Frenchwomen will henceforth feel that they are near to American women. For both are closely united in the same duties and the same patriotic aspirations.

"This is what the societies of the Red Cross have asked me to tell you today, faithfully interpreting the sentiments which inspire all the women of France."

The Red Cross has arranged to have flowers sent to wounded and sick soldiers in hospitals abroad; the Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish press abroad have united to stimulate observance of the day; American Consulates throughout France and Y. M. C. A. huts along the fighting front will fly the Stars and Stripes in honor of the day; General Pershing has called on all officers and men under his command to write a letter to "those at home," and, meanwhile, letters of cheer and good wishes will be pouring toward the men serving with the colors from thousands of American hearthsides.

SOLDIERS WRITE HOME TODAY.

On This Side, Prayers for Them Will Rise in All Churches.

While today, Mothers' Day, is being observed by international prayer for victory in behalf of the mothers of soldiers and sailors who are risking their lives for democracy, the more than 500,000 men in the American expeditionary forces will pause in their great fight long enough to write a letter to the other American army which serves at home under the service flag. In order that no soldier will neglect to write home, General Pershing has issued the following:

"I wish every officer and soldier in the American expeditionary forces would write a letter home on Mothers' Day. This is a little thing for each one to do, but these letters will carry back our courage and our affection to the patriotic women whose love and prayers inspire us and cheer us on to victory."

The entire forces of the Y. M. C. A. in France have been ordered to lay everything aside today so that the organization's machinery can be concentrated on transmitting the letters. The National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A., at 347 Madison Avenue, estimated that fully a half million letters would be dispatched during the day. From dawn to nightfall, "Y" secretaries will bring stationery up to the front-line trenches and carry back the letters to the postal section, where the missives, marked "Mothers' Mail," will have the right of delivery over all else. Censors have been instructed to work all night, if necessary, to prevent any delay to the mail.

Mother booklets also will be distributed among the men. The pamphlet contains Kipling's "Mother o' Mine," Henry van Dyke's "Prayer for a Mother's Birthday," and a typical letter written by any mother to any soldier.

As part of the celebration of the birth of Joan of Arc France as a nation will join in the observance of Mothers' Day. Special services will be held in the churches overseas, while in this country a message from Mme. Poincaré, wife of the French President, will be read from many pulpits.

At the offices of the National Association for Mothers of Defenders of Democracy, 622 Vanderbilt Avenue, which has organized the observance in this country, it was said yesterday the campaign had been widely successful. Prayers will be offered in practically every church in the country, and at least 77,000,000 persons will participate. Mrs. John R. MacArthur, President of the association, announced the receipt of many letters commending Mothers' Day, among them one from Major Gen. O'Ryan, commanding the 27th Division of former New York National Guardsmen, declaring high home morale and high army morale to be synonymous.

Besides a letter from Harry Lauder telling how high is the honor due the women who give their men to the great cause, the followiug meseage was sent by Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt:

"Four sons in the fighting line are my epistle, written on my heart and read of all men."

In a dispatch from Washington yesterday the Government announced that letters written today in France probably would begin to arrive in this country early next month.

42,000 Soldiers to Pray in Unison.

CAMP SHERMAN, Chillicothe, Ohio, May 11.—Miss Anna Jarvis, founder of Mothers' Day, will be the guest of honor tomorrow at this cantonment, where Ohio and Western Pennsylvania selectmen are in training. She will deliver two addresses. Tomorrow morning the 42,000 soldiers here will stand at attention for one minute in honor of their mothers, and will repeat the Lord's Prayer in unison. In the afternoon they will hold receptions for their mothers in the many Y. M. C. A. huts. Ohio florists have donated enough flowers, so that each soldier will have a carnation.

MARCHED WITH SONG TO JOIN SOMME ARMY

American Soldiers, Ready for the Sacrifice, Went with Spirits High.

BAGGAGE LIMIT ANNOYED

Musicians Hid Clothing and Food in Instruments, but Got Caught at It.

By FLOYD P. GIBBONS.

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Company.

[SECOND ARTICLE.]

In his first article Mr. Gibbons told how on the day before Pershing's troops were to move westward to become part of Foch's army on the Somme, all the officers of units were summoned to confer with the American commander.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMIES UNDER GENERAL FOCH IN FRANCE, May 11.—That night we made the final arrangement for the morrow's move. Orders were received for the reduction of all packs to the lightest possible, as all men would be dismounted and baggage wagons would be reserved for food, ammunition and officers' baggage only. The officer's pack, by the same order, had to shrink from 150 pounds to twenty.

There were many misgivings that night as the owners were forced to discard cherished belongings. Cumbersome paraphernalia, rubber bathtubs, pneumatic mattresses, extra blankets, socks, sweaters, etc., all parted company from erstwhile owners. That order caused many a heartbreak and the abandonment of thousands of dollars' worth of personal equipment in our area. I have no doubt that some village maidens were surprised at the remarkable generosity of officers and men, who presented them with expensive toilet sets. Marie at the village estaminet received five of them, all fitted in neat leather rolls and inscribed with as many different sets of initials. Old men of the town gloried in sweaters, woolen socks and underwear.

There was no chance to get out of the small baggage order. An officer, bound by duty, weighed each officer's kit as it reached the baggage wagons, and those tipping the scales at more than the prescribed twenty pounds were thrown out entirely.

The Musicians' Trick.

I happened to be watching the loading when it came the turn for the regimental band to stow away its encased instruments in one wagon. It must be remembered that musicians at the front are stretcher bearers. The baggage judge weighed a case containing a bass horn.

"No horn in the world ever weighed that much," he said. "Open it up."

The case was opened and the bass horn pulled out. The baggage officer began operations on the funnel. I watched him remove from the horn's interior two spare blankets, four pairs of socks, and an extra pair of pants, and a carton of cigarettes. He then inserted his arm up to the shoulder in the instrument's "inards" and brought forth two apples, a small tin of blackberry jam, and an egg wrapped in an undershirt.

The man who played "umpah, umpah" in the band was heartbroken. The oboe player, who had watched the operation and whose case followed for inspection, saved the inspector trouble by removing an easily hidden chain of sausage. I noticed one musician who was watching the ruthless pillage, but strange to say, his countenance was the opposite of the others. He was actually smiling. I inquired the cause of his mirth.

"When we packed up those guye with the big, hollow instruments all had the laugh on me," he said. "Now I've got the laugh on them. I play the picolo."

Melancholy Artillerymen.

All mounted men under the rank of battery commanders were dismounted to save the horses for possibilities in the way of movement. A dismounted artilleryman, carrying a pack on his back and also armed with a rifle, is the most disconsolate subject to view just prior to setting out for a long tramp. In his opinion he has been reduced to the status of a despised doughboy.

It really does not seem like artillery unless one has a horse to ride and a saddle to strap a pack on. In the lineup before we started I saw two of these gunners standing by, weighted down with their cumbersome and unaccustomed packs. They were backed against a stone wall and were easing their burdens by resting the packs on a stone ledge. Another one, similarly burdened, passed, and in a most serious tone inquired:

"Say, would either of you fellowe like to buy another blanket roll?"

Tho reply of the two dejected gunnera would bar this story from publication.

We were on the march early in the morning not without some confusion by reason of the inevitable higher orders which always come at the last minute to change the program. On parallel roads, through a zone of unmarred beauty, our columns swung along dusty highroads.

Ready for the Sacrifice.

There are many who have held that America will not be awake to the full meaning of her participation in the war until some day there comes back from the battlefields a long list of casualties—a division wiped out or cut up. Many have heard the opinion expressed over here and many firmly believe that nothing short of such a shock will arouse the nation to the exertion of power and speed necessary to save the allied cause from defeat.

On this march that thought recurred to some, and perhaps to many who refrained from placing it in words. But I know of some in this organization who felt that we were on our way to that sacrifice. I cannot estimate in how many minds the thought became tangible, but with several whom I heard discussing the matter, I found a perfect willingness to meet the unknown—to march on to sacrifice with the feeling that if the loss of their lives would help to bring about a greater prosecution of the war by our country, then they would not have died in vain.

If this was the underlying spirit, it had no effect upon the outward appearance, which could hardly be better described than with Cliff Raymond's words: "There are roses in their rifles just the same." If this move was on to the sacrifice, if death awaited at the end of the road, then these men were marching toward it with a song.

It takes a hard march to test the morale of soldiers. When the feet are road sore, when the legs ache from the endless pounding of hobnails on hard macadam, when the pack straps cut and burn to the shoulder blades, and the tin hat weighs down like a crown of thorns, then keep your ear open for a jest and if your hearing is rewarded you will know that you march with men.

"Cannoneers to the Wheels."

Many a time that first day those jests came to enlighten dejected spirits and put smiles on sweaty faces. I recall our battery as it negotiated the steep hills. When the eight horses, attached to the gun carriages, were struggling to pull them up the incline, certain subaltern with voices low but insistent, would sing out:

"Cannoneers to the wheels!"

This reiterated command at every grade forced aching shoulders, already weary with their own burdens, to strain behind heavy carriages and ease the pull on the animals.

Once on the down grade our way crossed the tracks of a narrow gauge railroad. Not far from the crossing could be seen a dinky engine, puffing and snorting furiously in a terrific effort to move up hill its train of loaded ammunition cars. The engine was having a hard fight when some light-hearted, weary one in our column gave voice:

"Cannoneers to the wheel!" was the shout, and ever the dignified subaltern, whose pet command was the butt of tho exclamation, joined in the wave of laughter that went down the line.

RODE TO DEATH LAUGHING.

Major Rasmussen Was Idolized by Men for His Fearlessness.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 9, (Associated Press.)—Major Andrew Rasmussen of Portland, Ore., who was killed a few days ago when leading a reconnoitring party on the American front in Picardy, was the idol of his men because of his utter fearlessness.

The Major passed unwounded through revolutions in Central America and more severe fighting with General Carranza's forces in Mexico, and finally through two years of service as a Major with the Canadian Army. He was detailed by the British last October to assist in training Americans in bayonet fighting, and later was sent to an American Army school as instructor. In January he was transferred to the American Army with a Major's commission.

Major Rasmussen was immediately put in command of a battalion and went into action on the front northwest of Toul, where he suffered slightly in a gas attack.

On the night that his battalion was moved from its billets into the line on the Picardy front Major Rasmussen joked with several correspondents while the German shells were bursting in the village a few kilometers in the rear. He told them they might have his uniform, helmet and other things in case he was killed. Then he rode laughing toward the trenches.

STUDENT AVIATOR KILLED.

McCalla Burned to Death in a Fall in a Florida Flight.

PENSACOLA, Fla., May 11.—Richard C. McCalla of Toledo, Ohio, student aviator, was burned to death, and George I. Henderson of Pawtucket, R. I., student aviator, was badly burned, when their airplane fell on Santa Rosa Island, yesterday. Henderson will recover.

Whether the machine caught fire before it struck the ground has not yet been determined. Henderson extricated himself, but was unable to get McCalla out.

NEW YORK OFFICER IS KILLED IN ACTION

Lieut. Walter C. Flato Was in First Plattsburg Contingent to Go to France.

MOTHER RESIGNED TO LOSS

Col. Leach, Wounded, Is Commander of the 151st Regiment of the Rainbow Division.

Lieutenant Walter Cecil Flato of the regular army, who is listed as having been killed in action in the latest casualty list from General Pershing, is one of the 1917 Plattsburgers who were transferred to the regular army shortly after they were commissioned Second Lieutenants. Lieutenant Flato was a son of Mrs. Clara Flato of 237 West Seventy-fourth Street. He was born in Brooklyn in 1886. Mrs. Flato received a telegram from Adjt. Gen. McCain yesterday announcing the death of her son in action "somewhere in France."

"He was my only boy," said Mrs. Flato yesterday, "and while no mother could grieve more, yet I would gladly give others to the same cause if I had them."

Lieutenant Flato was in business in New York when Congress declared war on Germany. He was one of the first to apply for the Plattsburg camp, and was a graduate of the first 1917 camp. He was in the first Plattsburg contingent, which went to France in the Summer of last year. After a period of advanced instruction under allied officers in France he was assigned to Company L of the 16th U. S. Infantry, an organization which is said to have seen more hard service to date than any other American unit on the allied front.

Besides his mother Lieutenant Flato is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Marvin M. Marcus and Miss Adele Flato. Mrs. Marcus is the wife of Lieutenant Marcus of the Field Artillery Brigade of the New York Division at Camp Wadsworth.

Colonel George E. Leach, who is listed as slightly wounded, is the commanding officer of the 151st Regiment of Field Artillery of the Rainbow Division. Before the war he was one of the best known National Guard field officers in the West and was an officer of the old First Minnesota Infantry, which was changed into a field artillery unit and assigned to the Rainbow. Colonel Leach's home is at 2,429 Pillsbury Avenue, Minneapolis.

The Minnesota man is the youngest Colonel in the Rainbow Division, and he is a veteran of the Mexican border mobilization of 1916. At that time he commanded a Minneeota battery, and General Funston in an official report to the War Department referred to him as "one of the most efficient officers on border duty."

Lieutenant Mortimer L. Steinhardt, who is reported slightly wounded, is a son of Louis S. Steinhardt, a retired business man of 345 West Eighty-eighth Street. He is a graduate of the first 1917 Plattsburg Camp, and was in the second contingent of Plattsburgers ordered overseas. He sailed from New York last September. Lieutenant Steinhardt is a graduate of Cornell University of the class of 1914.

Dr. R. E. Gordon of the French Hospital in West Thirty-fourth Street received a letter yesterday from his brother, Lieutenant William H. Gordon, who was reported missing in action in the list cabled by General Pershing last Wednesday. Lieutenant Gordon is a prisoner in Germany and in the letter to his brother said that he was one of six Americans captured by a raiding party and later taken to the prison camp near Karlsruhe, Germany. His home is at 464 Riverside Drive, where he lived with his mother and two sisters.

Private Morris Lockett, listed as slightly wounded, is a son of Mrs. Anna Lockett of 1,018 De Kalb Avenue, Brooklyn. He enlisted in the field artillery of the regular army shortly after war was declared.

Corporal Walter Monk, also reported slightly wounded, was born in England and is a nephew of Mrs. Jennie Blundell of New Brunewick, N. J. He is in the regular engineers and is 26 years old.

Private Jack Kitman, reported dead of wounds received in action, was a son of William Kitman of 51 West 130th Street. He enlisted in the army a year ago and was 10 years old.

Alton P. Wood, reported dead of disease, was a Second Lieutenant attached to Company F of the 167th Infantry, the Alabama unit of the Rainbow Division. His home was at 3327 Huntington Avenue, Boston.

AMERICANS' SHELLS SET VILLAGES AFIRE

Batteries Bombard the German Lines Heavily—Enemy's Artillery Falling Short.

WITH THE AMERICAN FORCES ON THE FRENCH FRONT, May 10, (Associated Press.)—American batteries bombarded the enemy lines heavily last night, the shells causing fires in the villages of Cantigny and Mesnil-St. Georges, [west of Montdidier,] held by the Germans.

German patrols continue active along the front. One attempted to rush American outposts, but was driven off by brisk rifle fire.

An American outpost caught a German trench dog. The pouch about his neck contained a message that the German retaliatory fire was falling short, and that many of their own shells were landing in Cantigny. This confirmed previous information reported by American outposts.

PARIS, May 11.—Citations for American aviators appear in the Journal Officiel today as follows:

"William Thaw, Major, (Pittsburgh,) commanding the Lafayette Squadron, which, following its chief's example, has been remarkable for its boldness and success; a keen pilot, at the head of a patrol; downed an enemy airplane after a hard fight.

"Paul Frank Baer, (Mobile,) Lieutenant of the same squadron; a pilot of marvelous audacity, never hesitating to engage the enemy in superior numbers; downed an enemy, the second in two days."

Lieutenant Baer has a second citation in the same issue of the Journal Officiel, reading:

"A pilot of marvelous keenness, engaging in combat on every flight; on the same day he fought three times with the enemy in superior numbers, downing one airplane and forcing two to return to their own lines disabled."

EVERY SOLDIER SENT IS FULLY EQUIPPED

Ordnance Department Says It Is Meeting Every Demand Imposed by New Program.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Although American troops were going overseas in large numbers, the Ordnance Department had been able to keep up with the new program and every soldier who boarded a transport was fully equipped with arms, the Ordnance Bureau announced today. Artillery and machine gune already were in France in sufficient quantities, it was said, to meet immediate demands. The statement said:

"The Army Ordnance Department has thus far met every demand imposed by the new program for overseas shipment of American troops.

"Despite the great acceleration in the sending of American forces to France, no infantryman goes aboard ship without a United States model 1917 rifle, (modified Enfield,) bayonet, belt, haversack, pack carriers, bandoleers, bayonet scabbard, and full mess equipment.

"Tonnage is today a limiting factor in the shipment of ordnance material overseas, especially because of the present necessity of increasing the transport of infantry regiments.

"Sufficient supplies of artillery—French 75 millimeter and 155 millimeter and American heavy railway artillery—are already in France to meet the present demand. Sufficient machine guns are also immediately available for American forces in France."

PHILADELPHIA BOY KILLED.

Vivian Dubouchet of American Ambulance Victim of Wound.

PARIS, May 11.—Vivian Dubouchet, son of Dr. Dubouchet of Philadelphia, died today in American Red Cross Hospital No. 1, from the effects of a shell splinter that had lodged in the spine. He was 19 years old.

Young Dubouchet had served in the American Ambulance since early in the war. He enlisted as a private when America declared war, although he was still under military age.

BRITISH OPEN ARMS TO OUR OFFICERS

Go Out of Their Way to Extend Courtesies to Army and Navy Men.

FIND FRIENDLY GUIDES

Ohio Man Tells of Getting Cards to Parliament from Joe Develin.

The eagerness of the English and Irish to do favors to wandering Americans on leave from military duty abroad, and the general kindness met with everywhere "over there" is told in a letter of an American naval officer, living in Ohio, now in the war zone. He and a friend, who had been shown friendliness by strangers they had met by accident, found on two occasions that the men who had extended such courtesy were persons of considerable distinction. The officer wrote:

"Now that I look back over it, it seems that my spare time was very well spent. I utilized every moment of it. I met hosts of people and made many friends. Every one seemed bent on entertaining us, and I can vouch for their success in this.

"On one occasion not long before I left Lady Curzon held a reception for Admiral Sims, his staff, and other American officers, and it was my good fortune to be introduced to David Lloyd George. Sir William Robertson and Balfour were among some of the other celebrities. The Premier is a most impressive man, not in stature, for he was much shorter than I believed him to be, but in his fine face, personality, and sincerity of speech. He, I think, is very wonderful.

Got Cards to Parliament.

"On the day that the houses of Parliament opened, some months ago, it was rumored that the Premier would speak in the House of Commons. So Lieutenant Jackson and I hurried down to Westminster at about 5:30 in the afternoon, determined, by hook or crook, to get tickets to the gallery. A dignified "bobbie" pointed out some member of Parliament to us, and having decided on one because of his small stature and kindly face, Jackson and I swooped down upon him, one on either side. We soberly explained to him with dramatic little touches—thanks to Jackson—how much our hearts were set on getting tickets. He stood smiling at us, a very short, thick-set little man, with an enormous head and a fine, honest face, and then said, 'Have ye just come over-r fr-r-rom Amer-r-r-rica?' We told him how long we had been across and he said that he had one ticket only, but that he thought that he could find another for us. He signed his ticket—Joe Develin. He was the great Irish Unionist, a man as big in mind as he is small in stature. He soon returned with another member, whom he introduced. This was John Burns, the Labor leader. We thanked them very kindly, and with the precious tickets in our hands, passed to the gallery.

"That was a notable afternoon in the House of Commons. Asquith, with his beautiful and precise oratory, but seeming to lack that sincerity of purpose and speech which is dominant with Lloyd George, asked questions of the Premier, the answers to which would appareatly have given valuable information to the enemy, and the Premier's tense, flashing reply caused some few dramatic moments. And Jackson and I voted it a good afternoon.

"Then there were the air raids. These proved very exciting at first, but finally they lost their interest for me and became so commonplace that I paid little attention to them, only staying inside to avoid being hit by the falling shrapnel. I believe when I wrote you first I had yet to experience a raid.

Describes Air Raid in London.

"Just a couple of days after that I was awakened by the guns in the outer defense at 4:30 in the morning, and then the inner defense guns began to bark. These guns make a quick, sharp bark just after the initial explosion, the effect being like this: Boom-bar-r-k! The moon was a slim crescent in the sky, and it was a beautiful night, although cold. Presently the faint drone of the raiding planes could be distinguished and there came the reverberating rumbles of bombs being dropped. The difference between the sound of the guns and that of the bombs is very noticeable. The latter reverberate, and, if sufficiently near, have a tendency to rattle the windows. Finally the noise of the motors died away and the guns ceased firing. Fifteen minutes later the guns on the coast could be heard, throwing up their barrage at the returning Hun planes, and at about 6 the buglers were sounding 'all clear' through the streets.

"It was reported that two of the ten raiders were brought down. It seems that the crews of these Gotha planes wear electrically heated clothing, and in one machine the heating elements in the pilot's clothing absorbed so much current that, being unable to disconnect them, he was forced to descend. The Gothas have a wing spread of considerably over 100 feet, are twin motored, and carry a crew of three men—pilot, gunner, and bomber. Being twin-motored, their sonorous double hum is very distinctive. On the most brilliant of moonlight nights, when the thrum of their motors is quite strong, it is impossible to see the planes at their height of a mile or more. On the darker nights they may sometimes be forced to show lights in order to retain their flying formation, and then, if you are fortunate, you may glimpse these tiny points of light moving across the sky.

"The majority of the people display no fright during the raids, and even in the theatres the chorus continues to dance to the music of the guns. They enjoy the happy philosophy that 'if a bomb hits you, you're done for, and if not, all's well,' which is the proper spirit, for London is a large city and the percentage of casualties is infinitesimal. Among the poorer classes and the foreign element their terror is pitiable and the tube stations are a seething mass of humanity seeking shelter.

"These raids have gained nothing for Germany. They have strengthened Tommy's determination to beat them at any cost. The Briton plays the game almost too square. It has taken years for him to even consider air-raid reprisals.

"But despite the lovely country I have seen and the fine people I have met on this side of the Atlantic, I know that none of it can compare to America. My sentiments are exactly those of an American doctor of the United States Reserves to whim I talked in London. He had been out with the British Army, had been severely wounded and was just in the last stage of his convalescence. This is the way he expressed himself: 'When this war is won and when the transport I am on hauls in sight of the Statue of Liberty I am going to say, 'Hello there, Old Girl. If you ever want to see me again you've got to turn around.' And that sums up my opinion very neatly.'"

The writer of the letter was for some time attached to the staff of Vice Admiral Sims and spent four months in London, during which time, according to his letter, he received marked hospitality from all the British with whom he came in contact.

LIBERTY LOAN PUSH FOR RED CROSS DRIVE

House-to-House Canvass Expected to Reach Every Individual in New York.

TEAM CAPTAINS CHOSEN

Caruso Offers Services in $100,000,000 Campaign and Will Give Concert on May 27.

Elaborate plans for the drive of the Red Cross, beginning on May 20, to raise $100,000,000 to continue the vast work of the organization in this country and in the countries of the Allies will be unfolded in detail at a meeting of the Captains and members of thirty-one teams on Monday night at 7:30 at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The drive will resemble the Third Liberty Loan campaign in the thoroughness of its canvass of the city. House-to-house visits are expected to reach every individual in the city, while the business and financial districts will be worked by a committee which will try to obtain the fullest possible results under the new State law which permits every corporation to subscribe 1 per cent. per annum of its capital stock to war relief without calling for a vote of stockholders. Enrico Caruso and other notable artists have donated their services for meetings to promote the cause.

Elliot Wadsworth of Boston, active Chairman of the Executive Committee of the American Red Cross; William C. Breed, Chairman of the General Committee, and others will on Monday night address the Captains and teams which have been named to carry on the campaign for New York City's share of the minimum of $100,000,000 to be collected throughout the nation.

Theatrical Committee Named.

Chairman William Fox of the Allied Theatrical and Motion Picture Men's Team appointed yesterday the following committee to call for volunteers from actors and actresses in New York City to work and perform for the fund:

Raymond Hitchcock for the Lambs, John Drew for The Players, John L. Gleason for the Friars, Edward Davis for the Greenroom Club, Helen Whitman Ritchie and Susanne Westford-Allen for the Professional Women's League, Mary Shaw for the Gamut Club, and Pat Casey for the National Vaudeville Artists' Association. H. H. Burnside has volunteered as general stage manager for all benefit performances.

The first volunteer to respond to the call, it was announced yesterday, was Enrico Caruso, who will give a concert on Monday night, May 27, at the Metropolitan Opera House. It was announced that Caruso would provide the opera house, the orchestra, and his own services, so that every cent of the benefit will go to the Red Cross Fund. An auction sale of boxes for the Caruso benefit will be held on Monday night at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The plans for the campaign for funds in the industrial field was announced in the following statement yesterday:

"This call will be sent forth during Red Cross Week, May 20 to 27, to all the workers and employes in all sorts of industrial and business establishments in the City by the Industrial Campaign Committee, of which C. A. Coffin, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the General Electric Company, is Chairman, and Gerald M. Curran is Executive Secretary. The committee has headquarters on the twentieth floor of the Equitable Building, at 120 Broadway.

"The campaign in each borough will be under the supervision of a vice chairman. M. P. Moseley, Vice President of the American Exchange Bank, is Vice Chairman for Manhattan; William B. Taylor of Taylor & Co., iron founders, for Brooklyn; Ray Palmer of the New York and Queens Light and Power Company, for Queens; James Breckenridge of the New York Telephone Company, for the Bronx, and Theodore H. Spratt of the Corn Exchange Bank, for Richmond.

"The industrial plan, so called, has for its object the carrying to every worker and every employe in New York City a description of the work and purposes of the Red Cross, of how it may be made the vital and active agency on his behalf of relieving the suffering and attending to the wants of his own fellows, of caring for their dependents, to say nothing of affording succor to the maimed soldiers of our Allies, of rescuing and providing for the homeless and helpless in the districts devastated by war and of reconstructing war-ridden areas. The plan contemplates the raising of the fund, not by single individual contributions, but by continuing contributions from individuals in monthly or weekly payments over the period of a year. It is felt that in this way the individual will realize the continuing obligation to take part in the war by providing for his fellows if he or she cannot be with them in the actual fighting ranks."

POLES SEEK VENGEANCE.

Seven Enlist in Newark to Avenge Death of Countryman.

PASSAIC, N. J., May 11.—Seven Poles enlisted in the Polish League here today to avenge the death of Alexander Drelich, a Pole, who lived at 84 Fourth Street, Passaic, and was reported in yesterday's casualty list as killed in action. Drelich, who was 22 years old, was well known in this city, and was called in the first draft. His brother John, who is 21, was recently sent to France.

The seven avengers enrolled this afternoon, following an indignation meeting which was attended by thirty persons, held in the headquarters of the Polish Sokal Falcons. Arrangements were also made to hold a mass meeting tomorrow afternoon in the Maciag Hall on Third Street. It is believed that at least 150 more men will be recruited at the gathering for the Polish army which is fighting on the Verdun front.

Women Win Yale Graduate Honors.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 11.—Women students in the graduate schools in Yale University have taken thirteen honors in a list given out today, this being an unusually large number. They won the two research fellowships, took both Ives fellowships, six of the university general fellowships, and three of the university scholarships.

COMFORTS FOR WOUNDED.

War Society Aims to Visit American Soldiers in French Hospitals.

Work of visiting American soldiers in French hospitals is to be systematized and a new plan for the immediate dispatch of material which is urgently needed has been adopted by the American Fund for French Wounded co-operating with the Red Cross and the nounced yesterday. The society, from which Miss Anne Morgan recently separated to devote herself with a new organization to the rehabilitation of the French Service de Santé, it was andevastated regions of France, is being augmented by large numbers of new members and is having extra demands made upon its services by the refugee problem, now more acute than in the early days of the war. WHITMAN FAVORS CITY IMPROVEMENTS

Signs Bill Authorizing Bond Issues to Enlarge Schools and Hospitals Here.

TO SPEND $15,000,000 A YEAR

Craig Assures Governor That Money Will Not Be Used to Carry Out Campaign Pledges.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 11.—New York City is authorized to issue annually during the war and for a year thereafter $15,000,000 in bonds or corporate stock for public improvements under the Wagner War Emergency bill, which Controller Charles L. Craig persuaded the Governor to sign today. The money raised will be used in the enlargement and maintenance of schools and hospitals. The bill provides that the securities issued must mature within the life of the improvement upon which they are expended.

Controller Craig pointed out that unless the Governor signed the bill the city would be forced to curtail its hospital and school improvement plans to such an extent as to work a hardship upon the people of the city. Senator Wagner and Assistant Corporation Counsel McGoldrick also asked the Governor to sign the measure, pointing to the necessity that existed of properly maintaining the schools and the hospitals, especially in time of war.

The only objection made in the approval of the bill came from the Citizens Union, which claimed that suspicion existed as to the purposes to which the city administration planned to devote the proceeds of the bonds. The Citizens Union registered its protest in a letter, the general purport of which was that it believed that the city administration might attempt to carry out some of its campaign pledges with the moneys raised by the bond issues proposed in the bill.

Controller Craig in answer to these objections stated that practically all of the money to be raised under the bill for the present year would be devoted to the enlargement and improvement of existing hospitals and schools, and the construction of viaducts in the outlying sections of New York City.

The Governor also indicated to the New York City officials that he would act favorably on the bill of Minority Leader Donohue which would permit the city to compensate unlicensed physicians in the city's hospitals. The Governor believes that because of the great inroads the war has made on internes and physicians in the hospitals, it is absolutely necessary that the city be empowered to engage doctors unlicensed in this State and compensate them.

The State Department of Education was not favorable to the bill but withdrew its objections at a conference called by Assistant Corporation Counsel McGoldrick. Dr. Walter Connelly, Superintendent of the Charities Department; Civil Service Commissioner MacArthur, Commissioner of Charities Coler, and Dr. Wilson of the New York Health Department participated in the conference, with Dr. Thomas E. Finegan representing the Education Department. There was no objection to the enactment of the bill at the hearing before the Governor.

VETOES CANAL TOWING BILL.

Governor Is Informed That It Would Be Wasting State's Money.

ALBANY, May 11.—The Sage bill to appropriate $275,000 for towing facilities on the Barge Canal this year was vetoed by Governor Whitman today.

The Governor based his action on a letter from Brig. Gen. Keller, Acting Chairman of the Committee on Inland Waterways, which stated "it would be inexpedient as well as perhaps wasteful for the State of New York to perform this service this year," in view of the recent taking over of the canal system by the Federal Government.

DELAY DENIED BY PATTEN.

Postmaster Says Mail Is Forwarded Promptly to American Troops.

In denying a report that the Y. M. C. A. had curtailed its orders for newspapers for the American troops in service in France, because of the delay in getting them abroad, Postmaster Patten said yesterday that there was no delay in the forwarding of mail for the soldiers at this end of the line. He was corroborated by P. J. Schardt, in charge of the railroad mail service. The mail for the soldiers is sent to Mr. Schardt's division as soon as it is received and is there sorted according to the location of commands in France. It is held until either the sailing of a mail steamship or a notification from the military authorities that it can be accommodated on an outgoing transport. Mr. Schardt said that at the most it was not necessary to hold mail more than two or three days before it was placed on some outgoing steamship.

"Whatever delay there is is mostly on the other side," said Mr. Patten. "In the stress of life on the other side it may be necessary to hold up mail to give other things the right of way. The public may rest assured that there is no delay in handling the mail for overseas here and there never has been any delay."

Mr. Patten announced yesterday that United States coin or currency, gold coin whether of the United States or foreign mintage and gold bullion, are prohibited transmission through the regular or parcel-post mail to other countries outside the United States and its possessions.

1,700 SAIL FOR NORWAY.

American Diplomats Leave for European Posts.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 11.—A Norwegian steamship left today carrying more passengers than have departed on a single steamship since the sailing of the Holland-America liner Nieuw Amsterdam some weeks ago. Precautions were taken by the Government to see that nothing unapproved was smuggled aboard. Four passengers out of the 1,700 were detained because of irregularities in their passports, but they were allowed to depart after an investigation. All approaches to the ship, were patrolled by Coast Guardsmen and the Secret Service.

Among those who left were P. J. Berg, American Consul General at Stockholm, returning to his post after three months' leave; Marion Fletcher, American Consul General at Christiania, Norway; Lieutenant H. Roop and Captain Comilly Schutt, Russian diplomats who served in Washington under the régime of the Czar; Count Frederik Mikte, Attaché of the Danish Legation, and Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, Royal Norwegian Commissioner, who reached an agreement with this Government regarding the shipment of food supplies to Norway. Mehdi Khan, Persian Minister to the United States, also sailed.

Walsh, Chancellor of the Diocese of Buffalo, had received the papal appointment as Bishop of Trenton, to succeed the late Bishop James A. McFaul. The date for the consecration has not been set.

LOCAL DEMOCRATS STILL FEAR HEARST

Do Not Agree with Up-State Leaders That He Has Been Eliminated.

MURPHY GIVES NO SIGN

Meanwhile Friends of Alfred E. Smith Are Trying to Commit Tammany to Their Candidate.

While up-State Democrats, who have been in this city during the last week, proclaim their belief, practically as a unit, that the recent Democratic Conference at Syracuse and the canvass of rural sections by the General Committee appointed at that conference, have disposed of any chance William R. Hearst may have had to become the Democratic nominee for Governor, Democratic politicians in this city are of a different opinion. They do not believe that Mr. Hearst, as yet, has been effectively eliminated.

While there is practically no sentiment among Tammany Democrats, or, as far as can be learned, among Democratic organization men in other boroughs for the nomination of Hearst, some of the leaders of Democratic district organizations in the city believe that Hearst may be in a position to force Charles F. Murphy to exert the great influence he wields on his behalf.

There are few Tammany men who believe that if Murphy consults the wishes of his district leaders he will try to force the nomination of Hearst. On the other hand, it is known that the Chieftain of Tammany Hall stands in dread of opposition from the Hearst newspapers and does not relish the prospect of a third ticket, which some friends of Hearst believe might be placed in the field in the event that Hearst should be turned down flatly.

Friends of Alfred E. Smith, President of the Aldermanic Board, who are nursing a Gubernatorial boom for him, are believed to be engaged in their present activities largely with a view to committing a large element of the Tammany following before Hearst can get in his work in this city. While Smith has a legion of Democratic friends up-State, who learned to like him when he was Speaker of the Assembly and leader of the Democratic majority in the House at Albany, the up-State Democrats realize that too many circumstances militate against his being a successful candidate up-State. In addition to the handicaps that led to the defeat of Martin H. Glynn in 1914, after a creditable record as Governor, Mr. Smith would come before the Democratic voters up-State with the Tammany brand, which they believe would make it impossible for him to make a strong run in the rural sections.

Democrats who have visited Washington recently have brought back reports that the friends of District Attorney Swann have been active in seeking indorsements for him as a candidate for Governor from Democrats in positions of prominence and influence in the Wilson Administration. According to the reports they have made little headway.

Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo, who some few months ago was mentioned as a likely candidate for Governor this Fall, has told his friends it would be out of the question for him with the manifold duties now devolving on him to consider anything else. According to one report from Washington Secretary McAdoo looks upon Bainbridge Colby as a likely candidate. Democrats here, however, declare that Mr. Colby has not gone to the trouble of enrolling as a Democrat, and for that reason cannot be thought of. Mr. Colby was a Republican, became a Progressive, and in the 1916 campaign fought as a Progressive for the election of President Wilson.

Friends of James W. Gerard, former United States Ambassador to Germany, continue active on his behalf, but there is no likelihood of Mr. Gerard coming out and declaring himself a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination for some time. He will depend on the popularity created for him through the lifting spectacles dealing with his experiences at Berlin just prior to our entry into the war and will wait for a call which some Democrats believe will come.

Mayor Harry W. Walker of Binghamton, who has been widely discussed as a candidate, spent several days in town last week and met many of the Democratic leaders here, but did not seek an audience with Murphy. The Tammany chieftain has been most careful not to commit himself and there is no likelihood that even the men in the inner circle of Tammany Hall will know what is in his mind with regard to candidates until the general conference of Democrats from all parts of the State meets to discuss candidates, platform and campaign plans some time late next month or early in July.

J. E. HUDGE A CANDIDATE.

Plattsburg Man Seeks Democratic Nomination for Attorney General.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., May 11.—John E. Hudge of this city, widely known in Northern New York as a lawyer, today announced himself a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Attorney General.

Mr. Hudge is said to have the indorsement of the labor organizations of this city.

AMEN CORNER DINES SMITH.

Directors Have Secretary of Tammany as Their Guest.

The directors of the Amen Corner gave a dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria last night to Thomas F. Smith, President of the organization. Besides administering the affairs of the Amen Corner, Mr. Smith is Secretary of Tammany Hall and a member of Congress.

The Amen brethren dispensed with their annual dinner last year on account of the war. But the directors were determined that Mr. Smith should have his crowded hour, and he had it last night.

Among the directors present were Louis Selbold, Robert Adamson, Harold MacD. Anderson, Frank H. Simonds, William A. Brady, James V. Gwin, Job E. Hedges, Thomas O. McGill, Walter Lander, William Leary, William E. Lewis, Luther B. Little, Edward Staats Luther, Edward G. Riggs, Thomas F. Smith, Charles Steckler, and Charles T. White.

CONTESTS BANKER'S WILL.

Van Cortlandt Alleges Document Was Not Brother's Testament.

The will of Robert B. Van Cortlandt, retired banker, who committed suicide at his country home at Bedford Hills, which leaves his fortune of more than $1,000,000 to Columbia University, is to be contested by his brother, Augustus Van Cortlandt of New York City. This was evidenced by an affidavit just filed with Surrogate Sawyer at White Plains, in which he says: "The deponent claims that the will of the late Robert B. Van Cortlandt, found, is not valid and that it is not signed by testator." He also states that he is of the opinion that his sister, Mrs. Mary Bayley Matthews of Eaton Lodge, Shanklin, Isle of Wight, England, will also contest the will.

According to reports received from brokers Mr. Van Cortlandt owned stocks and bonds valued at $585,500 and had pledged these for loans aggregating $361,500. His real estate at Bedford Hills was valued at $200,000, so that the value of his estate is over $1,000,000.

BARNARD LAYS PLANS FOR WORK IN FRANCE

War Service Corps to be Recruited from Members of the Alumnae for Repatriation.

The formation of a war service corps for duty in France, to be recruited exclusively from the ranks of Barnard College graduates, and maintained by the Barnard College Alumnae Association, was announced yesterday. The corps, composed of specially trained workers, will concentrate on reconstruction and canteen service overseas, and will operate under the joint jurisdiction of the American Red Cross and the Y. M. C. A.

Simultaneously with the completion of final plans of organization, a drive was started on graduates and friends of Barnard to obtain $2,000 expense and equipment guarantees for each of the canteen workers, and to raise the approximately $40,000 which will be needed to inaugurate the college's service with the Red Cross. Headquarters for the receipt of donations and applications, the latter from Barnard graduates only, have been opened in the homes of Mrs. Alfred Hess, 16 West Eighty-sixth Street, and Miss Sarah Schuyler Butler, 60 Morningside Drive, both women being members of the Finance Committee in charge of the campaign.

The Barnard War Corps, planned as the first collegiate unite to go into the foreign service ready in all respects for immediate action, will be composed of two units. One will be a canteen unit of five or six workers for use wherever the Y. M. C. A. sends it, while the second unit will engage in repatriation projects in the central and southern parts of France. The personnel of the repatriation section will be made up of a physician, a trained nurse, a dietician, a secretary, a business manager, and several agricultural and social workers. The territory to which the Barnard corps will work is the scene of some of the largest repatriation schemes undertaken by the French Government, and an average of 600 women and children arrive daily in the territory from the devastated northern parts of France.

Because of the vital work which this unit will take up, the personnel of workers in it has been set forth in a letter to Mrs. Hess from Joseph R. Hamlen, Acting Vice President of the Red Cross. Mrs. Hess, discussing the eligibility of Barnard graduates for corps service, said that only young women 25 years or more in age could be enlisted, and that none with male relatives in the service in France, was acceptable because of a War Department ruling which barred the way.

"Doctors, nurses, social workers, and persons with special knowledge in civil work are wanted," said Mrs. Hess, "and all must be Barnard alumnae. Personal qualifications are also very important, such as tact, adaptability, and resourcefulness. Nervous, sensitive, and quadruplable persons are not desirable, no matter how well qualified, in view of the conditions which now prevail in France. An effort, too, will be made to see that each unit includes at least two or three persons with a speaking knowledge of French, and all corps members will be required to begin the study of the language as soon as they get over.

"Working under the direction of the Y. M. C. A. and Red Cross, it is our hope to make the units more serviceable by keeping them as flexible as possible, and it is our idea simply to put trained people at the service of the two organizations who know the needs of France. The maintenance of the identity of the Barnard War Service Corps as a Barnard unit is less important to us than its fullest possible use, and it may find itself scattered as soon as it reaches the other side."

Mrs. Hess said that the members of the units would be sent over as fast as they were selected and funds raised for their transportation and upkeep. She said that a determined effort would be made to get a substantial force into the field this Summer, as Red Cross officials had advised that the coming month would bring a great need of repatriation in preparation for the rigors of next Winter.

The first squad of the corps to go over probably will be headed by Miss Eleanor Doty, Barnard, '12, who already has served in the Y. M. C. A. canteens in France. This pioneer detachment will serve for one year re-establishing the civil life of the French, and each member of the party will be qualified to supervise the food, clothing, fuel, housing, and farming of the territory to which she is to be assigned.

TO EXPEDITE TAX PAYMENTS

Government Will Present Bills at Once to Avoid a Rush.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—To encourage taxpayers to send checks for income and excess profits before they are actually due, June 15, and thereby lessen the congestion in revenue offices near that date, Internal Revenue Commissioner Roper today instructed all District Collectors to send out notices of taxes due immediately, or as soon as possible. These notices are essentially bills, and recipients will be told in a notice accompanying them that, although the tax need not be paid until June 15, Collectors would be glad to receive advance payments.

Next Wednesday, May 15, is the last day on which interest deduction of 3 per cent. a year on the month remaining until June 15 will be allowed. Thousands of persons now are paying their taxes in advance and making no deduction for interest, however. The allowance for a month on a tax of $100 would be 25 cents. Many corporations and big business interests are hastening to pay their taxes before May 15 to take advantage of the interest allowance. A Treasury report showed receipts of $115,000,000 from this source alone today, and $227,000,000 from income and excess profits taxes this month, as compared with a total of only $412,000,000 in the last ten months. By June 15 the Treasury expects about $5,000,000,000 from these taxes.

Indications are that some Collectors' offices may be unable to get out all notices of taxes by June 15, and since taxpayers have an allowance of ten days after receipt of the notice before they are liable for penalties as delinquents, millions of dollars in payment may be deferred until nearly July 1, or even later.

This is true particularly of excess profits taxes involved in some cases now being examined by the Treasury's excess profits reviewers, who probably will not be able to complete their task of inspecting the accumulated returns until later in the Summer.

A large proportion represents cases in which it has been difficult to determine invested capital, and which consequently must be judged on the basis of the percentage of profit made by similar businesses with determinable capital. These include a few newspaper publishers' returns, which will be held until a sufficiently large number of other publishers' returns can be examined to furnish evidence of the average profit of business.

MILKMAIDS TO CATCH COINS.

Will Parade the City with Pails to Gather Funds for Milk for France.

The Free Milk for France Committee will start tomorrow a campaign of a week for funds to ship a ton of dried milk daily to wounded soldiers, young children, and tuberculosis sufferers in France.

At 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning two rurally decked motor trucks, armed with farmerettes with milk pails to catch the coins of the people, will leave the First Field Hospital Armory, West Sixty-sixth Street, and move south on Broadway to Wall Street, taking their stand in front of the Stock Exchange. In the afternoon the floats will return by Broadway and Fifth Avenue, stopping at busy corners for collections.

Popular actresses and movie stars have volunteered their services, as milkmaids, to Miss Josephine Osborn, Chairman; Mrs. Warren McConihe, Vice Chairman; Henry E. Cooper, Treasurer of the Free Milk Committee.

TEXTILE MACHINERY HERE FOR THE WORLD

American Manufacturers Preparing for Rehabilitation at the End of the War.

MANY BUYERS AT THE SHOW

Exhibition Brought Here from Boston as a Bid for Large Foreign Trade.

American textile machinery will play a big part in the rehabilitation of Northern France and Belgium, and in the equipment of cotton and woolen mills in every quarter of the world, according to representatives of America's foremost machinery concerns, who have been showing their latest "Made in U. S. A." equipment at the Sixth National Textile Exhibition, which closed last night at the Grand Central Palace after a successful run of two weeks.

This year's exhibition marked a bold departure from the precedents established in other years in that the promoters of the show decided to pass by Boston, where past expositions had been held, and come to New York for the express purpose of educating foreign mill men to the advantages to be derived by the installation of American textile machinery in their plants. "We left Boston this year," the representative of a big Massachusetts machinery firm said, "because we wanted to reach the foreign buyers of machinery. New York is the world's centre at this time so far as international, or export, trade is concerned, although, as a matter of fact, Boston is better located for strictly domestic business, since it is adjacent to the great textile manufacturing districts. At the same time, many of us felt that a great opportunity existed in foreign markets, and so we came to New York for this year's show."

Conservative estimates made last night were that the exhibitors at the exposition received orders for machinery, mill supplies, dyestuffs, and fabrics aggregating $15,000,000. A large proportion of this was said to represent orders given for the delivery of textile machinery in foreign countries. Several hundred buyers from all parts of the world visited the exposition and placed orders for equipment after complimenting the manufacturers upon the new features shown.

These included new automatic devices, stopping apparatus and high speed features, all designed to reduce labor costs to the minimum. Some of these new devices, it was stated, enable one operative to run as many as twenty-two looms, whereas a year or two ago it was regarded almost as a superhuman task for the most skilled to run eight looms. This wonderful increase in productive power is due to inventions that automatically put in new bobbins, or that stop the machine long enough for a contrivance to discharge a shuttle with a bobbin that has run out, and replace it with a new one. These two inventions were described as easily the most important developments of the past two years in the textile industry. High speed individual electric motors which have recently been adopted is another factor assisting the manufacturer to reach a maximum output. In addition to the machinery in actual operation, moving pictures were shown for the benefit of foreign buyers especially.

Frederick H. Bishop, Secretary of the Universal Winding Company of Boston, yesterday told how the world-war had brought a great opportunity to the domestic makers of machinery.

"One of the controlling reasons for bringing this exhibition to New York," Mr. Bishop said, "was to have it seen by representatives from foreign countries. We wanted them to have an eye-opener, so to speak. Prior to the war very few American manufacturers went after foreign trade, as they thought they could not compete with the cheap labor of France, Germany, and England.

"In England from 60 to 70 per cent. of the capacity of the plants of the textile machinery manufacturers has been taken over for the production of munitions. Northern France and Belgium, where textile machinery was manufactured, are in the hands of the Germans, who melted the machinery and literally fired it back at the former owners.

"It is hardly probable that the German machinery manufacturers are in much better condition to turn out products, even if the civilized world should prove willing to buy from them after the war ends. It therefore appears inevitable that for the replacement of equipment in the mills of the devastated regions of France and Belgium, and to meet the requirements of South America, Japan, China, and India, American manufacturers must be appealed to.

"At present several of the largest makers of the general types of textile machinery have more orders booked than they can care for inside of twelve months."

A significant feature of the exposition, Mr. Bishop said, was the large attendance of representatives of financial combinations, who already are preparing to erect new mills in the devastated sections of Europe following the close of hostilities. These men, the Boston manufacturer said, were securing all necessary data and specifications to enable them to take quick action when the proper time arrives. In addition to this, firm orders have been placed by foreign interests for machinery for early delivery. While prices for textile machinery are the highest in the history of the industry, due to the rise in raw material and labor costs arising from the war, domestic manufacturers said they believed foreigners appreciated the economies bound to accrue from the use of the latest word in mill equipment.

"The American manufacturer now has the opportunity to work up a permanent export trade," Mr. Bishop continued. "The opportunity has come to establish a market abroad and then to retain it. The European makers of machinery have lost their organizations as a result of the war, and it seems, both from the standpoints of patriotism and profits, a desirable thing for our manufacturers to make their products known throughout the world."

In conclusion, Mr. Bishop said the Government requirements in the shape of fabrics for the army and navy were compelling mills to increase their capacity materially. Furthermore, many mills were required to change the quality of the fabrics they had been in the habit of making in order to produce the cloths wanted by the Government. These conditions, the machinery man said, compelled the owners of mills to install new or additional equipment.

RECTOR FOR 25 YEARS.

Church of the Ascension Celebrates Long Pastorate of Dr. Grant.

The Church of the Ascension, Fifth Avenue and Tenth Street, celebrated on Thursday the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant as its rector. A choir of 70 voices, led by four women trumpeters, sang appropriate music, and the procession included the rector, his assistants, George Gordon Battle and Major August Belmont, in khaki, with other members of the Vestry and officials of the church.

The Right Rev. Charles Sumner Burch, Bishop Coadjutor of the Diocese of New York, confirmed a class of twelve. He acted in the absence of Bishop David H. Greer, who sent his regrets. Addresses were made by Bishop Burch on the "Progress in the Church in the Last Quarter of a Century"; Mr. Battle, a member of the Vestry, on "Progress of Religious Thoughts Among Laymen in the Last Quarter of a Century"; Joseph Auerbach, on "For the Neighbors," and the rector, on "Progress in Ascension Parish in the Last Twenty-five Years."

After the service a reception was held in the parish house, where the congregation and friends gathered around the rector and congratulated him on his long service.

RAINBOW DIVISION GETS $564,767,950 FOR LOAN

Exceeds Quota of $450,000,000 by 25.5%—Pennsylvania Employes Take $12,061,900.

Final figures on the Liberty bond subscriptions gathered by the Rainbow Division of the Second Federal Reserve District showed that the eighty-six business and professional organizations comprising this group accounted for $564,767,950 bonds. This was 25.5 per cent. larger than the allotment of $450,000,000 decided on before the campaign began. In the second loan campaign the grand total of subscriptions gathered in was $490,367,150.

The report on the Rainbow Division, issued yesterday by the Advisory Trade Committee of the Liberty Loan Committee, said that the result was especially gratifying, because the impression made by the first two weeks of the drive was that the schedule was not being maintained. A week later the total for the Second Loan was surpassed, and six days after that the allotment was made good, with a margin over. Seventy committees reached and passed their total of the Second Loan. Of these the one to make the greatest percentage increase was the Electrical Committee, with an aggregate of $9,457,000 bonds sold, compared with $800,000 in the Second Loan.

SAYS AIRBRAKES FAILED.

Vice President Maher Explains Cause of Runaway Trolley.

Officials of the Union Railway Company were questioned at the District Attorney's Office yesterday concerning the collision on Thursday of crosstown cars, one of which, it is charged, raced down the steep grade at 145th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, hitting an automobile and a car ahead, causing the death of a passenger and injury to many in the two cars. Vice President Edward A. Maher, Jr., said the motorman had lost control of the car when the airbrakes failed to operate. A lost brake pin that held the airbrake attachments in place was the direct cause of the accident, he told Assistant District Attorney A. J. Talley.

"It is the custom to inspect every car after runs that total 800 to 1,000 miles," asserted Mr. Maher. His testimony was corroborated by Superintendents J. S. McWhirter and B. W. Reynolds. Two inspectors testified they had examined the car and had found it in good condition at the time it was started on its run.

Judge Swann said this additional evidence had not determined the question of personal responsibility for the accident, which he would attempt to reach by further inquiry and then decide if sufficient evidence existed for presentation to a grand jury.

PIER LEASE MUDDLE SPLITS CITY LEADERS

Dock Commissioner Hulbert Attacks Controller Craig for Criticisms.

DEMANDS A FREE HAND

Hints at Resignation If Hampered—Contest Expected in Sinking Fund Commission.

A dispute of far-reaching consequence, so far as the City Administration is concerned is expected to develop at next week's meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission as a result of the recent pier leasing disclosures. The action of Controller Craig in demanding that the commission rescind its action in leasing the pier at the foot of Fifth Street, East River, to the Pawtucket and New York Transportation Company is expected to precipitate a fight that may mean the disruption of the Hylan administration.

Dock Commissioner Murray Hulbert will strenuously oppose rescinding the lease, and it is expected he will have the support of Mayor Hylan and Alfred E. Smith, President of the Board of Aldermen. In a statement yesterday Commissioner Hulbert defended his action in recommending that the pier he leased to the Pawtucket company. He said he considered that the city had made a good bargain in the lease and that the city stands to lose no money by it. The Commissioner also accused the Controller of trying to "do everything himself" and hinted that if he were not allowed a free hand in the disposal of the city's piers he would resign.

If a lineup in the Sinking Fund Commission occurs, it is likely that Controller Craig will be placed in the position of opposing not only Mayor Hylan but the Tammany members of the board. President Smith has already had several clashes with Mr. Craig, and the Mayor has supported all the recommendations of Commissioner Hurlbert in regard to leasing piers. President Smith was not present when the commission voted to award the lease of Pier 69 North River to the Hudson Dock and Terminal Corporation for $25,000, although the Occident Dock Company had bid $30,000 for the same privilege, but, as Chairman of the Committee of the Sinking Fund Commission he aproved of leasing the Fifth Street pier to the Pawtucket Company. Regarding the latest pier lease, Dock Commissioner Hulbert said yesterday:

"I consider that the proposed bargain was a perfectly good one. This company wants the 200 feet of the pier for $8,400, whereas we had been getting only $7,714 for the entire pier in wharfage charges, which have to be collected by salaried dockmasters. The steamship company would pay its rent quarterly at my office, in advance. Then we would have the remaining 264 feet of the pier, for which I figure we could get as much in wharfage as the entire pier now brings.

The Commissioner feels deeply the criticism that has been made regarding his approval of the leasing of Pier 69 North River to the Hudson Dock Company.

"As you know," he said, "I have decided to put up Pier 60 North River at auction as an object lesson. Now, here is something I am going to tell you, something for which I will be criticised by Controller Craig and others, but I don't care if I am. I know I am right. I am going to lease to the French line for three years Pier 84 at the foot of West Forty-fourth Street for $1,000 a week. I could get more than twice that sum for this pier at auction from a stevedore who would use it for profiteering.

TO TAKE BACK OPERATORS.

Western Union Men Who Lost Their Jobs Will Be Reinstated.

Newcomb Carlton, President of the Western Union Telegraph Company, refused yesterday to discuss what his action would be in regard to the ruling of the National War Labor Board on Friday that all employes should be retained by the Western Union Telegraph Company in accordance with the national labor agreement approved by the President that no employes should be discharged for organizing during the war.

The Western Union has discharged 370 telegraph operators for joining the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America as the result of organization meetings held throughout the country several weeks ago. It was said yesterday at the offices of the Western Union that forty-eight of the operators who had been discharged for joining the union had withdrawn from it and would be taken back into the employment of the company.

LINKS CAILLAUX WITH TREASON CASES

Constantly Forced to Pronounce Ex-Premier's Name, Bonnet Rouge Prosecutor Says.

TRIAL IS NEAR ITS CLOSE

Caillaux's Connection with Almereyda, and Later with Marx, Detailed in Summing Up.

PARIS, May 11.—The trial of the Directors of the Bonnet Rouge, the defunct Socialist and Germanophile newspaper, entered its last phases today, when Captain Mornet, the Prosecutor, summed up his case for the State. Captain Mornet began by explaining that this was not a press trial, but an affair of treason and relations with the enemy. He said that by conversations about the San Stefano Casino Company with Marx, the Mannheim banker, M. Duval, one of the accused, had been drawn little by little into treason, receiving money from Marx and working for an early peace between France and Germany.

The Prosecutor recited the history of the Bonnet Rouge, recalling that one of its Directors, Miguel Almereyda, who died before the trial began, had, with six judicial condemnations against his record, received 40,000 francs from Joseph Caillaux, ex-Premier, in February, 1914. The Bonnet Rouge, he said, had violently defended Mme. Caillaux following the shooting by her of Editor Calmette in March, 1914. He said that Almereyda had formed a bodyguard to escort M. Caillaux to the courtroom and had distributed cards of admission to the trial of Mme. Caillaux.

Captain Mornet showed the parallel between fifteen peace campaigns by the Bonnet Rouge and the Gazette des Ardennes, a newspaper published in the French language by Germans in occupied sections of Northern France. He read articles showing the peace at any price policy of the Bonnet Rouge. One quotation was:

"President Wilson's action is evidently a victory for those who will fight to the bitter end, but war is not won by such victories."

The connection of M. Caillaux with the present case was closely examined by the Prosecutor, who said:

"Marx is such an important agent of Germany that when the German Government wished to enter into relations, or renew relations, with the French ex-Premier, who, it believed, rightly or wrongly, was favorable to it, it sent two documents to the ex-Premier's Paris address. One offered an appointment and the other gave the address of Banker Marx. Both were seized in M. Caillaux's safe in a Florence bank. The first read: 'Lipsher not appearing desirable as an intermediary, I put myself at your disposal. I am authorized to establish relations such as you desire.' The other read: 'H. A. Marx, care of Professor Erbertz, 27 Stoernerstrasse, Berne.'

"I think I am entitled to identify the H. A. Marx of the Caillaux affair as the H. A. Marx of the Bonnet Rouge affair. We are not trying M. Caillaux yet, but I am compelled to pronounce his name every time I deal with a case of treason."

This caused a sensation in the court room, and there was a ripple of applause, at which the Presiding Judge threatened to clear the court.

TREE STOPS DIRIGIBLE NEAR JAMAICA, L. I.

Navy Aircraft, in Test Flight, Driven Downward by Air—Little Damage Done.

A United States Navy dirigible of the non-rigid type, that has been floating over the city aiding in the Liberty Loan campaign and also testing its apparatus, was forced to land near Jamaica yesterday after part of its apparatus had caught in a treetop while the balloon was on its way back to its coast station after a short test flight.

While the balloon was drifting at slow speed over the Jamaica estates it took a sudden dip with an air current over the property of Michael Degnon, a subway contractor, about a mile northeast of Jamaica, and part of the rigging was torn by a limb of a high tree. The escape of the gas caused the balloon to tilt downward, but it went down slowly and the three men in the car were not injured.

As soon as the balloon was on the ground the men, two of whom were enlisted men, with an ensign in command, began work of detaching the car and rolling up the silk. Before a crowd of small boys and men had arrived from Jamaica the men had their dirigible ready to load in an automobile to be taken to their station, and the car was left in a garage under guard.

The damage to the dirigible, it was said, could be repaired in a few hours at small cost. The cause of the accident, it was said, was a sudden change in air currents causing the balloon to descend and catch on the high tree that was on an elevation in the ground.

The officer said he had no time to throw out ballast to cause the balloon to mount higher, and that the efforts of the men to avoid the tree by manipulating the steering apparatus had prevented a serious accident. The branch caught only a part of the apparatus.

FISH PROMISED AT 10C. A POUND

Food Administration Predicts Era of Low Prices from May to December.

LICENSES FOR THE DEALERS

Salt Water Fish to be Sold in Atlantic Coast Markets Daily Until December.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—The Food Administration announced today that the high prices for fish were unjustified, and that every day from May to December dealers could sell at a fair profit at least one variety of fish at not more than 10 cents a pound. At present as high as 25 cents a pound is quoted.

Fish now available on the low-price basis, the wholesale price on the Atlantic Coast ranging from 4 to 6 cents a pound, includes, according to the Food Administration, market cod, scrod cod, scrod haddock, haddock, medium hake, skate wings, butterfish, (small,) spotted trout, (small,) weakfish, (small,) small mackerel, drum, menhaden, shark, sea robins, spots, grayfish, ling, flounders, shad herring, whiting, and croakers.

It is the purpose of the Food Administration to add other lists as the runs develop. The fishing industry is now under a licensing system, which, however, does not provide a definite check upon the retailers. In order to encourage the industry the Food Administration has arranged for the withdrawal of all licensing systems adopted by States, which affect waters from the headlands to the three-mile limits. This has brought about encouraging results.

"Supplies are now being rapidly augmented," an announcement today read. "While the runs of migratory shore fish are only beginning and the maximum catches of the different varieties will not be completely felt until the latter part of May and thereafter, wholesale prices quite generaly are already down to relatively low levels and should remain on this basis, except when storms and climatic changes in the various districts bring about temporary shortages.

"On every day in each week and continually during the present season from May to December some of the many varieties of salt water fish will be available and sold in the wholesale markets along the Atlantic Coast at prices ranging from four to six cents per pound. In view of these conditions, all retailers in the large cities along the Atlantic Coast and in the towns and cities of the interior, within reachable transportation distance from the Atlantic seaboard, will be able to sell every weekday at least one variety of fish at a retail price to consumers of ten cents per pound or under.

BORGLUM MAKES SWEEPING DENIAL

Mix Charges Pure Invention Framed to Kill Aircraft Inquiry, He Asserts.

DEFENDS MOTIVES AS GOOD

Says He Encouraged Aircraft Promotion from Patriotism and Without Hope of Profit.

Repealing bis denial that he had sought to enter the aircraft field on a commercial baeis either before or after receiving the letter from President Wilson authorizing him to investigate the aircraft situation, Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, asserted yesterday that the charges against him had been inspired by Colonel Deeds of the Aircraft Board and that false testimony against him had been purchased by the award of large aircraft contracts to the witnesses against him.

Mr. Borglum admitted that he had been interested in trying to improve American airplanes, but denied that he had any patents on aircraft devices or that he had ever sought or expected to make a dollar by his efforts.

He asserted that he had information that Secretary of War Baker had made public the charges against him with the object of preventing a thorough aircraft inquiry. He asserted that a confidential friend of the President had warned him, immediately after he had submitted his preliminary report charging graft and mismanagement, that he must drop the investigation at once or charges ruinous to his reputation would be made public. He said that the confidential friend of the President conveyed to him this warning in New York City. He refused to name the man at this time.

Mr. Borglum asserted that President Wilson, in giving out the letters which he had sent to Mr. Borglum regarding the investigation, had not made a complete record. He said that important letters from the President to him had been held back. He said that he would not make public the unpublished part of the correspondences and that, if it were made public, it would have to come from the President.

He said that this part of the correspondence would show that he enjoyed the confidence and good-will of the President long after the alleged conspiracy had been set on foot to discredit him with the President.

Calls Charges an Invention.

Mr. Borglum said that the charge that he had entered upon business relations with Kenyon W. Mix, Jr., his main accuser, was wholly an invention. He said Mix had volunteered to assist him in the investigation for the President, and had pretended to be working for him up to the time when, Mr. Borglum asserted, Mix obtained a large airplane contract. This, Mr. Borglum asserts, was followed immediately by the charges, which he brands as perjury.

Mr. Borglum said that, after their first meeting, Mr. Mix said he was interested in a plan to build a high-speed battleplane of laminated woods, which would be much lighter than anything in use. Mr. Borglum said he offered to help Mr. Mix in every way possible, but never in the remotest way negotiated for a part in any company to be formed. This meeting took place last December, prior to the President's letter authorizing an investigation, which was received by the sculptor on Jan. 3.

"After receiving that letter," Mr. Borglum said, "I ceased to interest myself in the new propeller and in everything else of a private nature, although even before that time I had been working solely for the benefit of the country, without any expectation to profit in the slightest degree."

Regarding the charge that the sculptor had sought to form a company with Mr. Mix as one of the partners and had offered his influence with the President as an asset, Mr. Borglum commented on the fact that the correspondence published showed that Mix had originally suggested such a company in a letter, dated Dec. 28, to Hugo C. Gibson and that on Jan. 12, according to Mr. Mix's affidavit, Mr. Mix was ignorant of the sculptor's connections in Washington. The statement of Mr. Mix in his affidavit follows:

"At this time I did not as yet know Mr. Borglum's connections in Washington, nor what his ability to furnish designs would be, and consequently I hesitated at making a final commitment of our position, beyond saying that, should such a company be created, the Dodge Manufacturing Company stood ready to furnish to the construction company all experimental work on the first plane and all laminated wood materials, in addition to a plant necessary for the assembling of the plane."

Statement "Utterly False."

Mr. Borglum said: "The statement or implication that I was negotiating on any basis to form a company is utterly false. I did not even know of the Mix letter to Mr. Gibson before its publication today. I never discussed the matter of joining a company on any basis. But, putting that aside, this statement of Mr. Mix is that several conferences on the matter were held before he learned of my connections in Washington. That would show in the first place that there was no scheme of using my connections for the benefit of the company during the first two weeks while the company was being talked of."

Mr Borglum said that there was also a striking discrepancy between the statement by Mix that he was ignorant on Jan. 12 of Mr. Borglum's relations in Washington, and the affidvit of H. H. Suppiee. Although Mr. Suppiee is mentioned by Mr. Mix as attending conferences on the subject prior to Jan. 12, Mr. Suppiee says in his affidavit:

"I.—That in all my relations concerning the matter of promotion of stock company for the manufacture of airplanes during which I was present at several conferences with the projectors of this enterprise as a consulting engineer, I desire to state that there never was any other understanding of this project but that Mr. Borglum was to be represented in the corporation by Mr. Harris and that his sole asset in the transaction was to be, first, his personal association and friendship with President Wilson, whom he stated he could do anything he wanted with."

Mr. Borglum was asked regarding the statement that he had authorized Benjamin Harris to act for him in the company. He said: "That is completely false."

Mr. Borglum was in communication with Mr. Harris yesterday and asked him for an affidavit setting forth all his relations with the matter. A formal statement given out by Mr. Borglum follows:

Borglum's Formal Statement.

"Let us dispose of the two questions separately, raised by Deeds's former agent, Mix, and Mix's engineer. Their first and foremost charge is that I used the President's authority improperly and in a manner unthinkable between men in mutual confidence. I deny this. It is a 'frameup,' shaped especially to offend, as it properly should, the President. My regret is that it seems to have been successful, and he published, unfairly to me and without warning, some of his letters to me. About this time I received further information from a confidant of the President that the Administration now possessed a club that would put me out of business if I did not quit.

"Their second charge is that I was party to or in some way or another was secretly engaged in airplane production, using my position and confidence of the President to this advantage. I deny that falsehood in every detail, as unfounded, without reason or support. I wish also to add, regarding Mix, that he came to my attention through his own charges against the Aircraft Board, and submitted a lengthy typed statement, charging the aircraft department with culpable retardation and delays prejudicial to the intereets of the country. The original of this statement was returned to Mr. Mix at his earnest pleadings, after he had confessed that he had been in touch with a uniformed member of the board, and, by his own statement, had been heavily commissioned by that member. Mix is a witness for specific charges of 'crookedness' he himself charges against Colonel Deeds and Deeds's 'partners,' and will, if the Government does not persist in whitewashing this entire business, be compelled to appear as a party with Deeds in matters Mix himself designated as 'crooked.'

"Regarding Mr. Baker's statement of pro-German influence: This unfortunate, statement from an officer of the Government whose office has resisted successfully every effort to investigate and get at the truth upon any subject relating to the war, and whose department is amply supplied with advisers, close in the confidence of the Secretary, of Teutonic origin, is ludicrous. I do not here impugn the patriotism of any of these men. I do say, candidly and emphatically, that it is unfair to ask German blood, though born in America, to be as prompt in war demands in the execution of their orders against their Fatherland. Never has a department of a government of a great nation submitted an agent of its executive to such contemptible, unjustified sleuthing and general interference as was prosecuted against me in my work, and I challenge Mr. Baker or any department of the Government to investigate or to explain and justify in any way their conduct in this.

"Frame-Up Deliberately Planned."

"Every American knows now that the War Department has systematically directed the opposition to investigate; that every subterfuge has been resorted to gain time. Every investigation—and there have been many—has been instituted with a prayer and hope that a clean bill would be secured, and it is now clear that this final 'frame-up' was deliberately planned and laid in preparation to destroy the value and validity of my investigation.

"It should not be forgotten that I have been accused indirectly of the death of Blakeley, a fine, sober youth, who lost his life at Mineola on the 17th of January through the failure of the Liberty motor; also, that I have been accused of stealing a trunkful of blueprints of a famoue Italian airplane, and that these, with the present charges and possibly others, have been in the hands of the Military Intelligence Department, Secretary Baker, Mr. Coffin, and now, I learn, of Vice President of the United States Marshall, together with the President of the United States, and that no use was made of them, and that I have never been given an opportunity to explain or know of them officially until it became apparent last week that I would stand by the subject until it was investigated.

"I am sorry, more than I can say, that we should suddenly be thrown into a difference over a proper affair, an honest investigation that honest men never object to, and I cannot but think that the Secretary of War's blow at me is other than a colossal blunder. Personally, I am not of the remoteet importance in this matter. The nation demands to know why a billion dollars in eleven months haa provided us with no planes. Next, it demands to know who is responsible. There has a graver question arisen: Who is it that is so powerful, and where are they, that makes it impoasible and dangerous to the character and honor of men that they ehall aek this question?

"GUTZON BORGLUM."

Reveals Grotesque Rumor.

When Mr. Borglum was asked what he meant by his reference to "Secretary Baker's charges" of pro-Germanism, he said he knew that such charges had emanated from men close to the Secretary, and he had assumed that they had been printed. He said he had not read in detail the lengthy statements which had been made public, but assumed that all the charges against him which had been privately circulated had been made public. When he was asked about the charge that he had been indirectly connected with the death of Aviator Blakeley, he said:

"It was whispered about that I had bribed an alleged degenerate Frenchman of pro-German leanings to dope the pilot so that a fatal accident would occur, in order that I might blame it on the Liberty motor."

Mr. Borglum was asked to explain a telegram sent on Dec. 31 by him to Mix, which, as a document emanating from Borglum, rather than from his accusers, was put forward as a strong corroboration of their charges. This telegam was as follows:

Stamford, Conn., Dec. 31, 1917.

Like your suggestion to Gibson. Write me fully part you and your company can play. I have a staff of experts with the best foreign experience, who can come close to delivery 100 per cent. article. Necessary can arrange finances also with the best New York banks. Washington is watchful but waiting overtime. Your idea and mine should be rushed to the limit. We should guarantee the boys in France 500 of our fifters machines the world by May 1, but not a minute can be lost—not a minute during the next ninety days. A happy New Year to you. BORGLUM.

"That was sent in reference to the plan for building a new battleplane of lighter construction which had been suggested by Mr. Mix. It sounded like an excellent idea, and I was willing to do all that I could to forward it. By the statement that I had a staff of experts, I referred to Mr. Gibson, several engineers of the Aeronautical Society and others. I meant that it was necesary that he should have sound financial backing before he could make any progress with it. I was anxious to help him with ideas and to get plans of this type built, but it never occurred to me to consider going into the enterprise myself. The telegram was sent on Dec. 31, three days before my empowering letter arrived from the President."

His Interest in Propellers.

When he was asked about his lettere to the President, Secretary Baker, General Squier, and others, trying to interest them in his plans for airplane improvements, Mr. Borglum sat down and wrote out this statement:

"Regarding the propeller: I have a design of a propeller, together with designs of planes, in my study of aerodynamics, but hold no patents, nor have I ever applied for patents, nor commercialized my investigations. My trip to Dayton with Mr. Gibson was to be of such assistance as I might be in placing Gibson, a high-class propeller man, in a position for providing propellers for the De Haviland M-4. Nothing ever came of thie, and the date of this was early in December, a month before I was asked by the President to come at once to Washington.

"The meeting Mix speaks of with Gibson, Harris, Supplee, et al., I knew nothing about. I was never present at any, and never sent messages to it through any—one or both—representatives there, as stated above. I am and have been wholly and entirely free from any connection that improperly relates me with the work I went to Washington to investigate."

President Proclaims May 30 a Day of Prayer For the Safety and Welfare of Our Cause

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—President Wilson today issued a proclamation setting May 30 (Memorial Day) as "a day of public humiliation, prayer, and fasting," on which prayers should be offered for victory for our armies and an early peace. The proclamation is in accordance with a resolution of Congress. Its text follows:

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES,

A Proclamation.

Whereas, The Congress of the United States, on the second day of April last, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved by the Senate, (the House of Representatives concurring,) That it being a duty peculiarly incumbent in a time of war humbly and devoutly to acknowledge our dependence on Almighty God and to implore His aid and protection, the President of the United States be, and he is hereby, respectfully requested to commend a day of public humiliation, prayer, and fasting, to be observed by the people of the United States with religious solemnity and the offering of fervent supplications to Almighty God for the safety and welfare of our cause, His blessings on our arms, and a speedy restoration of an honorable and lasting peace to the nations of the earth;"

And whereas, It has always been the reverent habit of the people of the United States to turn in humble appeal to Almighty God for His guidance in the affairs of their common life;

Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim Thursday, the thirtieth of May, a day already freighted with sacred and stimulating memories, a day of public humiliation, prayer, and fasting, and do exhort my fellow-citizens of all faiths and creeds to assemble on that day in their several places of worship and there, as well as in their homes, to pray Almighty God that His may forgive our sins and shortcomings as a people and purify our hearte to see and love the truth, to accept and defend all things that are just and right, and to purpose only those righteous acts and judgments which are in conformity with His will; beseeching Him that He will give victory to our armies as they fight for freedom, wisdom to those who take counsel on our behalf in these days of dark atruggle and perplexity, and steadfastness to our people to make sacrifice to the utmost in support of what is just and true, bringing us at last the peace in which men's hearts can be at rest because it is founded upon mercy, justice, and good-will.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia this eleventh day of May, in the year of our Lord nineteen hundred and eighteen, and of the independence of the United States the one hundred and forty-second.

WOODROW WILSON.

By the President,
Robert Lansing,
Secretary of State.

BRISTOL AIRPLANE CALLED A FAILURE

Has Not Been Co-ordinated with Any Engine, Senators Learn at War Council.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Members of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, after their weekly conference at the War Department today with the War Council, expreased great disappointment over the reports on aircraft production. An increase in the production of the Liberty motor was reported, but an almost complete failure in the Bristol airplane, upon which the Government was depending for good results, waa made known by the committee.

According to Senators, the experts had placed great hopes in this plane, which was being made by the Curtiss Aeroplane Company. Despite many experiments, no engine has been found which exactly fits the plane, and unless some radical change can be made in the plane or an engine developed suitable to the machine, none of the Bristol machines can be obtained in the next ten months, members of the committee said.

It is planned by the sub-committee, which will investigate ordnance production, to begin its inquiry early next week. The committee will first inspect the Bethlehem plant, and will be accompanied by Edward R. Stettinius, Assistant Secretary of War, and Brig. Gen. Williams, Acting Chief of Ordnance.

Publicity given to letters concerning Gutzon Borglum's alleged effort to form an aircraft production company while engaged in a special aircraft investigation for President Wilson, has not altered in any way the intention of the Senate Military Committee to go fully into the aircraft situation. Chairman Chamberlain of the committee said today that the committee would make an inquiry independent of the Department of Justice for the specific purpose of finding the exact status of aircraft production.

Demands Open Sessions.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Lester P. Barlow of New Haven, inventor of the Barlow bomb and other devices for aerial warfare, has written a letter to Chairman Chamberlain of the Senate Committee on Military Affairs, in which he intimates that the Military Committee does not intend to go to the bottom of the aircraft situation, as Senator Chamberlain had promised. Mr. Barlow is to appear before the committee as a witness next week, and in his letter to Mr. Chamberlain he says that he will not testify unless the doors are opened.

M'ADOO TO REVISE RAILROAD WAGES

Understood He Will Change Schedules Recommended in Report of Commission.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Secretary McAdoo, who is still suffering from tonsilitis, spent a large part of the day propped up in bed studying the Railroad Wage Commission's report, and keeping three stenographers busy replying to letters on wage and other railroad and Treasury matters. Many suggestions and complaints on recommendation of the Wage Commission have reached him. All of them, together with the report itself, have been referred to heads of divisions of the Railroad Administration for study.

It is understood that the Director General will make many changes in the schedules recommended before ordering their adoption. Mr. McAdoo expects to return to his offices early next week.

The first formal protest against the Wage Commission's recommendations was filed today by the Brotherhood of Railroad Station Employes.

"It will be absolutely impossible for the railroads to maintain a permanent force of freight handlers at the rates indicated in the recommendations," the protest said, "in view of the fact that they have not recommended the basic eight-hour day."

The statement said that freight handlers would receive an increase of 12 cents a day, making their wages for ten hours $2.77, while yard brakemen in the same territory would be advanced from $3.50 to $4.77 for eight hours.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba, May 11.—Wages of railroad trainmen, conductors, baggagemen and switchmen in Canada will be increased proportionately to the increase in wages for the same class of work in the United States within the next few weeks, it was announced today by M. H. McLeod, Vice President and General Manager of the Canadian Northern Railway. He declared that as soon as the proposed wage increase in the United States went into effect he would take steps to duplicate it here, in accordance with the railroads' agreement made last January. The same agreement applies to the Canadian Pacific and affects thousands of men.

MAYOR HYLAN LEADS CITY POLICE PARADE

Carries Silk Flag and Wears Silk Hat Up Broadway and Down the Avenue.

NEW WOMEN POLICE MARCH

Regular Men of the Department Make Usual Fine Appearance—The Reserves a Feature.

New York never saw euch a police parade as it witnessed yesterday. There were any number of curious things in it that had little to do with the police department; but, most startling of all was the appearance at the head of the procession for the first time of the Mayor of the city. Taking the lead at the Battery where the parade started, Mayor Hylan with a new silk hat on his head, a little silk flag in his hand, and a smile of contentment on his face, marched all the way up Broadway and down Fifth Avenue.

The Mayor smashed police parade traditions, first by being in it himself; second, by having the official head of the department, Commissioner Enright, in the parade instead of in the reviewing stand, from which former Commissioners have always watched the parade with the Mayor, and, third, by presenting to the people of New York a unit of the so-called women police, mobilized and equipped by Deputy Police Commissioner Rodman Wanamaker as a sort of auxiliary to the Police Reserve. They wore police caps, blue jackets, blue skirts, and white spats over black shoes.

A clear, bright day, with battalions of blue-coated policemen marching through the main thoroughfares of the city, reminded thousands of the days of peace when a policeman was the most militariatic thing the American people could boast of, and when New York's annual parade was the biggest and often the only parade of the year worth watching.

Taken by themselves the real policemen formed as fit and as finely trained a body of men as the city ever had to keep it on its good behavior.

Leading the parade, the Mayor would wave a greeting to the spectators with his flag or with his hat, showing much pleasure when he was cheered and a little irritation when he was not.

At Forty-first Street the parade cut back from Broadway to Fifth Avenue and marched down to the reviewing stand at Twenty-fifth Street, where Mayor Hylan's appearance at the head of the procession with his secretary, Grover Whalen, close behind, aroused considerable applause, the grand stands on both sides of the avenue being largely filled by the Mayor's supporters and neighbors from Bushwick.

Upon his arrival at the reviewing stand Mayor Hylan decorated six policemen for the most conspicuous acts of bravery during the year 1917. For making daring rescues of men from drowning, Patrolman Charles A. McNally of the 102d Precinct received the Department Medal of Honor, and Sergeant Joseph T. Weckesser of the Marine Division received the Isaac Bell medal for bravery. For stopping a team of runaway horses at great personal risk Patrolman Charles C. Steinert of the Headquarters Division received the Peter F. Meyer medal. For making daring arrests of criminals, Patrolman Edward H. Machel of the 104th Precinct received the Rhinelander medal for valor, Patrolman Henry Mauderer of the 38th Precinct received the Automobile Club of America medal, and Patrolman Patrick Feeley of the 118th Precinct received the Brooklyn Citizens medal.

After the Mayor had concluded his short speech to the honor men, in which he told them that the deeds they had performed would "live long in the memory of the police force and would inspire other men to make the highest sacrifices in the name of law and order," he returned to his box in the reviewing stand.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment, followed by a platoon composed of the Deputy and Special Deputy Police Commissioners, preceded the main column, which was led by Acting Chief Inspector John Daly and his staff, all mounted. The presence of the staff attracted particular attention because of the appearance of two police chaplains, the Rev. John A. Wade and the Rev. John J. Coogan, on horseback. Then followed the honor battalion of several hundred policemen who had received honor medals for conepicuous acts of service in former years, and then the regulars of the department.

One section in square formation carried the service flag of 525 stars which aroused cheers all along the line. Immediately preceding the service flag was a battalion of sailors and anothr battalion of khaki-clad men—all former policemen but now enlisted in their country's service. Then came a section of men who wore the police uniform, but who carried rifles instead of nightsticks. They were policemen who had ecen service in the Spanish-American war or who were veterane of eome military branch of the service. Among the units in the procession which had been developed as part of the home defense since America entered the war were the machine gun troop of the Police Department, the Aviation Corps, and the main section of the Police Reserve, formerly the Home Defense League, in which appeared several thousand men.

Wearing slate-colored uniforms, the members of the Police Reserve formed such a large portion of the marching force, that they formed a parade in themselves, apart from the regular police who had preceded. Twenty-one members of the Police Reserve received medals of honor from Commissioner Enright for their readiness for service whenever called upon. These men were Colonels Frank Simons, Jacob D. Wilson, Avery McDougall, Warren Leslie, Morris Joseph, William E. Wood; Majors John D. Leo, Lewis E. Waterman, George A. Swann, Patrick J. Harkins, Frederick F. Philips, Charles L. Cammann, Jr.; Captains Herbert W. Schnobel, William E. Horn, James A. Dillingham; Lieutenant Charles S. Laney, and Sergeants A. Walpole Craige, Frank Crosby, and Albert F. Wilken.

Mayor Hylan and Commissioner Enright were also recipients of medals. These medals were presented to them by Deputy Commissioner Wanamaker for their activity in the Liberty Loan campaign.

During the intervals of the parade, the Police Glee Club, led by Frank L. Safford, with Policemen Frank Campbell and Benny Jacobs as soloists, entertained the guests in the grandstand.

POLICEMEN PRAISE HYLAN.

Traffic Men at Dinner Hail New Commissioner from the Ranks.

Mayor Hylan and Police Commissioner Enright were praised and cheered last night at the Traffic Policemen's dinner at the Waldorf, attended by 750 traffic policemen and their guests.

Sergeant Patrick F. Crans, President of the Traffic Division, said that Mayor Hylan had greatly increased the efficiency of the Police Department by appointing a uniformed man to head the force, and that Commissioner Enright had already proved the superiority of a man trained in every branch of police duty as the occupant of the Commissioner's chair at Police Headquarters. The policemen at the dinner then sang a song composed for the occasion in honor of the new Commissioner.

After complimenting Mayor Hylan for taking his place on foot at the head of the police parade, Commissioner Enright said that spirit of confidence and pride which had been inspired in the rank and file of the Police Department by the appointment of one of their number to head it had made it possible to police the city efficiently in spite of the increased burden of the work due to the war and to the withdrawal of 525 men from the department by enlistment in the service of the nation.

Others included in the speakers' list were Deputy Commissioner John A. Harriss, Special Deputy Commissioner Job E. Hedges, President William Fellowes Morgan of the Merchants' Association, President Frederick D. Underwood of the Erie Railroad, Chief Magistrate McAdoo, Controller Craig, George T. Wilson, the Rev. John J. Coogan, Mayor Hylan, and Colonel Herman A. Metz.

President Alfred E. Smith of the Board of Aldermen, who spoke yesterday at the dinner of the two motor cycle squads of the Police Department at Rector's, said:

"We have the best organized and most highly specialized traffic police in the world. Their duties will increase and become more difficult until the time when the East River is filled in and new arteries of travel are produced. Motor cycle men are doing splendid work in curbing the reckless drivers of motor vehicles."

Mayor Hylan, Borough President Dowling, and several others spoke at the dinner. The same speakers and several others made addresses last night at the dinner of 300 members of the Mounted Police Association of New York at Murray's restaurant in Forty-second Street.

Do You Know What Happens to Your Furs?

How much do you take on faith, in storing your Winter Furs for the Summer?

To make possible a shaved price for such storage, it may be that the service is skimped—that your dyed furs are hung up in ordinary storage, outside the cold chamber where the natural furs are placed.

That is a form of unwise destructive economy.

Every piece of fur and every fur-trimmed garment intrusted to us is placed in dry, cold-air storage, with proper ventilation and ample individual space. It receives the constant watchfulness of a skilled, year-round organization. You can see your furs, any time, on ten minutes' notice.

And we make only a reasonable charge—the lowest at which adequate service may be rendered.

SALVATIONIST FUND REACHES $100,108

Workers, Heartened by First Week's Returns, Hope to Complete Quota in Closing Days.

WALL STREET GIVES AID

Financiers Buy Flowers for Mothers' Day—Soldiers Get Generous Collections.

The first week of the campaign of the Salvation Army to raise $250,000 in New York City for its war work ended yesterday, and it was announced last night that $100,108 had been collected. George Gordon Battle, Chairman of the War Committee, at a meeting of the team captains held in the afternoon in the Railroad Club, 30 Church Street, officially announced that the campaign would continue until May 18, and preparations are under way to push the drive with renewed vigor.

The Chairman, Commander, officers, and lads and lassies who invaded every part of the city with their organs and their tambourines, were optimistic when the figures for the week were announced. All are sure that New York will continue its generous giving, and that this city will raise its quota in the national campaign for $2,000,000 to be used in sustaining and enlarging the army's war work in France.

Young women in the blue uniform of the organization invaded the financial district yesterday forenoon. They carried baskets piled high with roses and carnations, which were sold for the benefit of the work as Mothers' Day offerings. The price asked was "10 cents and as much more as you will give." Usually it was the "much more" and there were more half dollars and quarters exchanged for flowers than there were dimes. Indeed, one worker remarked to another that dimes seemed to be ostracised in Wall Street. From trucks drawn up at street corners men in khaki addressed public meetings and told of the work which the Salvation Army is doing behind the lines and in the trenches in France. It was very seldom that the appeals did not meet with a response and much money was collected in this way.

Two women in a limousine caused a mild sensation in Times Square yesterday afternoon. The car drew up beside three Salvation Army women, who were telling the crowd of the organization's work in France, and at the same time passing around their tambourines. The two women in the car lowered the window to hear what was being said. Finally they alighted and walking up to the Salvation Army women handed $12 to one of them, saying: "We have only this much with us today. We have agreed between us never to ride in an automobile again for pleasure as long as this war may last. We want to be of practical use. You have certainly taught us a lesson. Where are your headquarters? We are going there."

Having said this one of the women ordered the chauffeur to take the automobile back to the garage. Both refused to give their names.

Members of the Elks and of the Tobacco Salesmen's Association assisted the army workers on the streets last night, not only aiding in the collection of money, but doing the even more important work of enlightening the public as to work the Salvation Army is doing for the American Expeditionary Force in France.

The outstanding feature of yesterday's efforts was the coming forward of prominent business men who stated that they had not heretofore realized the extent and merit of the army's war work. Elaborate plans are being worked for the last week of the drive. For one thing, new teams are being formed to work in every part of the city. Mr. Battle, in announcing the continuation of the drive until May 18, said it would not interfere with the Red Cross drive, which is scheduled to begin on May 20. In fact, he said, the Salvation Army is to help the Red Cross.

Manager Edell of the Strand Theatre announced yesterday that beginning Sunday afternoon there would be shown for one week at his playhouse as a part of the pictograph scientific pictures a film showing the Salvation Army in its extensive war work preparations on this side. He further gave consent to the Salvation Army to place in the aisles some of the uniformed women to ask for aid.

Demurs in Ranger Will Case.

STAMFORD, Conn., May 11.—Edith F. Ranger of New York appeared in court today, demurred to a complaint charging her with conspiracy in the making of a fraudulent will of her brother, H. W. Ranger, and gave bonds for trial in Superior Court. Two lawyers have been arrested in this case. The object of the spurious will was to deprive the National Academy of Design of a $250,000 legacy.

RESERVE BANKS GAIN $23,200,000 IN GOLD

ACCEPTANCES FALL OFF

Loss of $11,000,000 in These Holdings Reported—Large Gain in Investments.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Aggregate gains of $23,200,000 in gold reserves, traceable in part to cash payments for Liberty bonds and accompanied by larger increases in deposits and investments, are shown in the weekly bank statement of the Federal Reserve Board issued as at the close of business on May 10, 1918. Substantial gains in reserves reported by the Philadelphia, Richmond, St. Louis, Kansas City, Dallas, and San Francisco banks are accompanied by gains in deposits and additional note issues, also by liquidation of balances due from other Federal Reserve banks.

Discounts on hand show an increase of $65,600,000, the New York bank alone reporting a gain of $48,900,000. Of the total, nearly two-thirds, or $612,300,000, as against $606,700,000 the week before, is represented by paper secured by Government war obligations. Acceptances on hand fell off about $11,000,000, all the Western and Southern banks with the exception of Richmond, showing smaller holdings than the week before. Holdings of United States bonds declined $1,100,000, Philadelphia and Chicago reporting the largest decreases under this head.

An increase of about $75,000,000 in Government short-term securities is reported by the New York bank. This amount of certificates was issued to the bank in anticipation of payments to Government account for Liberty bonds and will be liquidated in a few days. Total earning assets show an increase for the week of $123,200,000.

Admission to membership of State banks and trust companies and payment for Federal Reserve Bank stock account largely for the increase of $69,000 in paid-in capital, mainly of the New York, Atlanta, and Dallas banks.

Government deposits show an increase of $64,600,000, mainly at the New York, Cleveland, St. Louis, and San Francisco banks. Members reserve deposits show a net gain of $73,600,000, New York, Philadelphia, and Cleveland reporting the largest increases under this head.

Net issues of Federal Reserve notes during the week totaled $36,400,000. The amount of Federal Reserve notes in actual circulation is stated as $1,560,600,000, an increase of $13,000,000 for the week.

HOLD MORE U. S. BONDS.

Member Banks Also Report Large Liquidation of Indebtedness Certificates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Large increases in demand deposits as against net withdrawals of Government deposits, mainly from New York City banks, together with liquidation in some volume of certificates of indebtedness and of loans secured by Government war obligations, are indicated by the weekly statement of the condition of 686 member banks in leading cities as at the close of business on May 3.

Total reported holdings of United States bonds, including Liberty bonds, show an increase of $5,400,000, though Central Reserve city banks report a reduction under this head of about $1,600,000.

Certificates of indebtedness for the first time since April 5 show a decrease for the week, largely through liquidation of certificates issued in anticipation of tax payments. Total holdings of United States securities declined $17,400,000, while loans protected by such securities decreased $4,400,000. As against these decreases, other loans and investments show an increase of $52,200,000, and total loans and investments an increase of over $30,000,000. Of the latter, Government securities and loans supported by such securities constituted 20 per cent., or slightly less than for the last week in April.

Reported reserves, about 79 per cent. of the total held by the Federal Reserve Banks, show a loss of $18,300,000, and cash in vault a gain of $6,300,000. For the central reserve city banks reductions of about $29,000,000 in reserve and of $2,400,000 in cash are shown.

Aggregate net demand deposits increased during the week by $150,500,000, time deposits decreased $2,800,000 and Government deposits decreased $63,300,000. For the central reserve city banks an increase of $119,900,000 in net demand deposits is shown, as against reductions of $37,100,000 in time deposits and of $68,800,000 in Government deposits.

The ratio of loans and investments to total, including Government deposits, shows a decline from 110.8 to 110.1 per cent.; for the central reserve city banks this ratio declined from 107 to 106.2 per cent.

The ratio of combined cash and reserve to total deposits of all reporting banks declined from 13.9 to 13.6 per cent., while for the central reserve city banks this ratio shows an even larger decline from 15.3 to 14.8 per cent.

Excess reserves of all reporting banks declined from $97,500,000 to $60,900,000. For the central reserve city banks a decline from $76,700,000 to $33,300,000 is noted.

DECRY HIGHER TAXES IN HOUSE DEBATE

Fordney and Garner Oppose Idea of Another Revenue Bill at This Session.

VOTE FOR PRISON INDUSTRY

Bill Passed to Establish Cotton Duck Factory at Atlanta—Had President's Indorsement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—Opposition to another revenue bill this session was voiced in the House today by Representative Joseph W. Fordney, ranking Republican member of the Ways and Means Committee, and by Representative John M. Garner of Texas in debate on a bill to appropriate more than a million dollars to establish a cotton duck factory in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary.

Representative Kitchin, Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, informed the House that the estimates for the next fiscal year would reach at least $31,000,000,000, while other estimates supplied today placed the expenditures at $33,500,000,000. The latest figures place the expenditures as follows:

Ordinary expenses	$2,000,000,000
Fortifications	6,000,000,000
Sundry civil and shipping	3,000,000,000
Naval	1,500,000,000
Loans to the Allies	6,000,000,000
Military	15,000,000,000
Total	$33,500,000,000

Mr. Fordney recalled the percentages raised by direct taxes by different countries engaged with us in the war. He said the United States had raised 35 per cent. of its revenues by direct taxes, while Great Britain had obtained only 25 per cent. in this way and Canada 18.5 per cent. He insisted that the rest of the money necessary for the conduct of the war should come from loans.

Advocates Waiting Till Winter.

"I want to register my fullest opposition to the advocacy of another revenue bill," Mr. Fordney added. "We are now taking more from the people by direct taxes than any nation in the world, and there is no necessity for more revenue now. Let us wait until we find what the present revenue act will produce, and if necessary to obtain more money we can get it by enacting a bill for the calendar year 1919. There is no occasion for taxing our people beyond what we have already taxed them. It is not being done in any other country in the world. To tax the people more at this time would be folly. Why not wait until next Winter, when we can see what will be needed and may know what to do?"

"I agree with the gentleman that new legislation should not be had at this time," injected Representative Garner. "But we will have to provide more by taxation. In my judgment we will appropriate more than $30,000,000,000 for next year, and I believe that we will have to levy at least $2,000,000,000 a year more in taxes."

"It will amount to over $31,000,000,000," interrupted Mr. Kitchin.

"But the gentleman agrees with me that we should not try to get it at this time," replied Mr. Fordney.

Representative Samuel Winslow of Massachusetts, discussing the Prison bill, said that it was impracticable to get machinery for the duck factory intended to be built at Atlanta without injuring commercial business. As a practical means of increasing production, he said, it would amount to nothing. He charged that it was a scheme to build up an industry in the South under the guise of a war necessity. The factory cannot be built and equipped within the next sixteen months, asserted Mr. Winslow, and by that time the alleged necessity for it might not exist.

"We have no means of knowing there are prisoners there who can weave, unless the Administration, which does so many funny things, will supply the prisoners with that knowledge," continued Mr. Winslow.

"What is the use of this buncombe that this thing is being created because of the great need of Uncle Sam to carry on the war?" said Mr. Fordney. "I am getting tired of this nonsense of asking aid for measures for carrying on the war when they are brought in for no other purpose than political reasons.

Railroad Control and Votes.

"Now comes the Secretary of the Treasury, in addressing an audience of railroad men in Texas, and is reported as saying: 'You are my boys, and I am going to stick to you through thick and thin.'

"That is all the Government took over the railroads for, in my judgment—to control the votes of 2,000,000 railroad employes in the next general election—and that's what you are trying to do here. I do not believe in working the taxpayers when you are calling for money to carry on the war, in order in an underhand way to establish an industry in the South."

There was strenuous opposition to the Prison bill. The Democrats produced a letter written by President Wilson approving the proposal, and enough votes were commanded to pass it. Representative J. Hampton Moore forced Representative Webb, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, to read President Wilson's letter to the House. This letter, addressed to Representative Pou, reads:

The White House,
Washington, D. C., 27th April, 1918.

My Dear Mr. Pou:

As you know, I am as much interested as the Attorney General is in House Bill 8968, providing for a cotton factory at the Atlanta Penitentiary. Indeed, I regard the measure as of genuine and pressing public importance. I trust, therefore, that you will think me justified, in view of this conviction on my part, in asking if in your opinion it will be possible to put this bill on the preferred calendar following the bills which the Committee on Rules has already listed for preferred action? I am sure you will believe that I would not ask this if it were not a matter of real concern to me. Cordially and sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON.

The bill was passed late tonight, after occupying the attention of the House two days, by a vote of 191 to 75.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 5,517 packages. A number of unfilled orders were carried over from Friday night, and, with very moderate fresh arrivals, stock cleaned up closely and values were firmly maintained on the desirable fresh table grades. Ladles and packing stock are weaker. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 46½@47c; extras, 92 score, 46c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 43@45½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 38@42c; thirds, 35@37c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 48½@49c; extras, 47½@48c; firsts, 44@47c; seconds, 40@43c; State dairy, tubs, finest, 45½@46c; good to prime, 43@45c; common to fair, 36@42c; renovated, extras, 39½@40c; firsts, 38@39c; lower grades, 34@36c; imitation creamery, firsts, 35@35½c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33@34c; seconds, 31½@32c; lower grades, 30@31c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 31½@32c; No. 2, 30@30½c; lower grades, 27@29½c.

EGGS.—14,706 cases. The week closed with comparatively light receipts and a very good clearance of strictly high grade northern stock. Some of these are still going directly to the warehouses and there is a pretty good demand for them for current use at firm prices with the tendency still slightly in sellers' favor. There is a fairly good offering of good average Western packings at 35½@36c and of Southern eggs in range of 34@35c generally. Nearby white eggs steady for strictly fancy qualities, but there are comparatively few such and the average grades tend to accumulate unless offering at comparatively easy prices. BRIDAL PAIR FOLLOW FLAG TO THE ALTAR

Capt. C. G. Michalis Marries Miss Helen Campbell in Church of the Heavenly Rest.

MISS WYMAN A BRIDE

Wed to Ensign Wetherald in St. Thomas's—Nuptial of Miss Lucille Stapleton and Lieutenant Lee.

The wedding of Captain Clarence G. Michalis, 104th Field Artillery, U. S. N. A., stationed at Camp Wadsworth, and son of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. Martin Michalis of New York and Llewellyn Park, N. J., and Miss Helen Gordon Campbell, the only daughter of Dr. Clarence Gordon Campbell and Mrs. Campbell of this city and a granddaughter of the late Harris C. Fahnestock, was celebrated at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Heavenly Rest by the rector, the Rev. Herbert Shipman, Chaplain of the bridegroom's regiment, who came from Spartanburg, S. C., to officiate. The patriotic feature of the ceremony was the carrying of the flag by a choirboy leading the procession up the nave. He was flanked by two other choirboys, and was followed by the remaining boys, and then came the bridal party. Immediately after the benediction "The Star-Spangled Banner" was played and the choirboy held the flag before Captain Michalis and his bride.

Miss Campbell wore a silver brocade and white satin gown with a train trimmed with old point lace and a point lace veil held by a lace Russian headdress. She carried white orchids with lilies of the valley, and her ornaments were a string of pearls and a pearl and diamond brooch. Mrs. John Pierrepont Constable, the bridegroom's sister, was the matron of honor, and the other attendants were the bride's cousin, Mrs. Sylvanus Stokes, Jr., who was Miss Margaret Fahnestock, a bride of two weeks ago, when yesterday's bride was one of her bridal attendants, and the Misses Julester Shrady, Muriel Ashwell.

Wetherald—Wyman.

Ensign Royal Winter Wetherald, U. S. N. R. Flying Corps, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James T. Wetherald of Boston, and Miss Rosemonde Wyman, a daughter of the late Edward Frothingham Wyman and of Mrs. Wyman, were married yesterday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, Fifth Avenue and Fifty-third Street, the rector, the Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, officiating. The bride, whose uncle, Walter Channing Wyman, gave her in marriage, was in white satin, draped with net and trimmed with pearl bands, which also veiled the long court train. Her tulle veil was held with a point-lace coronet, and her flowers were sweetheart roses, orchids, and lilies.

Miss Stapleton Weds Lieutenant Lee.

Miss Lucille Dorothy Stapleton, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Luke D. Stapleton, and Lieutenant Robert Edward Lee, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Patrick E. Lee of New Britain, Conn., were married yesterday forenoon in St. Francis Xavier Church, Brooklyn, Cardinal John Farley officiating. The Rev. William Farrell said mass, with Mgr. Carroll, Mgr. David Hickey, and Mgr. Taaffe assisting.

Ensign Poor Marries Miss Sheppard.

The marriage of Ensign Charles Lane Poor, Jr., son of Professor Charles L. Poor and Mrs. Poor of 35 East Sixty-ninth Street, and Miss Janet Sheppard, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Shoemaker Sheppard of 969 Park Avenue, was celebrated at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church, the rector, the Rev. Dr. E. M. Stires, officiating. The bride, who walked with her father, wore her mother's wedding gown of satin, draped with old rose point and duchesse lace, with elbow sleeves finished with lace ruffles, the full train cut in with the skirt, and a tulle veil, held with a lace headdress. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies.

Miss Vernon Weds in Grace Church.

The marriage of Leo Nunes, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonini Nunes of Leghorn, Italy, who has been a purchasing agent here of machinery for the Italian Government, and Miss Vivian Vernon, a daughter of Mrs. Royal H. Willis of 820 Park Avenue by her first husband, the late S. E. Vernon, was celebrated at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon in Grace Church, the rector, the Rev. Dr. Charles L. Slattery, performing the ceremony.

The bride wore a white satin gown trimmed with old family point lace and duchesse lace and a tulle veil bordered with point lace and held with a lace coronet. She walked with her brother, Murray Vernon, who gave her in marriage. Her only attendant was her cousin, Miss Virginia Vernon.

COLUMBIA WITHDRAWS TWELVE FELLOWSHIPS

Temporarily Suspended Because of University's $200,000 Deficit This Year.

Columbia University yesterday announced the award of endowed and annual fellowships for the academic year. Four of the awards go to New York and Brooklyn students. From the list of fellowships, twelve given each year by the university are missing. In explanation of their absence, it was said that their temporary withdrawal is one of the ways in which the university's deficit of more than $200,000 is to be met. Each of the university fellowships carried a value of $650.

The Schiff fellowship in political science, the gift of Jacob H. Schiff, goes to Dora Neill Raymond of Austin, Texas. Miss Raymond is a graduate of the University of Texas, class of 1917. The fellowship carries an annual value of $600, and appointment to it is made by the University Council on the recommendation of the Faculty of Political Science, with the provision that on or before April 1 of each year the Faculty of Political Science propose to Mr. Schiff during his lifetime the name of the person for nomination by him.

The Drisler fellowship goes to Miss Ernestine Phelps Franklin of New York City. Miss Franklin is a graduate of Hunter College, class of 1917, and is now a graduate student at Columbia.

Miss Clara Estelle Mortenson of Santa Rosa, Cal., wins the Granville W. Garth Fellowship in Political Economy, which gives the net annual income of a memorial fund of $16,250. Miss Mortenson was graduated from the University of California in 1915.

The Alexander Moncrief Proudfit Fellowship in Letters for the encouragement of the study of English literature, carrying the net income on $18,875, is given to Louis Bliss Gillet of Brooklyn. This fellowship is open to any son of native-born American parents who shall have taken the degree of Bachelor of Arts after three years residence in Columbia College, and who shall remain unmarried while enjoying the fellowship. Mr. Gillet was graduated from Columbia in 1904.

Marc Luther Baldwin of Lewisburg, Penn., is awarded the Carl Schurz Fellowship for the study of the German Language and Literature. It amounts to the net income on $10,000. This endowment was contributed by the citizens of New York in commemoration of the seventieth birthday of Carl Schurz.

Miss Hildegarde Kneeland of Brooklyn and Alexander Gordon Dewey of New York City are the winners of the two Glider Fellowships, carrying "such portions of the income of the Richard Watson Gilder Fund for the Promotion of Good Citizenship as the Trustees of the university may determine." These fellowships are awarded annually on the recommendation of the Faculty of Political Science.

To Miss Mary Louise Landon of Bordentown, N. J., goes the Samuel Anthony Goldschmidt Fellowship in Chemistry. This is the gift of George B. Goldschmidt and amounts to the annual net income on $16,250, or $750 this year.

The other fellowship awards were as follows:

New York Diocesan Board of Religious Education Fellowship to Charles West Manzer of Windsor, Vt.; Coolidge Fellowships to Lee Hollister Ferguson, B. S., of Delaware, Ohio, and Dana W. Atchley, B. S., of the University of Chicago.

Caroline Duror Memorial Fellowship in Barnard College to Miss Harriet Williams Van Nostrand of Little Neck, N. Y., alternating with Miss Margaret Schlauch of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J. Both are candidates for a Bachelor of Arts degree in 1918.

SISTERS TO WED OFFICERS.

Eileen Taylor Engaged to Lieut. Geyer; Lila to Ensign Buckmaster.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Taylor of 302 West Ninety-eighth Street have announced the engagement of their two daughters, the Misses Eileen Emily Taylor and Lila Mary Taylor.

SUFFRAGISTS DENY ANY DISCRIMINATION

Say Thursday's Symposium Is to Get Views of the Four Leading Parties.

CRITICISM OF SPEAKERS

Miss Hay Asserts Party Is Not Concerned with Individual Views of Their Guests.

A citizenship rally, under the auspices of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, will be held on Thursday evening at Aeolian Hall, 34 West 42d Street, at 8 o'clock. A party symposium will be a feature of the rally. The speakers and their respective parties are Senator Robert F. Wagner, for the Democratic Party; Senator Albert Ottinger, for the Republican Party; Dr. Ralph Meyers, for the Prohibition Party, and Morris Hillquit for the Socialist Party.

Regarding the criticism directed at the Women Suffrage Party, in view of the fact that representatives of other parties will not be present to speak at ths rally, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the New York City Woman Suffrage Party, last night said:

"The program of the meeting arranged by the City Woman Suffrage Party to be held on May 16 at Aeolian Hall has met with some criticism from several sources. Representatives of certain political organizations, such as the Single Tax Party and the National Party, who have not been invited to address the meetings, seem to feel that they have been discriminated against, and our choice of speakers for the other parties has been criticised from different and conflicting points of view.

"In order to clear up all misunderstandings the City Woman Suffrage Party wishes to state that their Aeolian Hall meeting is called for one specific purpose, to aid the women voters of the city to make an intelligent decision in enrolling with one of the recognized political parties in this State on May 25. There are but four of such parties, the Republican, the Democratic, the Socialist, and the Prohibition Parties, and our party has asked a recognized and authoritative spokesman of each of these four organizations to give us a concise statement of the political programs of their respective organizations.

"We are not concerned with the individual nonpolitical views of the speakers. Our choice was based solely upon the qualifications to present the political aims and methods of the parties."

Miss Hay predicted the passage of the Federal Suffrage amendment before July. In this connection she said:

"The newspaper notices which have appeared recently are more pessimistic in tone than the real facts warrant. As many friends of the amendment were absent, Senator Jones withdrew the motion for a vote on Friday, but this does not mean that the amendment will not be voted upon during this session of Congress. In the near future the matter will come up again, and as there are positively enough votes pledged to carry the amendment it will pass the Senate. Suffragists who know the situation are confident of success and are serenely hopeful. It is only the opposition who make doleful prophecies. Before July the passage of the suffrage amendment will vindicate our faith in the Senators who in our estimation are as true to the ideals of democracy as our Representatives in the House."

Although admission will be free on Thursday night, tickets have been issued and may be obtained at the box office at Aeolian Hall or at 3 East Thirty-eighth Street. Mrs. John Blair is acting as Chairman of Arrangements for the meeting.

Caruso to Give Benefit for Red Cross

Enrico Caruso has offered his services to the Red Cross in its drive for the second Red Cross War Fund campaign Monday night, May 27, the last night of the Metropolitan opera season, donating the opera house, the orchestra, and services of artists in a special performance, the entire proceeds of which will be devoted to the Red Cross.

The auction sale of seats will be held tomorrow night at the Waldorf-Astoria.

OPPOSE MEATLESS DAYS.

Some French Deputies Urge a Card System on the English Plan.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 11.—The decision of the Government to make Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday meatless days throughout France, from next week onward, is meeting strong opposition in various quarters. It is argued that the proposed plan is unjust because it will give free rein to speculation in all kinds of foodstuffs, and is impracticable because the experience of the meatless days last year showed that such a decree could not be enforced with any good effect, because it would not prevent serious increases in prices, and would be prejudicial to the poor.

These views were urged in three separate interpellations in the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. The alternative system called for is the institution of meat cards, such as those in use in England.

Victor Boret, the Food Controller, in his reply to criticism, showed that the Government was firmly resolved to stick to its guns. He said that, coupled with the meatless days, there would be an expert census of the stock of cattle and a ruthless prosecution of food speculators. If the meatless days should prove ineffective then, he said, the Government would consider the institution of meat cards based either on meat value or meat weight. A French official commission is now in England studying the working of the system there, in which cards were issued for meat of a certain value, irrespective of weight. M. Boret foreshadowed the possibility that the Government would create a State monopoly in foodstuffs. Another eventuality is that the Government will fix prices alike for the sale of meat on the hoof, the carcase and at retail. Fears are expressed that prices of canned goods will again rise seriously in consequence of the meatless days. What this may mean may be judged from the fact that sardines, which sold at wholesale at between 30 and 40 francs per 100 kilos before the war, now bring 230 francs for the same quantity.

GOODRICH TESTED TIRES

AT the City of Goodrich, they have officially announced the grand mileage of Goodrich's nationwide Test Car work of 1917: 1,044,686 linear miles; 4,178,744 tire miles.

These figures indite the Emancipation Act of motorists, freeing them from tire mishaps and amputated mileage.

Compressed in them is the story of the famous Six Fleets, and how they hurled Goodrich Tires the length and breadth of our nation, over city pavement and country road, ploughing them through sand and mud; mauling them against rock and gravel.

* * * *

MATHEMATICS has no favorites. That multiplied mileage of 4,178,744 miles coldly, calculatingly, puts the seal of multiplied proof on Goodrich Tires, and stamps them "Tested." Beside it, all previously recorded mileage sinks to insignificance.

In that searching test, no slightest defect, no hidden shortcoming could escape the sight of the Goodrich experts. Yet reports of mounting mileage came daily to the City of Goodrich, through spring, summer, and fall.

* * * *

SILVERTOWN CORDS, and BLACK SAFETY TREADS, under light and heavy cars, defied the rough going of roads wherever the Test Car Fleets rushed them. The spiral wrapped, cable-cord, tire body, and Goodrich's tough black tread rubber fought the hard fight and conquered.

REVIEWS WORK OF NEW SCHOOL BOARD

Somers Reports to Mayor on First Four Months' Tenure—Abandons 14 Committees.

GARY PLAN IS DROPPED

Eliminated in All but Two Cases and Funds Put to Other Uses—Fears Scarcity of Teachers.

The Board of Education will hold its annual meeting on next Tuesday and elect officers. This is according to the educational law. When the board came into existence at the first of the year it had to choose officers, and elected Arthur S. Somers President and Frank D. Wilson Vice President. President Somers has submitted to Mayor Hylan a report of the work accomplished by the board during the four months of its existence.

The former board, consisting of forty-six members, Mr. Somers says, divided the work among fourteen standing committees. The present board decided to abandon the committee system and to work as a committee of the whole, meeting in public conference with the department heads and the Superintendents. The committee met at least once every week and frequently twice a week. The board has met weekly. The plan has worked well, enabling the board to rid itself of a great mass of detail and to consider problems and policies upon their merits and, by cutting red tape incident to duplication of committee work, to reach decisions promptly.

The coal situation, he says, made it necessary to close many of the Brooklyn schools, but they were able to gather in centrally located buildings the upper classes, so that their work was not, to any great extent, interfered with. The younger children, in many instances, were housed in temporary quarters placed at the disposal of the board by various organizations. The fire in the Board of Education Hall on Feb. 1 caused the loss of records, seriously interfering with the building program adopted by the board, but matters are now progressing rapidly. Plans have been approved for the erection of five new buildings, additions to four buildings, and alterations to twenty buildings. Some delay is anticipated on account of the labor situation.

Junior High School Plan.

The Board adopted a resolution on April 9 asking the Superintendents to appoint a committee to report on the advisability of organizing the schools on the basis of a six-year elementary, a three-year junior high school, and a three-year senior high school plan. This committee is still conducting its investigation. The problem of a junior high school is one of the most important things that faces educational authorities at the present time. New York City is in a position to furnish a practical illustration of how such a school can be conducted. One of the strongest arguments in its favor is that it will provide for grouping upper grades in central buildings, thus extending the facilities for the younger children in surrounding schools. The addition of the ninth year or first high school year in the centrally located schools will go far toward relieving the congestion in the high schools.

In regard to the Gary plan, Mr. Somers says:

"When we organized there were thirty-five schools operating under the Gary plan, with provision for extending it into seventy-one other schools and in ten additions. This extension work was immediately stopped and the funds available for altering the buildings will be used to improve those buildings for regular school work without any reference whatsoever to the Gary plan. The Board of Superintendents was requested to modify programs in all schools operating under the Gary plan, and in a recent report received from Superintendent Meleney we are advised that programs have been changed by eliminating the objectionable features from all schools except No. 15, Bronx, and No. 89, Brooklyn. An addition to the former building is nearing completion, and it would be inadvisable to disturb the organization of the school until this addition is complete. Even in No. 89, Brooklyn, many changes have been made, and a further study is being made of that school by the Superintendent in charge."

"The salaries of teachers," Mr. Somers declares, "is perhaps one of the most important matters with which the board has to deal, because of inducements offered by the Federal Government and mercantile houses. Young women are finding employment at salaries so attractive that the number of admissions to the training school for teachers has fallen off tremendously. There is a well-grounded fear that, unless something is done to arrest this diversion and to attract young women to the teaching profession, we may find ourselves without a sufficient supply of teachers within the next year. With a view to replenishing our forces, the board has under consideration a modified salary schedule which it will shortly present to the Board of Estimate. In addition to this the Board of Examiners has recommended modifications of the requirements for License No. 1, by eliminating many features of the examination."

Attention is called to the establishment of special classes for training enlisted men along technical lines. Arrangements are now being made with the Federal Government whereby schools adaptable for the training of these men will be open during the months of July and August, the plan being to house the soldiers in the buildings, to employ regular teachers for instruction, but to assume no responsibility for discipline, this being entirely under army control. Plans are also under consideration for the re-education of crippled soldiers returning from the field of battle.

KRAMER GETS SET VIEW JOB.

Coler Takes Dr. Buck's Successor from the Retired List.

Charities Commissioner Bird S. Coler has appointed Dr. Geza Kramer Medical Superintendent of Sea View Hospital, Staten Island, to take the place of Dr. William B. Buck, who was recently dismissed on charges which were characterized by the Citizens Union as "flimsy." Dr. Kramer is a member of Tammany Hall. The title of the place has been changed from that of Director to Medical Superintendent, which is not rated by the Civil Service Commission. A special list is to be prepared for the particular place, however, and a rating is to be established.

Dr. Kramer has been connected with the Health Department for twenty-one years, six years of the time as medical inspector of tuberculosis bureau in the Bureau of Preventable Diseases. He retired on a pension of $1,100 the day before his appointment as Superintendent of Sea View Hospital, but Commissioner Coler said yesterday that Dr. Kramer had waived this pension. At first Commissioner Coler tried to get the Civil Service Commission to put the Sea View job in the exempt class on the ground that Dr. Kramer had exceptional and unusual qualifications for the place, but the commission refused. The Sea View Hospital has been taken over by the Federal Government for use as a hospital for wounded soldiers and the functions of the hospital are to be transferred to the city's plant at Otisville.

Dr. Kramer lives at 233 West Eighty-third Street and graduated from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1894.

The doubles match between Captain Garland and Hamill for Yale, and Binzen and Taylor of the New York college alone compelled the home players to extend themselves by playing the odd set.

The summary:

Singles.—Garland defeated Binzen, 6—2, 6—2; Simmons defeated Taylor, 6—1, 6—1; Banks defeated McLaughlin, 6—0, 6—0; Wiley defeated Martin, 6—1, 6—1.

Doubles.—Simmons and Banks defeated Martin and McLaughlin, 6—0, 6—0; Garland and Hamill defeated Binzen and Taylor, 6—2, 3—6, 11—0.

COLUMBIA RUNNERS AHEAD.

Distance Men Decide Meet Against Brown's Team.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 11.—Columbia defeated Brown here today, 64 to 53, in their annual track meet. Last year Brown triumphed. Columbia took the lead almost at the start by winning in the quarter, two mile and half mile events. With the exception of these and the mile, in which Brown only got one point, the local boys more than held their own.

Mullane for Brown and Shepard and Shulte for Columbia were the stars of the meet, the first two getting two firsts each and Shulte winning three firsts. Mullane won the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash. In the century he equalled the Brown track record of 0:10 1-5.

Shulte threw a surprise into the Brown ranks by taking the discus throw. Schulte threw the weight 108 feet 9 inches, winning by more than an inch from Hindmarsh of Brown, whose cast was 108 feet 7¾ inches.

Shulte was an easy winner in the broad jump with 20 feet 6 inches, and he also won the high jump and was second in the shot put.

The Ruling Passion.

The shipping brokers' chief topic of conversation these days is the Shipping Board's policy regarding commissions, with all the argument on one side. One of the indignation meetings was held the other day in an office on lower Broad Street, from which one member of the firm went into the Aviation Corps. His partner mentioned casually that the aviator had written of his hopes of soon shooting down a German, so that he might get his commission. "Gee!" said one listener. "What is the commission for shooting down a German? One per cent?"

Williams Conquers Springfield.

Special to The New York Times.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., May 11.—Williams had an easy time defeating Springfield College here today, the score being 6 to 1. A three-bagger by Boynton, the Purple football star, with two on in the third, helped to put the game away.

ADDED NEWS OF WORLD OF SPORTS

KENTUCKY CLASSIC TO EXTERMINATOR

Willis Sharp Kilmer Provides Upset in Forty-fourth Renewal of Derby.

ESCOBA FINISHES SECOND

Favorites Yield to Little-Known Race Horse That Pays Price of About 30 to 1.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 11.—Willis Sharp Kilmer, the Binghamton, N. Y., sportsman, accomplished a racing coup this afternoon when he won the forty-fourth renewal of the Kentucky Derby with Exterminator, a son of McGee-Fair Empress, that was practically neglected in the betting. It was a stunning defeat for the public choices, brought about in a large measure by the sloppy track, which was the discouraging result of a rainy morning that served to keep many thousands away from the popular Churchill Downs. The time was 2:10 4-5.

Willie Knapp had the credit of riding the winner, and his skill was pitted against no mean rival in Joe Notter, who had the mount on K. D. Alexander's Escoba, which, with A. K. Macomber's War Cloud, had been selected as the strongest of the eight starters. Notter did his very best with the Western colt, but the going was all against the son of Broomstick, and it was only by the exercise of great perseverance that Notter managed to keep Escoba up to his work in the race through the stretch to finish the trying mile and a quarter, a short length behind the winner, but a very tired horse.

In third place came Viva America, the only filly in the race, which is owned by C. T. Worthington, and was ridden by Warrington. Viva America was six lengths behind the pair fighting for victory, and the rest of the field was well strung out, with A. K. Macomber's greatly touted War Cloud in fourth place.

Though all the Winter long Mr. Kilmer had been credited with holding the trump card for this blue ribbon event in Sun Briar, the two-year-old champion of last year, his victory with Exterminator came as a complete surprise to the large crowd. Experts had agreed that the only chance for an Eastern success was through the medium of War Cloud, and the chances of the home turfmen were considered brighter when the rain changed the condition of the track so that it was not to the liking of the Macomber imported champion.

Bitterly disappointed at the showing of Sun Briar in his trials, the Binghamton owner, who was present to see his colors carried, determined not to be without a representative. He showed fine judgment in picking Exterminator as a substitute for the brilliant Sun Briar, and the result more than justified his selection, for Exterminator not only won handily but richly repaid those who maintained confidence in the Kilmer luck, as he paid nearly 30 to 1 in the mutuals.

Exterminator is but little known to the followers of racing in the States, and last year was entered in the name of J. C. Milam. Most of his racing was in Canada, and at Windsor he gained the reputation of being more than a fair kind of a two-year-old. That he will be a dangerous competitor for the best of the three-year-olds over a heavy track he proved today by the handy manner in which he disposed of the field, and he may prove more dependable as a mature racer than the rather delicate Sun Briar.

One of the greatest crowds that ever witnessed the Derby saw the victory of Mr. Kilmer's recent acquisition. The start was good, Exterminator getting off in fifth place, which he still held by a length at the quarter. At the half the gelding had moved up to fourth place, which he held by half a length. Knapp sent him along then, and at the three-quarters he was first by a head. Knapp eased his mount then, and he dropped back a little, so that he was running second at the mile. Coming into the stretch he moved up on Escoba, and in the final drive drew away to finish with a length to spare.

Escoba ran a good race throughout, never dropping further back than third place. The colt made a determined effort in the last furlong, but tired rapidly in the last sixteenth.

Viva America got off first, and at the quarter was leading by a length and a half, holding the same lead at the half. At the three-quarters, however, she had dropped to third place.

War Cloud went to the post a heavy favorite at odds of $1.45 to $1, and his showing proved a great disappointment to his host of supporters. The value to the winner was $14,700.

The summary:

KENTUCKY DERBY, for three-year-olds, with $15,000 added; one mile and a quarter. W. S. Kilmer's ch. c. Exterminator, 114 pounds, (Knapp,) $61.20, $23.10, and $12.40, won; K. D. Alexander's b. c. Escoba, 117, (Notter,) $4.90 and $4.60, second; C. T. Worthington's ch. f. Viva America, 114, (Warrington,) $13.20, third. Time—2:10 4-5. War Cloud, Lucky B., James T. Clark, Sewell Combs, and American Eagle also ran.

COLUMBIA VICTOR AT NET.

Seventh Success of Season Gained Over Amherst Team.

Columbia net men won their seventh victory on East Field courts yesterday afternoon when they defeated Amherst four matches out of the six. The courts were in excellent condition and the games were fast from beginning to end. This victory places Columbia second to Yale in the intercollegiate tennis rating and in all probability insures that the two teams will meet in the final intercollegiates to be played in June.

H. Forster and Captain von Bernuth were the point getters for Columbia, while E. H. Hendrickson and Bemis played good tennis for Amherst. Columbia played a strong back court game throughout both singles and doubles matches. Amherst tried coming to the net repeatedly, but only to smash to the net, and during crucial periods of the game incessantly drove wild to the sidelines.

The scores:

Singles.—E. H. Hendrickson, Columbia, defeated W. Botsford, Amherst, 7—5, 5—7, 8—6; F. Forster, Columbia, defeated F. L. Snyder, Amherst, 6—1, 7—5; Captain Von Bernuth, Columbia, defeated F. Mathews, Amherst, 6—8, 6—1; W. Felstiner, Columbia, defeated R. G. Bemis, Amherst, 5—7, 6—1, 6—4.

Doubles.—Captain Von Bernuth and H. Forster, Columbia, defeated E. Hendrickson and F. Snyder, Amherst, 6—2, 6—2; R. Bemis and F. Mathews, Amherst, defeated W. Felstiner and H. Haldenstein, Columbia, 5—7, 7—5, 6—1.

GREEN TRACK TEAM VICTOR.

Takes Connecticut Valley Meet with 88 Points.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 11.—Dartmouth ran away with the Connecticut Valley intercollegiate athletic meet this afternoon, taking 88 points. Holy Cross was second with 29, while Springfield Y. M. C. A. College had 6 and Rensselaer Polytechnic 3. Trinity failed to score.

Dartmouth's team was much better balanced than had been supposed, no man winning more than ten points. The work of Shea of Dartmouth in the 120-yard high hurdles and 220-yard low hurdles, and that of Mahoney of Holy Cross in the 440-yard dash was noteworthy.

Harvard Freshmen Defeated.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 11.—The Phillips Exeter Academy track team defeated the Harvard freshmen team in a dual meet here today, 60 points to 32.

BONDAGE TAKES HANDICAP.

Son of Ogden Proves Easily Best in Pimlico Feature.

PIMLICO, Md., May 11.—Mrs. James Arthur's Bondage proved that his race in running second to Cudgel and beating Omar Khayyam the other day was no fluke, by running away with the Belvedere Handicap at a mile and a sixteenth this afternoon. Though the field did not include any of the top notchers, with the possible exception of Borrow, the victory of the son of Ogden was gained so impressively that it is believed he may be capable of even better performances. He carried 106 pounds, but from the manner in which he won it looks as though it will take considerably more weight to stop him in the second class handicaps.

Bondage was intrusted to the apprentice rider, Rodriguez, and it looked as though the rider had him in difficulties in the early part of the race. While Mary Maud was racing the fleet Nutcracker into submission Bondage was in seventh place and in tight quarters. The Cuban jockey exhibited coolness, however, under trying circumstances, and waited patiently until the turn into the stretch. Here he saw an opening on the rail and shooting Bondage through a small space the Ogden colt was quickly on terms with the field. It was no trouble for him to race away from Mary Maud, and he won handily with five lengths to spare. Damrosch had traveled close to the leaders all the way and finished third, a length and a half behind Mary Maud.

The tempting prize of $5,000 for the Spring Valley Steeplechase Handicap brought out one of the best field of jumpers that has been seen in recent years. There were fifteen starters and three of the owners depended on more than one horse for a chance of victory. Belle of Bryn Mawr and Silver Dart, the latter an imported horse, carried the colors of William A. Prime, a comparatively new man to the sport. Silver Dart was ridden by Smoot and intrusted with the pacemaking, while the Belle of Bryn Mawr, though more sedately ridden by Bush, always kept close enough to her stable companion to be dangerous. Captain Parr and Trumpator also were well up with the leaders, and a rattling race resulted in the last eighth of a mile.

The Belle had plenty of speed in reserve and drew clear at the last fence. Even then the race was not over, for G. D. Widener's Trumpator came with a rush on the flat and the Belle had to be ridden out to win by a length. Trumpator was a length in front of Captain Parr, which beat The Brook by the same distance for show money. Most of the others were close up at the finish, giving promise of excellent sport in future races.

The summaries:

PENN PITCHER SUPREME.

Burnhardt Allows Only Four Hits to Cornell Team.

Special to The New York Times.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 11.—Pennsylvania defeated Cornell by the score of 3 to 2 this afternoon in an errorless game. Fine pitching by Burnhardt and bunched hits gave victory to the Quakers. Burnhardt allowed but four hits, two of them being made by Captain Howard. The Penn pitcher also fanned nine Cornellians and got two hits, both of which were turned into runs. The batting of Burns and Straus were also factors in the Quakers' victory. Brookmire was touched up for eight hits, though he kept them well scattered except in the first and eighth innings.

The Quakers scored in the first on hits by Straus and Burns. Cornell at once tied the score on hits by Howard and Whitmore. Penn went ahead in the third on singles by Burnhardt and Burns, but in the fourth Cornell tied the score again when Howard was passed, went to second on Whitmore's grounder to Morgan, got to third on a wild pitch, and came home on Bonagura's fly.

Neither team scored again until the eighth inning, when, after Burnhardt had singled, Straus brought him home by a smashing two-base hit to the clubhouse.

Dartmouth had two men thrown out at the plate. All the scoring was done in the first inning. Boston College got its scores on Dempsey's Texas Leaguer, a real hit by Enright, Urban's pass, and Gildea's long fly that Reilly muffed in right field.

MRS. GAVIN TAKES MATCH FROM WHITE

Women's Metropolitan Golf Champion, with Handicap of Nine, Wins by 3 and 2.

By getting nearly 200 yards on her drives and playing with great confidence on her short game, Mrs. William A. Gavin of Baltusrol, the women's metropolitan champion, defeated Robert White, professional, at Montclair, 3 up and 2 to play, in a handicap match of eighteen holes for the benefit of the Red Cross at the Montclair Golf Club yesterday. Mrs. Gavin had an actual score of 88 for the hilly Montclair course, compared with an 83 turned in by her opponent. A nine-stroke handicap allowed to the feminine leader of the local golf world, however, proved too much for White.

Mrs. Gavin played a much better game than in her contest with George Low at Baltusrol last week. Her greatest improvement was in her driving. This was most noticeable at the eighteenth, a 418-yard hole, where she was on the green in two hard shots and was down in two putts for a par 4. She made the short tenth in par 3, with a clever approach of 175 yards to the green and two perfect putts.

White was playing a good game all the way but could not putt with any confidence. Several times he should have won holes but tossed away the advantage by missing short putts.

A large gallery followed the play and early last night it was announced that $366 had been collected for the local Red Cross chapter, with more to come. Mrs. Gavin was better pleased with her efforts and predicted she would do better from now on in her matches against the male leaders of golf. She plays at Hackensack today against Max Marston in another eighteen-hole handicap match.

Mrs. Gavin received a stroke at the second, fourth, sixth, eighth, eleventh, thirteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth holes.

The actual scores of the two players follow:

Mrs. Gavin—Out....5 5 5 4 5 7 5 5 5—46
In......3 6 4 5 4 4 5 7 4—42—88
White—Out ....5 6 3 5 4 5 4 5 5—42

MERCERSBURG WINS MEET.

Woodring Leads Teammates to Victory on Track at Princeton.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.—With the leading athletes of fourteen prep schools of the East participating, unusually good times were made in the annual Princeton interscholastic meet which was held in the stadium this afternoon. Woodring, the Mercersburg star, under the pressure of keen competition, covered the 220-yard straightaway path in 21 3-5 seconds. Princeton interscholastic record fell with the pole vault event, Gardner of Hill clearing the bar at 12 feet 2½ inches.

Woodring was the individual star of the meet, winning the 100-yard dash in addition to the 220. His time for the shorter distance was a flat ten seconds. Fillman, his team mate, followed him closely and was an easy second.

Woodring's work, supplemented by able support by his team mates, was sufficient to give Mercersburg a higher total than any other of the competing schools. The points made by the various schools were as follows:

Mercersburg, 48 5-6; Hill, 48 1-3; Bethlehem Prep, 14¼; Lawrenceville, 7¼; St. Benedicts, 7; Blair, 4 1-3; Pedle, 4; Allentown Prep School, 3.

Swede, the Mercersburg representative, who put up a new interscholastic record in the two-mile event at Philadelphia last week, won the mile in 4:43 3-5. He easily defeated his team mate, Beattie. Apparently he expended too much effort in this event, however, for when it came to the two-mile race Nutly of St. Benedicts took the pole and, try as he would, Swede could not take the advantage away from him. Nutly won with the time of 10:2 3-5.

STEVENS TWELVE VICTOR.

Defeats Penn Lacrosse Team in Fast Fray by 2 to 1.

The Stevens Tech lacrosse team outplayed the twelve of the University of Pennsylvania and won their annual contest in easy fashion by 2 to 1 yesterday afternoon at Castle Point Field, Hoboken. The teamwork of the Hoboken men both on the defense and attack outclassed that of Pennsylvania, particularly the attack.

Robertson put Stevens in the lead when he made the only score of the first half in seventeen minutes on a well-directed throw from scrimmage. The other Stevens score was made after eight minutes of play in the second half by Adler. Pennsylvania's only tally came within the last three minutes of play on a throw by Captain Rosasco after a series of short passes and runs before the Stevens goal.

AMMONIA EXPLOSION KILLS 1, INJURES 40

LOSS PLACED AT $200,000

Big Store of Army Supplies May Be Sacrificed—Engineer Gave Life for Others.

A fire, followed by a series of explosions of ammonia fumes in a new eleven-story concrete refrigerating plant on the North River at Sixteenth Street, containing beef and other United States Army supplies valued at about $2,000,000, last night caused the death of an engineer, the injury of about forty firemen and soldiers who were on guard in the barred zone, and a damage of about $200,000 to the electrical refrigerating apparatus. Officials of the Merchants' Warehouse Company, owners of the building, said that the damage might be increased by the loss of meats, eggs, and other supplies unless temporary repairs to the machinery could be made quickly or unless the supplies could be moved quickly to other refrigerating plants.

James Vincent, an assistant engineer, aiding in the operation of the refrigerating machinery, who was asphyxiated by the fumes of the escaping ammonia, turned in the first fire alarm and failed to escape from the building because he remained to give the alarm to other employes in the building. He saw that a cap of one of the ammonia tubes in the basement had been blown off by heavy pressure in the refrigerating machinery and almost before he could give the alarm for a slackening of the pressure electric light wires that had been cross-circuited by the force of the explosion which blew off the cap started a fire in the basement.

Before apparatus had arrived in response to the first alarm much damage had been caused to the electrical machinery in the basement by light explosions of the fumes in the basement, and the fumes were escaping in torrents from all the supply tanks. W. E. Bernd, the chief engineer in charge of the machinery, and his employes fled because they knew they could not live in the fumes, and they thought that Vincent had already left the building.

The first firemen to arrive saw that the fire was serious because of the fumes and because the building itself covered the block between Tenth and Eleventh Avenues and Sixteenth and Seventeenth Streets, and they sent in two additional alarms. Deputy Fire Chief "Smoky" Joe Martin, who, with Fire Commissioner Drennan, were among the first to arrive in response to the additional alarms, sent a call for the Rescue Squad at Police Headquarters, with their helmets and pulmotors, and the Fire Department was ordered to have all its apparatus in readiness to attend to the firemen who, the Fire Chief said, would be sure to be overcome.

While Lieutenant Benjamin F. Parker and his men of the Rescue Squad were preparing to enter the building from three sides to carry out Vincent and to try to shut off the escaping ammonia, a terrific explosion of fumes in the building hurled thirty heavy doors from their supports under a portico, where the supplies are loaded and unloaded. One of these heavy doors, about twelve feet square and weighing about 300 pounds, was hurled across Tenth Avenue.

It threw about eight firemen of Truck Company 12 to the pavement, knocked over a squad of soldiers who were standing guard at the barbed wire entanglement marking the beginning of the barred zone, and ripped down the wire for about 100 feet. Many of the soldiers and firemen received severe cuts and bruises, although none of them was so seriously injured that he had to go to the hospital.

Jeremiah O'Connor, 15 years old, of 529 West Twentieth Street, who had managed to squeeze through the police lines in the confusion, was struck by one of the doors, and he received serious injuries about the back. The police reported that he had been taken to the New York Hospital.

Immediately ammonia fumes filled all the streets near the building, and many firemen fell and had to be carried away to be revived by the pulmotors.

It was more than an hour before the firemen could enter the building and recover the body of Vincent, who had been stunned by a missile hurled by the force of the explosion and then asphyxiated by the ammonia fumes while he was unconscious.

Several Customs Guards and soldiers who were at the pier of the Atlantic Transport Company on the North River were also overcome by the fumes and cut and injured by flying glass and other missiles. They were able to go to their homes, as were all the injured firemen.

After an investigation of the building last night Deputy Chief Martin said that the modern apparatus of the new warehouse was the only thing that had saved the building from complete destruction by an explosion of the ammonia fumes. As soon as the first explosion blew a cap off the pipe cold water was turned into the pipes automatically, thus reducing the pressure quickly. Officials of the company said that it might be necessary to move the stores to other warehouses, because delicate machinery of the plant had been destroyed.

DOCTOR DIES FROM OLD CUT

George A. Williams of Brooklyn Scratched His Hand in an Operation

Dr. George Albert Williams, a practicing physician in Brooklyn for twenty-seven years, and one of the founders of the Bushwick Hospital, died in that institution yesterday of septic pneumonia, following a long illness that was primarily due to blood poisoning, which developed from a scratch on his hand made during the performance of an operation about a year ago. The wound was healing when it was opened by accidental contact with a rusty nail and blood poisoning followed.

Dr. Williams was an expert in gynaecology. He was born in Unadilla, Schoharie County, N. Y., sixty-three years ago and was graduated from the Medical School of the College of the City of New York in 1888. In 1890 he came to Brooklyn and helped found the Bushwick Hospital, of which he was a member of the Board of Governors and one of the Board of Directors. His home was at 449 Hancock Street, Brooklyn.

Colonel Alexander Oswald Brodie, U. S. A., retired, a former Governor of Arizona and Lieutenant Colonel of the Rough Riders during the Spanish-American war, died at his home in Haddonfield, N. J., on Friday. In his career he had served as an Indian fighter, cattleman, and mine owner.

Colonel Brodie was born in Edwards, St. Lawrence County, N. Y., on Nov. 13, 1849, and received his education at St. Lawrence University and the United States Military Academy at West Point, from which he was graduated in 1870 with the rank of Second Lieutenant in the 1st Cavalry, U. S. A., which was at that time stationed in Arizona, engaged in a campaign against the Apache Indians. He was promoted to First Lieutenant in 1875, but resigned from the army two years later to return East because of the ill-health of his mother.

At the outbreak of the war with Spain Colonel Brodie raised the Arizona quota of the Rough Riders and became Major of the 1st Squadron. In action at Las Guasimas on June 24, 1898, Colonel Brodie was wounded in the right arm. When he rejoined his regiment at Camp Wikoff in August, 1898, he became Lieutenant Colonel as the result of the promotion of Theodore Roosevelt to the Colonelcy.

After the war Colonel Brodie returned to Arizona, of which he was appointed Governor in 1902, serving until 1905, when he was appointed Major in the Record and Pension Office by President Roosevelt. A few months later he became Lieutenant Colonel in the same department, and was made Colonel-Adjutant General of the Western Division in 1912.

Men with five or more years' experience in trade drawing, or in electric installation and practice, or in sheet metal work are invited to apply to serve as substitute teachers of such trades in the public elementary schools at $5 a day. Opportunity will be given later to qualify for regular appointment at beginning salaries of $1,200 to $1,700, according to amount of experience. The salary schedules run to $2,200 in elementary schools, or $2,600 in vocational schools. Applicants must be citizens.

The Board of Examiners invites qualified persons with at least four years' experience in the following vocations to apply to teach such vocations in the public evening high school classes in industrial art: Mural decoration, book illustration, interior decoration, cast drawing, costume design, textile design, poster design, flower painting. Compensation $5 a night. Sessions usually four nights a week for 120 nights a year. Candidates must be citizens.

The Board of Examiners invites qualified holders of License 1 to apply for placement upon the eligible lists for appointment, either as teacher of speech improvement classes in evening elementary schools for the season of 1918, or for teacher of speech improvement classes in vacation schools for the season of 1918, or for service in both activities. All candidates will be required to pass oral and practical tests covering a knowledge of the anatomy and physiology of the vocal organs, and an intimate study of the psychology of speech and of methods employed in the prevention and correction of speech defects. Each candidate in applying must agree to serve for the entire season or for such part thereof as services may be required.

An examination for license for promotion will be conducted on Sept. 4 and 5.

There is urgent need for many additional qualified substitutes in the elementary schools so that many who qualify may obtain continuous employment. The pay is $3 a day of actual service.

Furniture for Summer

It would be difficult to imagine the person who could not be pleased in the Gimbel New Section devoted to Furniture for Summer.

Some are in natural finish, others in clear, transparent stain, others in ivory enamel picked out in color, and some of this furniture is in wood with inserts of cane or reed.

FEDERAL TAX REVISION.

This is a billion-dollar country, but it manages its affairs in a manner which would bankrupt a billion-dollar private corporation. The last tax bill provided billions more than could be spent, and yet billions less than will soon be needed. It is proposed to make present provision for future needs, and it is said that the effect upon the Congressional elections would be objectionable, because the tax bills were so badly constructed. Nowhere is there a suggestion that the political effect is of no consequence, or at least that this year there is remarkable indifference whether anybody is elected except those standing on a platform of "get on with the war." Also, it might be a good thing that those responsible for legislation whose effects they fear to submit to their constituents should not escape responsibility for their doings.

The fact that the Congressional elections are near the enactment of bad tax laws is a reason for revision rather than for postponement. The Congressmen to be elected this Fall will not meet until more than a year later, and in the interval it is nearly certain that there will occur events which will obscure the tax issue, which is a fair basis for elections this Fall. Also, the taxpayers are as much to be considered as the tax bunglers, and their relief should come as quickly as it can be provided, without reference to the nearness of the Government's need for funds. What the taxpayers need is not relief from taxes, but relief from methods of levying taxes which are bad partly by design and partly for reasons which are excusable, although there is no excuse for delay in remedying them.

The tax bill was vicious in so far as it was designedly apportioned inequitably. It was the intention and the boast of the lawmakers that the burden of the income tax should fall rather on the grain and industrial States than on the cotton States. The result is that in 1916 Southern States paid $3,100,000 individual income taxes and Northern States $53,-839,000 in a total tax payment of $67,900,000. In 1917 the figures for the same Southern States were $10,-836,000, for the same Northern States $127,973,000, in a total of $160,-528,000. The designed effect having followed, the country should have an opportunity to express its mind about it while the occurrence is still fresh.

It is a basic fault that the tax bill was constructed with open eyes upon the same principle that has baffled the regulators of the railways. They sought to reduce railway profits and rates by finding overcapitalization. For that purpose it was necessary to have a valuation of capital. Years and millions have been wasted in the attempt, only to discover that valuation for that purpose is useless, and is impracticable for any purpose. Rates should be stable, while values must shift with trade and efficiency of management. Taxes need not be stable, but they should be levied with relation to trade, and not with intent to punish. Taxes upon great profits may be defensible, but not on the ground that they are war taxes, if in fact they are not such. In other words, the taxes should be levied on the earnings, for whatever reason, and not on "capital invested."

It is another basic fault that one tax bill was imposed upon another for the sake of convenience and haste. Thus there are illogical exemptions and taxes which would disappear if for the two bills there were substituted a single bill drawn with reference to the experience under the existing bill, which thus has served a useful end not purposed; that is, the demonstration of the badness of the methods taken. The existing law is so obscure in its definitions and phrasing that it could not be worked at all without expert help, and under official rulings which seem to be inconsistent with the law itself.

These are only a sample of broad objections which should be remedied before they become rooted. To postpone correction to another session would be to offer an apparent condonation of the faults of those who were warned of what they were doing while they were doing it. To postpone them until another Congress would be worse, both by the delay and by the obscuring of this issue with the issues arising in the next year. Elections cannot be with reference to unknown future events. Elections should be after and because of recent past events. If the legislation were better, Congressmen would be eager to meet their constituents upon it. The worse the legislation the stronger the reasons for speedy elections, and also for speedy amendment of the faults. It would be better for Congressmen to be able to plead that they had remedied their faults than to be compelled to confess that they had erred and persisted in error.

MR. BURLESON'S ERROR.

When Postmaster General BURLESON challenged ex-President ROOSEVELT to name the "various powerful newspapers which opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country," but which, Mr. ROOSEVELT said, the Post Office Department had left undisturbed, he was certainly confident that Mr. ROOSEVELT would not take up the challenge. His confidence appears in every line of his "dare." If he had not been certain that Mr. ROOSEVELT would not name these "various powerful newspapers," he surely would not have gone so far as to say:

> If [Mr. ROOSEVELT's statements are] true, I am utterly unworthy of trust and should be scourged from office in disgrace.

That was merely rhetorical, yet it was the kind of rhetoric that a man does not use unless he feels perfectly safe in using it. But Mr. ROOSEVELT, contrary to this evident expectation of Mr. BURLESON's, did accept the challenge, did name the "various powerful newspapers," and cite extracts from them in proof of his allegation that they had "opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country." Mr. BURLESON was so certain, and his certainty was so mistaken, as to make one wonder why he should ever have felt it. It could not have been that he did not know of the existence of these "various powerful newspapers." It could not have been that he did not know they had "opposed the war or attacked our allies or directly or indirectly aided Germany against this country." It could not have been that he did not know he had left them undisturbed, however excellent his reasons for so leaving them may be. Why did he feel so certain Mr. ROOSEVELT would not name them?

It must be that he thought Mr. ROOSEVELT would be afraid to name them. That, in the cases of some men, would be a reasonable assumption, for in naming them Mr. ROOSEVELT laid himself open to certain inevitable consequences, the consequences which always follow when a public man makes any reference other than friendly to these publications. In Mr. BURLESON's mind this was absolutely conclusive; reasoning from what some other men would do in the same circumstances he argued that Mr. ROOSEVELT would be afraid and silent. He was mistaken, that is all.

THE COMING CROP OF WHEAT.

The Government's May crop report is of a most encouraging character, promising greater yields of all farm products than those of last year, and a notable gain in wheat. Although the loss by abandonment in the Winter-sown fields of wheat exceeds recent estimates, being 13.7 per cent., against a ten years' average of 10.9, favorable weather and good condition of the plants have warranted the official prediction that 572,539,000 bushels will be harvested. Last year's Winter crop was only 418,000,000. It is reasonable to expect that the yield will be 600,000,000, for the Government has increased its estimate in each of three successive reports. There has been no official statement about Spring-sown wheat. Undoubtedly acreage in the Spring States has been increased. The United States Chamber of Commerce estimates the gain at 15 per cent. Such an addition would indicate a crop of nearly 270,000,000 bushels. Last year's was 233,000,000. The entire crop of wheat, so far as can now be foreseen, will not be less than 850,000,000 and may rise to 875,-000,000. In normal times about 620,-000,000 have been required for domestic consumption and seed. War conservation has reduced the quantity to not more than 500,000,000. The coming crop, therefore, will yield an exportable surplus of 350,000,000 bushels or more. Canada's increase of acreage will add at least 150,000,000 to the quantity that can be sent to Europe from this country. With 500,-000,000 soon to be available for shipment from North America, there is assurance that the wants of our war partners on the other side of the Atlantic for more than a year to come will be satisfied.

Our farmers have plowed and planted for this great crop of wheat while there was an unprecedented shortage of labor that could be hired. As Secretary Houston says: "With less help than ever before, they have utilized to the fullest capacity all their man power, family power, horse power, and machinery." But this is only a beginning.

> Farmers have done and will continue to do their part. They have planted generously. They will need the assistance of many additional laborers in cultivation and harvesting.

We are confident that this labor problem will be solved. Two Federal departments, those of Agriculture and Labor, for some time past engaged in finding and distributing workers, will be helped by State and city authorities and by many local associations. The crops will be harvested and saved.

THE FIRST FRENCH NATIONALIST.

At Orleans today the anniversary of the deliverance of France by JOAN OF ARC, as the Maid of Orleans is curiously called in English, will be kept with a new piety of remembrance and gratitude, with the deeper-felt solemnity imposed by these years of endurance and heroism, with a sympathy and an understanding which this "poor little shepherdess," this dreaming cattle-tender of Domremy, has not always had in France. Today, too, begin the three days of prayer ordered by Cardinal AMETTE, Archbishop of Paris, for the success of the allied armies.

How remote, how horrible now seem the cynical lubricities of VOLTAIRE's "Pucelle," so admired in the eighteenth century; and ANATOLE FRANCE must wonder at the mood in which he wrote his life of her. How far is France from those divisions and hatreds of a few years back! The Catholic Church of France, by the devotion of its hierarchy and its priests to France, has won the admiration, it is not too much to say the love, even of the almost ferocious secularists and skeptics. Faded are the intolerances carried to such a "logical" length, say, in the prime of Mr. COMBES. Hundreds of priests and clerics have fallen for France. Some Irish or English "padre"—we have forgotten which—has recorded an act which symbolizes the sacrifice of these French priests. After a battle, amid heaps of slain or desperately wounded men, there is a call for a priest. A priest lifts himself up a little from the ground, "with his mutilated hand" absolves and blesses that dying company, and then dies.

"Quand les Français ne s'aimaient pas," ("When Frenchmen hated one another,") so a Frenchman has written of the dissensions and quarrels so recent in time, seeming so ancient now. The reconciliation, the new feeling, is much more than a softening of theological differences, of antireligious prejudices. It is not a matter of Catholic and Protestant, and Jew and agnostic. All kinds of opinion have had their new experience. "Apaches" have made gallant soldiers of land and air. Pacifists like HERVE have nobly seen their error. In the common suffering, in the daily communion with death, men's minds have reached an unconscious stoicism, or a brave mysticism. Beyond and apart from all theologies, all affirmations and denials, they see the religion of duty. They see themselves ready to perish, wounded hideously, blind, dying for sacred and imperishable immaterial ends. Even the Sadducee among them looks forward to the freedom and security of his country and his people, continuous, immortal, albeit for himself he cherishes no immortal hopes.

So, while the world is richer than ever before in saints and heroes, old saints and mystics, the generous enthusiasms of the past, come nearer to the mind and belief. Amid the intolerable desecrations and bestialities of the Germans, one loves to think of this little rustic girl, hearing raptly strong ST. MICHAEL, kind ST. MARGUERITE and ST. CATHERINE, familiar figures on the walls of the church, inspirers of her visions. But their great inspirer was the sorrow, the ruin of France. From Somme to Loire, a waste. The land untilled or thick with woods. No roads, no trade. Castles, villages, towns in ruins, churches defiled. Foreign enemies long on the soil. Domestic fierce battlings of Armagnac and Burgundian. A worse time than this. A time so drunk with death that year after year the Dance of Death went on in the Cemetery of the Innocents at Paris. In all the burying grounds wolves were fighting for the dead. A feeble King under the influence of favorites. A time of despair, it seemed.

The deliverer was at hand. We see JEANNE sending her uncle to ROBERT of Baudricourt. Will he aid her to go to Court? "Da lill colapbes," "Smack the minx well," says ROBERT, no friend of prophetic or other Virgins. She starts on her own hook to see him. Of "rustic countenance," naturally, rather thick-set, short, squatty, one hears; clad in some loud, coarse red peasant dress. But she impresses rude ROBERT. She has a low, musical voice, strange, high ideas. She is persuasive. The folks in that Champagne neck of land "between Bar, Toul, and Lorraine" believe in her. She shall go to Chinon and the Dauphin. "My brothers of Paradise tell me to go." The long black hair is snipped off. Somebody lends her a man's suit, somebody a horse.

How at Chinon YOLANDE of Aragon, mother-in-law of CHARLES VII., stood by her, saw in her the strength of the people, the representative and awakener of popular, of national, hope; how, in spite of the King's favorites, haters of the people, friends of the Duke of BURGUNDY and the anti-nationalists, she won her way to the royal presence; found and knew the King, according to the gracious legend or history, in disguise among his courtiers, and hailed him, "In GOD's name, it is you and none other"; how she convinced the Dauphin in a whisper, brought that unfriendly Court to be of her mind, and was sent to relieve Orleans; who doesn't know her story?

We see her on her "great black horse," bareheaded, in white armor, an axe in her hand. We see her messengers in Fierbois Church, finding behind the altar the sword with five crosses on the blade. A Prince of the blood rides by her side. A band of priests chants "Veni Creator," and the soldiers, a hard lot, take up the hymn, confess themselves, "get religion," as BILLY SUNDAY would say. JOAN, greeted as a deliverer along her way, has transformed into enthusiasts, heroes, saints—for the moment—those fifteenth-century hard cases. The English leave one of their Orleans forts as JOAN's meagre force appears. "GOD at the asking of ST. LOUIS and ST. CHARLES the Great had pity," she says, "on the City of Orleans."

It has been besieged since October, 1428. She thanks GOD in the Cathedral April 29, 1429. May 8 the English abandon it. The coronation at Rheims, in that Cathedral now ruined by the Germans, awaits her. Her doom awaits her. She has done her task. She was the first, the greatest French nationalist. "The only possible peace," she said, was that the enemy should go back to their country. "Were there 100,000 more of them, they shall conquer France never, never!" JOAN OF ARC is a symbol, a hope to France, to her old foe fighting so splendidly for her, to all the friends of freedom.

MOUNT WASHINGTON'S COG-RAILWAY TO CLOSE.

Since the Summer of 1869 the Mount Washington cog-railway has made the premier peak of the White Hills a show mountain for tourists from every State in the Union, including leg-bound gentlemen young and old, the ladies, and children out of arms. Bridal couples have been undecided as between Niagara and Mount Washington. The cog-railway was not a heroic way to attain the summit—the partridge was never in a hurry to fly out of the way—but it brought thousands of visitors to the pinnacle whence they could view the "epic landscape," which has a circumference of nearly 1,000 miles and takes in parts of five States and a sweep of the Province of Quebec. By comparison the number of sightseers by trail and wagon road from the Glen House has been negligible.

This Summer the cog-railway, SYLVESTER MARSH's masterpiece, will not run. That is the announcement of the Boston & Maine Railroad Company, which pleads that the Draft and competing industries have attracted all but three of its thirty engineers, firemen, brakemen, and trackmen. There will be a watchman on the summit to look after the water supply for the new hotel, which seems to be in an unfinished state, for the company's distressful notice says that "some scheme may be worked whereby those who tramp the mountains may be able to find a haven for the night." This may interest automobile parties coming late up the "carriage road," eight and a half miles long, with an average grade twelve feet in one hundred, if they can make the climb. The Appalachians and the unattached climbers already have "huts," on lower peaks near by, at their disposal. They would scorn elaborate preparations for their entertainment on the rock peak of Washington itself.

Of course, no true hill climber ever ascended by the cog-railway, but the experience was a joy to those who did not possess a good pair of legs, and lungs to go with them. The quaint train of cars moved up very slowly, as became a railroad which was built by sections in consecutive years, one-quarter mile in 1866, three-quarters in 1867, one mile, to the top of Jacob's Ladder, in 1868, and the home stretch the following year. In 1876 the management reported: "We have now run the road seven years, and have not as yet injured a single person nor damaged the property to the value of a cent." But the road had paid no dividends, although the round trip cost $4.

The train's speed can be easily calculated from the running time of one and a half hours for two and three-sixteenths miles from Ammonoosuc station to the top. That, at least, was the old schedule. Five States and the Province of Quebec could not be seen from the cog-railway, but it was a view of a wonderful spread of mountains and church-steepled valleys; it could be assimilated in the time given to a luxurious course dinner. There was opportunity to identify the saxifrages, sandworts, reindeer moss, and other specimens of Labrador plant life. Above Jacob's Ladder, "if the extra shawls and overcoats have not yet been donned," says a guidebook, "they will be at this point, where the east wind is met." At one place the leisurely traveler looked down into the savage gloom of the Great Gulf. There were trestle curves to round that made the nervous shiver, but the cog-railway was really safer than a bed at home. No one ever moved at more than a snail's pace on the road except the workmen who shot down at dizzying speed on boards fitted over the oily centre rail. The best time reported for any of the rolling stock was even faster, when an empty platform car, detached by experimenters, made the descent to Ammonoosuc station in three minutes, and was there distributed in splinters.

While it will be a grief to periodical visitors to Mount Washington to omit their ride up by the inimitable cog-railway, the trails will still call. It may be doubted whether there is a grander promenade in the States than the easy Crawford Trail affords. What glorious spaces, what distances lost in pearly haze, what ever-changing contour of peaks heaped up tumultuous! The boulder-strewn King's Ravine climb, with its strain on sinews, is too adventurous ever to pall. And while snow continues to be the most constant product of New England, Tuckerman's Ravine trail will always lure the curious. And there are other ways of getting up besides the prosaic "carriage road," so beautiful for the off-look. We have a notion that the closing of the cog-railway will provoke no lamenting from those self-centred friends of solitary trails, the mountain climbers.

WORK OF THE HANDICAPPED

Lyman Abbott Praises the Services of the School for Crippled Children.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is at 157 Henry Street a school for crippled children. The pupils are gathered by omnibuses from their homes and brought to this school, where they are looked after through the day by a nurse or nurses, and by a physician who visits the school, I believe, every day. They are most, if not all of them, children of very poor parents. The academic instruction is given by the City of New York, the school being a part of its school system. It is at once a pathetic and a beautiful sight to see these children in their schoolroom or on their playground or carrying on, as some of them do, industrial work by which they are able to add something to the resources of their families.

I have twice visited this school, and perhaps it is due to this fact that I recently received a request from one of the boys, from which I quote two sentences:

> We are trying to obtain a prize for securing the largest amount of subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan. We do want to help serve our country and to make the Third Liberty Loan a grand success.

In acknowledging my subscription for a "baby bond" through this school, my boy correspondent told me that the school had sold $950 worth of bonds. The incident appealed to me, and I report it through your columns because I think it will appeal to others as an indication of the widespread interest in the nation's participation in the world's crusade for liberty and the patriotic and loyal devotion to America manifested by a great desire, even by those who are most handicapped, to have some share in making the world safe for human brotherhood.

Recognition for Italy.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

We wish to congratulate your correspondent for calling the attention of the American public to the fact that the Red, White, and Green of Italy should never be missing wherever the American, French, and English standards wave. The tremendous contributions of Italy to civilization, and the heroic efforts she has made and is making toward making this world a decent place in which to live, by fighting side by side with all the Allies, are too great and numerous to be overlooked by the people in this country. No other nation has, perhaps, appreciated and praised to the utmost America's entrance into this war as much as Italy, and, therefore, we think that it should be no more than right and just that the American people should be led by this same feeling of justice and fairness to give Italy the credit and the recognition she so well deserves.

Our Attitude Toward Turkey.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apparently the Washington authorities and some missionaries believe that by calling the present state of things in Turkey peace we can better help the suffering Armenians. I am convinced that nothing could be further from the truth. By a declaration of war, our nation would be in position to finance the defense of the Armenians, who are now fighting for life in the remnants of their territory.

President Wilson backs the appeal to save starving Armenia by volunteer gifts of money when there is no safety outside of British controlled territory for any Armenian in all the great stretch of Western Asia.

Money from us, Government money to fight with, is the only help to Armenia. Why contribute to keep men alive a few days and keep them helpless—ready for the butcher? Our namby-pamby policy means the extinction of Armenia. W. J. FRASER.

Grand Duke Nicholas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is one, and only one, leader in Russia today able to lead her out of all her miseries, and that is the Grand Duke Nicolai Nicolaevitch, the tried and not found wanting great General Russia has developed. The General who did so well in the early part of the war, till the machinations of the "German clique" frustrated his great victories and he had to make his famous retreat, owing to lack of ammunition. The one Grand Duke hated by the Kaiser, feared by all the Germans, who was persona non grata at the Petrograd Court for long years, the one of all the Grand Dukes that is the most democratic, and the one beloved by all his soldiers. Russia will need again all her soldiers and a man to lead them.

The Salvation Army at the Front.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In view of the Salvation Army campaign to raise funds for the relief of soldiers at the front, I am prompted to quote from a letter recently received from a member of my immediate family now serving in France, under date of April 5, which gives credit to that agency for the mitigation of the soldiers' hardships, which, perhaps, many of us are inclined to take too lightly. He says:

"The Salvation Army is doing fine work over here. The nights are terribly cold, but no matter at what time of night or morning men come in from raid or patrol, there is always a Salvation Army girl (the men call her Sister Madeline) in the front line trench with a cup of hot coffee for each of them. They have a dugout like the rest of us, and when off duty the men can go there and get things to eat at very low prices."

Germans in the Ukraine.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The paralleling of the German words and deeds, concerning the Ukraine, was a brilliant hit, converting the excuse into a boomerang of condemnation.

TO HELP RUSSIA.

The Object to Get Rid of Prussians and Bolsheviki.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The redemption of Russia from Bolshevism and Prussianism is the supreme question of the day. It is becoming more and more evident that the despotic rule of the Bolsheviki cannot possibly continue much longer. When the end of Bolshevist rule shall come, as it will and must come, what is to become of Russia? Can Russia redeem herself and attain the position of an orderly democracy without the friendly help and guidance of the other democracies of the world?

After the overthrow of the Czarist régime, Germany saw and grasped the opportunity of disorganizing Russia. Those who have closely followed the developments of the Russian revolution believe that Germany could never have succeeded in bringing about the downfall of Russia but for certain blunders committed by the Allies in their attitude toward Russia. These blunders consisted, in a great measure, in the lack of concerted action on the part of the Allies to come to Russia's assistance when there was still time to save Russia. While the Allies were hesitating, Germany was acting, acting not only through her military forces, but through her insidious propaganda, injecting the poisonous virus of anarchy into the life of the Russian people, thereby bringing them down to a state of complete helplessness.

Sooner or later the Russian people are bound to wake up to a realization of the fact that they have been shamefully betrayed by an unscrupulous band of irresponsible zealots and dreamers. Woe to these betrayers when that fact once dawns upon the Russian mind!

The question, however, that interests the world today is, whether such awakening of Russia will of itself be sufficient to redeem Russia, to the extent of making her a potent force against the greatest menace the world has ever been faced with, the German autocracy. As a matter of fact, Germany has now little to fear through the overthrow of the Bolsheviki. Her dirty work in Russia has practically been completed. No military power of Germany, however great, could ever have accomplished the destruction and disorganization of Russia in a more effective way than was done by means of German propaganda.

But the time is fast approaching when the saner element of the Russian people will come to realize that, in order to preserve Russian freedom, Russia must first liberate the country from the Prussian yoke. How to reach this saner element and bring home to them the fact that America stands ready with an effective organization to help Russia, in every conceivable way, is the task that is facing us today. To be sure, it is no easy task. We have got to win the confidence of the Russian people in the first place. We have got to make it clear to the Russian people that America does not intend to interfere with Russia's internal affairs, and that America has no selfish motives and seeks nothing for herself in this undertaking.

The question then presents itself, What are we doing today to help Russia find her way back into the ranks of civilization? What are we doing today to help Russia right herself, in a manner that will not only bring about the overthrow of her false prophets but will bring home to her the fact that her dearly won freedom is worthless unless she stands ready to enlist her forces to make the world safe for democracy?

Today Russia is helpless. She is groping in the dark, looking for a friendly hand to guide her into the light. Shall we not grasp this opportunity now and start a healthy, vigorous movement which shall have for its object an immediate plan of action to save Russia from the claws of Germany?

Let us get together, without delay, a body of experts on the Russian situation, men and women who know Russia, who love Russia, who are familiar with Russian customs and traditions, who know how dearly Russia has paid to gain her freedom, so quickly lost through the treachery and duplicity of Germany. Let this body of experts work out a plan of action, the underlying basis of which shall be an immediate campaign of education to enlighten the Russian people on the danger of Prussian influence and domination. Let there be an intelligent investigation as to what are the immediate needs of Russia, so that this campaign of education can be backed up by a generous and unstinted outpouring of assistance to meet such needs.

Then will the Russian giant reawaken, and the world shall see again a powerful and resurrected Russia, a free and democratic people, ready to join the other democracies to stamp out forever the meanest military autocracy in the annals of history.

Very True of the Kaiser.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In looking over the vigorous English of Sir Roger L'Estrange's preface to his translation of Seneca's "Morals," I came upon the following phrases which seemed to me so aptly to characterize the Kaiser that I send you the passage on the chance that you might care to print it.

"Alas, what could Ingratitude do without Hypocrisy, the inseparable companion of it, and, in effect, the bolder and blacker devil of the two? For Lucifer himself never had the face to lift up his eyes to heaven, and talk to the Almighty at the familiar rate of our pretended patriots and zealots, and at the same time to make Him party to a cheat!"—Sir Roger L'Estrange, preface to Seneca's "Morals," London, 1793.

The Aircraft Question.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

What the buyer of Liberty bonds and the relatives of those on the firing line at the front feel they are entitled to know is what has become of the $840,000,000 ($640,000,000 appropriation and $200,000,000 deficiency,) expended during the last year by the Aircraft Board with but little or anything to show for it. Mr. Borglum's integrity or competency is of minor importance and is not the issue. The plain duty of every citizen at home to those in the fighting forces at the front is to assist without fear or favor in determining what has become of this vast sum. The war can be won only by those in authority honestly and promptly taking cognizance of and correcting all irregularities and deficiencies and punishing all who have betrayed their trust. M. R. McADOO.

MOTHERS OF SOLDIERS.

Mothers of Soldiers! How many, today,
Have turned with smiling lips away—
Turned quickly away, lest he should see
Behind the smile the tears that she
Is trying so hard to keep away?
Mothers of Soldiers—going today!

Mothers of Soldiers—brave mothers, too—
God in His mercy comfort you,
But smile at your soldier boy! Smile and be brave!
Cheer up the young hero who goes 'cross the wave
To fight for humanity. Be proud, I say,
Mothers of Soldiers—going today!

Mothers of Soldiers—carry your cross!
You, too, are soldiers—fighting your loss.
Be proud you can send him; when he's far away
Go with him in spirit—and pray—and pray—
That God in His mercy may send peace some day—
Peace on earth and good-will, to stay.
Mothers of Soldiers, marching away!

TWO REVOLUTIONS.

"The Fighting Danton and the Gesticulating Trotzky" as Typical of the French Radicals and the Russian Bolsheviki.

By WILLIAM STEARNS DAVIS,
Professor of History, University of Minnesota.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Various writers of the ultra-liberal school have suggested in such organs of "advanced democracy" as The New Republic that the recent proceedings of the Bolsheviki in Russia have been marvelously like the upheaval which ended the old régime in France, and that these deeds should have lenient judgment from the outside world, just as today we recognize the good as well as the evil in the French Revolution.

With all due respect for such opinions, I think this appeal for the Bolsheviki is grievously unfair to the destroyers of absolutism in France, and that it cannot stand for an instant at the bar of serious history.

What the Russian revolution may hereafter become is known only to Providence. What the Russian revolution has accomplished up to date has been pointedly described by Mr. Wilson, "a great people, helpless by its own act, lies for the time at their [the Germans'] mercy." No such damning charge could ever be brought against the most obsessed victims of Rousseau's philosophy. The Jacobin and the Maximalist had, indeed, this much in common—each was possessed by an impossible theory, and each stopped at nothing in putting it into execution. Here resemblance largely ceases.

The first stages of the Russian revolution, a decade ago, presented, indeed, a likeness to sundry of the earlier events of the French Revolution, and especially do those connected with the convening of the first Duma; but with the dissolution of this body the similarities decidedly vanish. The fact was that the Russian radicals had no fighting force. Louis XVI. was helpless before the defiant National Assembly, because French troops would not shoot down Frenchmen, and the populace of Paris speedily showed itself able to fight as well as to vociferate. Nicholas II. could crush the Duma, because the Russian Army was still loyal, and the Russian city mobs were better at bomb throwing around corners than stark fighting in manly battle. So from 1906 to 1917 we have a great hiatus in the Russian revolution, one sure to have lasted much longer if there had been no war with Germany, and if the arms of "capitalistic" France, Britain, and Italy had not prevented Czardom from very speedy military overthrow, before the old loyalty to the monarchy could be attacked from within as well as from without.

When the Russian revolution was able to resume its stride it found itself possessed of assets which a Frenchman of 1792 would have said made its progress delightfully easy. It is true the war had been fearfully bloody and checkered with great defeats. These, however, served mainly to discredit to the bottom the old monarchy, and make its return much less likely than that of "the little King in the Temple." It is also true that the country was suffering from great economic and industrial prostration. This was no worse than what the French radicals wrestled with and conquered in the days of the assignats and the law of the maximum. On the other hand, unlike the France of 1792-3, the New Russia came into being with three great powers in Europe already its sworn and hearty allies, if only it would discharge its international pledges, while the mighty republic beyond seas was ready to stretch forth the hand of very practical fellowship in any way it could be of possible assistance. As for Germany, the military situation did not require that the Russians should push any sanguinary offensive. They had only to hold their lines tight, to make demonstrations, to keep as many Teutonic troops involved as possible, and Britain, France, Italy, and America were ready and willing to see the war through.

To compare the action of Russia of 1917, with two-thirds of the world straining to help her, with the France of 1793, without a single ally, facing advancing and embattled Europe by land and sea, is an insult to the memory of the men of the older revolution. Yet France gloriously succeeded, and Russia—well, according to the current prints, she has just signed away 32 per cent. of her population—and there are still good editors who crave "kindly consideration" for the comrades of the Bolsheviki, and liken their case to that of France!

Is it mere Tory peevishness which says that recent events prove that there has been something inherently rotten in the ultra-radicalism of Eastern Europe, which can earn it only the spurning contempt of Americans, who can thrill with a genuine sympathy for the inspired fanaticism which flung back the Prussian at Valmy, and in the name of "liberty, equality, and fraternity" declared war upon the entire monarch-ridden world?

Let me be clear. Considered as a race there is no pacifism in the Muscovites. With all their sins the men of Old Russia could fight. Not by loquacity and by radio-propaganda did Peter and Catherine the Great and the icy-hearted Nicholas I. create the empire which stretched from the marches of Posen to the Sea of Japan. Old Russia was mighty, even as Bourbon France was mighty. One could execrate it, but despise it never. But if the "comrades," who inoculated a vast people with the virus of extreme Marxianism, have anything really in common with the "citizens" whose Bible was the "Social Contract," they must go far to show it. It is not abusiveness, it is merely stating historical fact to say that the Russian radical has seemed very ready to talk for his cause, but that the French radical was ready to die for his. And the western world has never withheld recognition even for the crack-brained fanatic if only he proved that the blood in his veins is red, not yellow.

Western editors of "liberal" sympathies seem willing to disguise from themselves the terrible blow which has been given everywhere to the advance of radicalism by the proof to all the world that the Bolsheviki are guilty of the two greatest crimes which propagandists can commit—cowardice and treason.

It is needless to ask how far Lenine has caught the glint of German gold. The evidence in his case is not merely to be waived aside. But the real treason was committed with open eyes by the whole Maximalist conclave, when, after going to Brest-Litovsk with boastings and arrogance unparalleled, announcing that by a masterly mobilization of oral cavities they were going to coerce Hindenburg into a "democratic peace," at the first flashings of the Prussian sword they bent themselves in the most sudden and humiliating downfall of any great nation since Belshazzar's night in old Babylon. The cause of democracy has been betrayed throughout the entire world; and by a new Judas kiss the free nations are sent into a new Gethsemane of desperate war, all because a gang of propagandists first robbed a great people of its power and manhood, and then left it stripped and fettered before the despoiler. Beside this feat of the Bolshevists the wildest measures of Marat and Robespierre seem those of prudent and reasonable men.

The Bolshevists have betrayed Russia. Unless, of course, the American sword restores the balance, unless our nation goes down into the Valley of the Shadow of a vast national sacrifice they have betrayed the freedom of the world. The writer of this letter believes that he has read a little history; personally he does not recall a case of sheer cringing cowardice, all circumstances considered, more complete and viler than the recent capitulation of the unwashed despots of the New Russia.

Let no well-informed man insult the paladins of the French Revolution by comparing them with the men who have wrought this deed of shame. Sinners doubtless they were in that Paris of their wrath, sanguinary, giving the guillotine no rest, merciless to their foes, and merciless to one another. But their love was truly for France, their song was the "Marseillaise," (born in that Strassburg which now stretches out its fettered hands for the deliverer,) and they did not cling to life at the cost of honor. Their deeds matched their eloquence. They arrayed France against assailing Europe, and France, not Europe, was the victor. They wrought greatly and gravely, and for all their crimes history has nevertheless written them down among the immortals.

A brave man and a brave nation never need to be "explained," even by a very "liberal" editor.

Certain Americans may seem to their advanced contemporaries very "illiberal," and assuredly they do not arrogate to themselves that exclusive title of "Intellectuals," (the copyrighted trademark of highbrow near-socialism,) but they have not failed to hear the whine of Lenine at the German peace terms:

"Their knees are on our chest. Our position is hopeless."

And then across the years comes the great voice of another master revolutionist, facing a more menacing invasion, the world against him and the land in chaos; the voice of Danton, calling to his nation: "Boldness, and again boldness, and ever boldness—and France is saved!"

How does the Jacobin cock lift his bravo crest above the Soviet weasel!

Today, American soldiers are going into deadly battle under a French commander in chief. Yet until very lately at least there have been clever editors who have turned out long and labored articles explaining, extenuating and pleading for the gyrations of the radicals of Russia, and then stopping long to dilute their ink when it came to writing "Alsace-Lorraine." Their reasons for this may at present be left to conjecture, but when next they write I trust that they will remember that some Americans understand there are two kinds of radicals—very different indeed—the fighting Danton and the gesticulating Trotzky.

FRENCH SOLDIER'S LETTER.

A Tribute to the War Work of American Women.

A letter from a French soldier to a New York woman:

Colombes, France, March 22, 1918.

Madam: Though I be a little late in expressing our appreciation, it is a duty most agreeable to recognize the debt of gratitude under which your bounty has placed us; and I beg you will believe that the delay of acknowledgment has but added interest to the debt we owe you.

We have received the different packages of sugar you have so generously sent, and may we speak of our appreciation of the care you have shown in the packing, so that all have reached us in perfect condition? It has been for our table a grateful addition, for the restrictions under which we must live have reduced our domestic economy to a minimum that would have occasioned us great deprivation had it not been for your generous gifts and those of others of your compatriots. And as I address you this note of thanks allow me also, dear Madam, to thank, through you, the innumerable American women whose generosity has helped us to endure the frightfulness of the terrible trial called war. In the name of all French women and all French men allow me to say "Thanks."

From the beginning of this gigantic conflict you have given your sympathies in a thousand ways, personally, as well as by sending us hospital supplies, and the priceless devotion of your Red Cross. Nothing has seemed to exhaust your generosity. Despite our ceaseless needs you have never failed to respond to the wants of our empty coffers, though as our necessities have grown beyond measure we have been obliged again and again to appeal to your tireless devotion.

What can I say? We have not even had to formulate those appeals, that perhaps our pride might have prevented, before you come to us smiling with arms full of gifts for our dear wounded; and more precious to us even than those gifts have been the smiles with which they have been bestowed.

It would seem as though you had exhausted the treasures of your generosity; but no, you wished to do still more, noble women of America; having given us your love and your gold, you have given us also a part of yourselves, that part of all parts women hold most dear, the children of their womb, your sons; the pride of their hearts, your husbands; the hope of their youths, your fiancés.

Nothing written, nothing spoken by human beings can express the gratitude with which the hearts of the French beat in presence of sacrifice so supreme; but be assured, Madam, that the voices of the French mothers whose wounded sons your ambulances have gathered from the battlefields and whom your surgeons have snatched as from the grave, these voices have risen in such fervent prayers and thanksgivings to God that He will surely return you a hundredfold in benedictions, for you and for your children, the noble deeds with which you have overwhelmed us.

Other pens, abler than mine, will some day express more adequately the gratitude of my country to yours, but I have thought that I might attempt to express the thanks that spring from the heart of the humble French artisan. * * *

25,000 WAR NURSES NEEDED THIS YEAR

New York County Red Cross Makes Appeal at Request of General Gorgas.

LAFAYETTE FUND INCREASED

Committee for Devastated France Takes Over Care of 600 Homeless Children There.

Major Gen. William C. Gorgas, U. S. A., the Surgeon General of the Army, has asked the New York County Chapter of the Red Cross to call to the attention of all nurses within its jurisdiction the great needs of the military services and the fact that 25,000 nurses will be needed by the army before the end of this year, 5,000 of them by the end of the present month. There are now more than 8,000 Red Cross nurses in the army and navy corps, 2,000 of whom are in France caring for the American wounded, or, at the request of the British Government, working in the British hospitals in Picardy. Others are serving in Italy, Greece, and Palestine, while hundreds of others are aiding in the relief of civilian sufferers in the allied nations.

Regarding the call of General Gorgas for 25,000 nurses before the end of this year, a statement was issued by the Red Cross yesterday.

"The United States Army and Navy Nurse Corps, and the Red Cross Nursing, of which Miss Jane A. Delano is the Director, are calling upon the graduate nurses of the country to enter the military service," the statement says.

Nurses Called Like Soldiers.

"Every day in the headquarters of the American Red Cross, in Washington, groups of trained nurses are being mobilized for military service for the cantonments at home or the war hospitals abroad. They are called like soldiers and respond like soldiers. The country is leaning upon them as heavily as on its fighters. For the United States is now fully awake to the realization that an adequate nursing force is just as essential to victory as adequate infantry or artillery or fleet.

"So keen, indeed, is the realization, that every man and woman is involved. The Government is calling on the general public to do its share—to make the sacrifices, fill in the gaps, and promote all public and home health measures, to release the trained nurse for war duty. Those who engage private duty nurses are urged to give the preference to those nurses awaiting orders of mobilization, that the financial burden may not be made too great. Practically every training school for nurses in the United States is expanding its accommodations to take in a greatly increased number of student nurses to help meet the unparalleled situation. Adjustment is going on along the line.

"Also, the Red Cross has modified its former requirements for enrollment. The age limit has been lowered to 21 years, and in special cases nurses over 40 are accepted. Smaller schools for nurses have been put on the accredited list, and applicants are judged on their merits. On the average more than 1,000 nurses a month are enrolling with the Red Cross Nursing Service, and its total enrollment, which is the largest of any nursing organization in the world, exceeds 19,000.

Entitled to War Risk Insurance.

"What it means to be a Red Cross nurse is a question that thousands, even hundreds of thousands, of women are asking. The answer is that to be a Red Cross nurse is to have met the standards of enrollment and to be subject to such calls of duty from the Red Cross as are specified in the enrollment.

"The Red Cross Nursing Service is the reserve of the United States Army and Navy Corps, and supplies nurses as needed to the United States Public Health Service. When Red Cross nurses are called on for service with the Army and Navy Nurse Corps they receive the pay and maintenance provided by the law for these corps, and are entitled to the same war risk insurance as officers and enlisted men. All nurses assigned to duty in military and naval hospitals automatically become members of the Army and Navy Nurse Corps, and after their assignment to duty are no longer under the supervision and direction of the Red Cross. These nurses wear on the collars of their uniforms the bronze letters 'U. S.,' indicating service under the Government. Those serving directly under the Red Cross wear the Red Cross insignia.

"The Red Cross nurse has become a symbolical figure to the world. Courage is her tradition. While countless thousands of men and women can only follow the army and navy with thoughts of eagerness and yearning, by virtue of her knowledge and skill she becomes a member of the one group of women permitted to belong to the military, directly serving the colors, sharing the fortunes and some of the risks of war."

United Hospital Fund.

Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, President of the Woman's Auxiliary of the United Hospital Fund, and Mrs. James Speyer, the Treasurer, announce the issuance of a special appeal to 15,000 women for the war needs of New York hospitals. Mrs. Alexander states that "many of these hospitals lack money for running expenses although they are a vital factor for victory."

"These hospitals," Mrs. Alexander adds, "remove defects of drafted men who would otherwise be rejected as physically disqualified for military service; they supply doctors and nurses for the overseas forces and the camps at home; aid in caring for the wounded and sick soldiers and sailors at home, and maintain the efficiency of thousands of civilians."

The office of the fund is 105 East Twenty-second Street. The members of the Woman's Auxiliary, in addition to Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. Speyer, are Mrs. Edward S. Harkness, Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, Mrs. Robert Olyphant, Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan, Mrs. Henry W. Munroe, Mrs. Archer M. Huntington, and Mrs. George Blumenthal. The address of Mrs. Speyer, the Treasurer, is 1,058 Fifth Avenue.

American Girls' Aid.

The American Girls' Aid for the Collection of Clothing for the Victims of the European War in France, 293 Fifth Avenue, has collected to date $134,064. Mrs. Gladys Hollingsworth Attwood is the Chairman, and A. Seton Post, Jr., the Treasurer of the aid. The organization has shipped 10,400 cases of hospital and other relief supplies to France. In addition to its other activities the committee also supports 346 French war orphans.

War Babies' Cradle.

Mrs. Jules S. Bache, Honorary Treasurer of the War Babies' Cradle, 360 Madison Avenue, is asking to have subscriptions renewed which were made by many people last year to the War Babies' Cradle Fund. Donations of babies' clothing are also solicited.

Mrs. Bache has received word from Countess de Hemptinne, who is in charge of the work in France, that the need grows more and more urgent. In Pas de Calais alone, the central point of the charity, 500 French babies will be born before January, and not a cent to help them.

Mme. de Hemptinne is now in charge of all the French maternity cases in that district, and all are dependent on the funds collected for the War Babies' Cradle, which is now supervised by both the civil and military ministries.

Donations either of money or clothing may be addressed to Mrs. Bache at 42 Broadway. Recent cash contributions to the fund total $177.

Charité Maternelle de Paris.

The American Fund of the Charité Maternelle de Paris, subscriptions to which should be sent to Mrs. Elizabeth Rutherford Stuyvesant, the Treasurer, at 32 Liberty Street, has been increased by $107.

The Lafayette Fund.

The Lafayette Fund, which provides comfort kits, costing $2 each, for the soldiers fighting in the trenches of France has collected to date $266,958. Francis Roche, the Vanderbilt Hotel, is Treasurer of the fund. Recent receipts included a check for $1,687 from the Boston committee.

Fatherless of France.

The New York Committee of the Fatherless Children of France, of which Miss Luisita Leland, 563 Park Avenue, is Chairman, and Alexander J. Hemphill, 140 Broadway, the Treasurer, has collected to date $413,040.

"I am receiving," says Miss Leland, "letters from all over the country, expressing thanks for the opportunity this work gives to Americans to repay in a small degree, by saving her children, the debt America owes France. The work is in no sense a charity, but is the outpouring of loving sympathy from one great nation to her sister republic in her hours of suffering. The small cost of an orphan's support ($36.50 a year) brings it within the reach of those of moderate means, and the correspondence which follows between donor and child draws ever closer the bonds uniting the two countries. Marshal Joffre, head of the Paris Committee, has personally recommended the orphans of some of his official family for assistance."

The Man Who Found Good Health

Middle-age business man tells how a thorough physical examination added years to his life and prevented unnecessary worry and suffering.

Mr. Thomas R. Chesterton, of Chesterton & Co., laid down the magazine he was reading and reached for the office telephone.

"Miss Karr," he said, "please tell Mr. Gardiner that I should like to see him."

Gardiner received the message in some trepidation. He wasn't feeling particularly well that day, and he sort of dreaded an interview with the Chief. Moreover, he was getting old and he knew it.

Chesterton, however, greeted him with more than usual warmth.

"Pull up a chair, Bob," he said kindly. "I want to tell you about a story I've just been re-reading in an old copy of The Saturday Evening Post. It's called 'Skinner's Big Idea' and it's well worth repeating.

"Skinner was one of three partners in a successful business. They had extended their lines to all corners of the United States and they sought new worlds to conquer. They dreamed of South America.

"Two of the partners decided to go down there personally to sign up the business. But before they went they called in Skinner.

"'Skinner,' said McLoughlin, 'we think there ought to be a change here.'

"'Change is characteristic of progress, Mac,' Skinner observed. 'But to be specific.'

"'To be specific, we think we've got too many old men on the payroll.'

"Skinner started. Too many old men on the payroll! The idea was preposterous! True, there were some old men, but these were the very men who had made the business.

"'Forty—forty-five—fifty—fifty-five:—why these men because of their experience should be at the very apex of their usefulness. And now they were being called deadwood; too venerable for an up-to-date concern, etc.

"'Skinner', said one of the partners, 'you're the youngest of us. We want you to let these men go while we're away.'

"Thus it was settled. But that night Skinner did a lot of thinking. And the result of it was—he didn't discharge these men at all. Not Skinner. A big idea came to him and he not only increased their efficiency despite the so-called handicap of the years, but he made them so valuable that they later saved the firm.

"I'm telling you all this, Bob, because of an experience of my own along the same line some years ago.

Longed For Graceful Old Age

"I was working out there in the office for forty dollars a week. It wasn't much, as salaries go nowadays, but to me it was everything.

"The wife and I had managed to save a little, but it was only a little. The children were growing up. There was a girl finishing in high school and a boy in his third year at college.

"I wanted to live on to see them both happily married. Sometimes the wife and I would plan on visiting our children in their own homes—perhaps to the prattle of little voices. And I tell you, the thought put a smile into many a lean day.

"But all at once, and it was all at once, too—I began to worry about my health. I felt myself slipping. First came a series of headaches—a certain indefinable tiredness—irritability—a strange beating around the eyes and temples—and days at a time when it was the worst kind of an effort for me to get down to the office.

"My work suffered. I began to make mistakes. It took me twice as long to clean up my desk, and even then I found myself going back over my work to make sure it was right.

"I knew I wasn't anywhere near my usual efficiency, and I began to fear for my job. The graceful old age that I had pictured began to fade out—drear and drab. I saw myself in a desperate struggle to get along—burdened by ill-health—dependent on my children for support—an old man out of a job.

"One day Joe Andrews came in for a more or less personal chat. He told me among other things that he had just been over to the Life Extension Institute for a physical examination.

"In an off-hand way I had heard of the Life Extension Institute, and the great work it is doing to conserve the life of the nation. But somehow, I had never brought it home to myself.

"This time, however, the name made more than a passing impression on me and I questioned Joe about every detail—the character of the men behind it—was it ethical—could I afford it—would it really do me any good—why were the Institute's physicians best fitted to give me the most thorough physical examination, and so forth.

"Joe answered all of these questions gladly because he was tremendously enthusiastic about the Institute. But it still seemed kind of new and vague and revolutionary to me, and I don't believe I would have taken the examination if he hadn't insisted on it.

"I tell you frankly, Gardiner, I have never had such an examination in all my life. It lasted anywhere from an hour to an hour and a half, and they didn't miss a single part of me. That night I slept soundly for the first time in months. A great load was off my mind. I had crossed the Rubicon. Whatever the future, I would not face it blindly. If there was anything wrong with me I would know it and take steps to prevent disaster before it was too late. And if there wasn't anything wrong—why, that was the end of all my worry and imagining.

A Health Inventory

"In about a week I received the report giving the findings of the Institute's examining and reviewing physicians. It took up 12 pages and told me frankly and honestly just where I stood in regard to health—pointing out in no uncertain terms just what I would have to do if I wanted to avoid premature breakdown and years of needless suffering.

"There wasn't anything scary about it — just plain common-sense all through.

"You, Bob, are just where I was five years ago. You haven't been sick in years. Yet middle-age is only a little way off and you must be on your guard. For that is the danger period.

"Only the other day I stood by the side of one of the greatest physicians in the country as he completed the laboratory diagnosis of a very dear friend. Years of training had steeled him to that sort of thing, but I fancied I saw a tear start down his kindly face.

"'Too late, Tom, too late. A year ago—six months ago even, I could have saved this man. And now it's too late. He waited too long. Disease has gotten such a start that no power in the world can stop it now. Oh, if he had only come to me sooner.'

"Disease does not develop overnight. Detected in time it can be checked or cured.

"Preceding most serious illnesses there is usually a long period of impairment or of progressive changes that gradually reduce your efficiency and power of resistance. These changes are frequently so slow and insidious that you do not realize them until they are well advanced, but from the very beginning they leave signs that science can detect.

"The Life Extension Institute, Bob, was organized by such men as Ex-President Taft, Ambassador Page and Professor Irving Fisher for this very purpose—to provide unbiased standardized health examinations at a moderate price and teach the simple, every-day principles of personal hygiene that every man and woman ought to know to avoid disease.

A Humanitarian Organization

"Over 60,000 men and women in all parts of the United States have already taken the health services of the Institute and received its guidance and instructions. The Institute is not a profit-making organization in the usual sense of the word, but a public-welfare organization on a self-supporting basis. Its work is approved by physicians of the highest ethical standing. Two-thirds of the profits are set aside in a trust fund for health work of a national scope. The Institute is irrevocably opposed to quacks and fads and fakes.

"No medical or surgical treatment is administered by the Institute, but counsel is given as to the form of treatment that should be sought if the conditions found cannot be remedied by hygienic measures.

"Take care of your health now, Bob, while there is yet time. Don't imagine you are in sound health because you feel well today, and don't worry over-much either because you have a headache, or a pain around the heart, or because your stomach is giving you temporary trouble. Learn exactly where you stand, not only for your own satisfaction and well-being, but for those dependent upon you.

"I like you, Bob, and some day there's going to be a larger job waiting around here for some clear-eyed, keen-minded man of 45 or 50. Take my advice, and learn more about the Life Extension Institute. You'll never regret it."

Membership Entitles You to the Following:

7. Keep-Well Bulletins covering your particular needs.

This system has been standardized from the Institute's wide experience in examining many thousands of individuals.

A Staff of 5000 Physicians

It makes no difference where you live. The Life Extension Institute comes to you wherever you are. It has an experienced staff of examining and reviewing physicians in its main office right here in New York, a branch office in Chicago, and a staff of more than 5000 physicians throughout the United States and Canada.

The cost of membership in the Life Extension Institute is low, because of its humanitarian character and national ideals.

Examinations of subscribers who live in New York City or vicinity are made at the head office of the Institute, 25 West Forty-fifth Street—on appointment by telephone or letter—between the hours of 9 A. M. and 5 P. M. Women physicians are available in the main office for the examination of women members who prefer them.

MANY DATE BACK TO 1545

Among the Robert Burns Volumes Is an Edinburgh Edition of His "Poems."

Seldom, if ever, have such collections of the works of John Donne, John Dryden, Thomas Gray, John Milton, and Alexander Pope been offered at public auction as are in the library of the late Winston H. Hagen, which will be sold at the Anderson Galleries on May 13, 14, 15, and 16.

One of the scarcest items in the sale is a little volume containing poems of John Skelton, Poet Laureate to King Henry VII. It is entitled "Here after foloweth certayne bokes copyled by Mayster Skelton, Poet Laureat, whose names here after shall appere. Name, Speke Parrot. The deth of the noble prince Kyng Edward the fourth. A treatyse of the Scottes. Ware the Hawke. The Tunnyng of Elynour Rummynge. Printed at London by Richard Lant for Henry Tab, dwelling in Paul's churchyard, at the Sygne of Judith." It is the earliest known edition, and was published about 1520. This edition was not in the Hoe or Huth library.

Bound in are the following, all by Skelton: "A litel boke called Colin Clout, London, Rycharde Kele, dwelling in the Poultry at the long shop," about 1545; "A lytell boke which hath to name, why come ye not to courte," Richard Kele, about 1545; and "The boke of Phyllyp Sparrowe," Richard Kele, about 1545. All are printed in black letter. These early printed works of Skelton are of the utmost rarity. The Hoe collection had only two, "Colin Clout" and "Why come ye not to courte." The Huth collection had the same two and also "Phyllyp Sparowe." Neither had the "Certayne Bokes." The volume is from the Locker library.

"Aurora," by Sir William Alexander, Earl of Stirling, London, 1804, the rare first edition, is in binding by F. Bedford. It is the Heber-Mitford-Locker copy, with their autographs. Rare also is the same author's "A Paraeneais to the Prince," London, 1604, first edition, in binding by Riviere. Charles Aleyn's "Historie of that wise and Fortunate Prince Henrie of that Name, the seventh, King of England," London, 1638, first edition is another rare book. "England's Parnassus," by Robert Allot, London, 1600, is the first poetical anthology of English literature and the most valuable. It contains no less than seventy-nine extracts from Shakespeare alone. "Toxophilus," by Roger Ascham, London, 1545, in black letter, is the rare first edition. No copy was contained in the Huth, Hoe, or McKee libraries, nor was one available for the Grolier collection, where the second edition is described. The same author's "The Scholemaster," London, 1570, is the rare first edition.

Sir Philip Sidney's "Ourania," London, 1604, is the rare first edition. It has been attributed sometimes to Nicholas Breton, but was more probably by Nathaniel Baxter, Sidney's tutor. There are two references to America in this early volume. "The Wild Goose Chase," by Francis Beaumont and John Fletcher, London, 1652, is the play which was lost and consequently could not be included in the 1647 folio edition of Beaumont and Fletcher's works. Robert Browning's "Pauline," London, 1833, is the first edition of the author's first publication. Only eleven copies are known to exist. This copy was formerly the property of Browning's uncle. It was given to him by his eldest brother, who was Robert Browning's father. "Pasquil's Mad-cappe Throwne at the Corruptions of These Times," London, 1626, is one of the rarest of Nicholas Breton's poetical pieces. Sir George Buck's "History of the Life and Reigne of Richard the Third," London, 1646, is a vindication of Richard III., giving him a character entirely different from that assigned him by Shakespeare and Sir Thomas More.

Among the Robert Burns items are the Kilmarnock, 1786, first edition of his "Poems," the first issue of the first Edinburgh edition, 1787, the first London edition, 1787, and the first and second American editions, printed in 1788, respectively in Philadelphia and New York. "The Anatomy of Melancholy," by Robert Burton, Oxford, 1621, is the first edition in binding by Riviere. Lord Byron is well represented. Among the items is the rare first edition of "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers," with the watermark, 1805. This work was suppressed by the author. "Coelum Britannicum," London, 1634, is the rare first edition. This piece was for a long time ascribed to Sir William Davenant, and is included in the first collected edition of his works, but it is now conceded that Thomas Carew was the author. "Poems on Several Occasions," by Henry Carey, London, 1729, is a presentation copy from the author to Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford, "Sally in Our Alley" appears here for the first time.

"An Epicale or Funerall Song," by George Chapman, London, 1612, contains the folding plate of Prince Henry's hearse, engraved by Hole. "Elkon Basilike," 1648, in the rare first edition. It is believed that there were fifty or more editions of the work published immediately after King Charles's execution, and its authorship has been attributed to Dr. Gauden and to King Charles himself. "The Works of Geffray Chaucer," London, 1542, is the second edition, which contains, for the first time, "The Plowman's Tale." It is probably the largest copy known. "The Fall of Robespierre," by Samuel T. Coleridge and Robert Southey, Cambridge, 1794, is a first edition of Coleridge's first book. "Lyric Ballads," published anonymously in London in 1798, contains the first appearance of "The Rime of the Ancyent Marinere," by Coleridge. "Remorse," by Coleridge and Charles Lamb, is a presentation copy from the latter. "Poems," by Abraham Cowley, London, 1656, is a presentation copy from the author to Lady Hanmer.

"Legatus, Opus Caroli Paschalii," 1598, is John Donne's copy with his autograph signature on the title page. "The XIII. Bukes of Eneades," by Garvin Douglas, London, 1553, is the first metrical translation into English of the Aeneid. Caxton's 1490 translation was in prose. "Poemes Lyric and Pastorall, Odes, Eglogs, The Man in the Moone," by Michael Drayton, London, 1606, is rare. This edition was not in the Hoe collection, nor is it mentioned in the Grolier collection. Among the rare John Dryden items are first editions of "Lachrymae Musaeum," 1650; "A Poem Upon the Death of His Late Highness Oliver, Lord Protector of England, Scotland and Ireland," 1659; "To His Sacred Majesty a Panegyrick on His Coronation," 1661; "To My Lord Chancellor Presented on New Year's day," 1662; "The Wild Gallant," 1669; "Notes and Observations on the Empress of Morocco," 1674; "The Mall," 1674; "Absalom and Achitophel," 1681-2; "Mac Flecknoe," 1682; "Religio Laici," 1682; "The Hind and the Panther," 1687; "De Arte Graphica," 1695, and "Alexander Feist," 1697. There is also a holograph letter by Dryden to his cousin, Mrs. Steward, dated Nov. 23, 1698.

"Wonders in the Sun," by Thomas Durfey, London, 1706, is the rare first edition and Robert Hoe's copy. John Gay's "Fables," London, 1727-38, is the rare first edition of each volume. "An Elegy Wrote in a Country Churchyard," by Thomas Gray, London, 1751, is the rare first edition. The "Elegy" circulated freely among Gray's friends for some time before it was published, which was finally done by R. Dodsley from the manuscript copy given by Gray to Horace Walpole, who probably wrote the preface, signed "The Editor," designed by Gray to preserve his anonymity. He received no remuneration for the "Elegy," considering it beneath a gentleman's dignity to accept money from a bookseller.

"The Temple," by George Herbert, Cambridge, 1633, is the rare first edition. So also is "Hesperides," by Robert Herrick, London, 1647. "Poems," by John Keats, London, 1817, first edition, is a presentation copy from the author to J. B. Gattie. "Of the Imitation of Christ," by Thomas à Kempis, London, 1589, is from the library of Queen Elizabeth, with her arms stamped on the sides. "The Vision of Pierce Plowman," by William Langland, is the rare first edition. A first edition of "Lucasta," by Sir Richard Lovelace, London, 1649, is from the Charles B. Foote library. Among the John Milton items are first editions of "Lycidas," 1638; "Areopagitica," 1644; "Poems," 1645; "Eikonoklasts," 1649; "Paradise Lost," 1667, various issues of the first edition, and "Paradise Regained," 1671.

GRADE CROSSINGS NOW SAFE

Order Closing All Gates at Night Has Stopped Accidents.

The Public Service Commission announced yesterday that its order of last August, requiring that the gates at all grade crossings of steam railroads should be kept closed between midnight and 5 A. M., had resulted in making the intervening period free of accidents. There are 144 of these crossings within the city, and accidents at them were frequent. After an investigation, the commission learned that practically all of the accidents occurred while automobiles or other vehicles were crossing the tracks during the night. Many lives were lost and a great deal of property destroyed.

A report from the Transit Bureau of the commission said that not one fatal accident had occurred since the order was made. In this borough nine grade crossings, in Brooklyn three, Queens ninety-nine, and Richmond thirty-three, were subject to the order, which was supposed to embrace all crossings where accidents had happened or were likely to happen.

It developed that one of the causes for the many accidents was due to drowsy gatemen who did not close the gates in time to keep vehicles from getting upon the tracks when trains were due. The commission figured that if the gates were closed the vehicles would have to stop at all times within the specified hours, and that if the gatemen were dozing the drivers of the vehicles would serve as alarm clocks. This plan has worked admirably in preventing accidents, but it is reported that it has not reduced the gross amount of profanity produced by chauffeurs and drivers.

PUBLIC SERVICE HEARINGS.

The Public Service Commission will hold the following hearings this week:

Tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock, inquiry into the gas pressure of the Brooklyn Borough Gas Company; 2:30 o'clock, concerning the alteration of grade crossings at Pennsylvania Avenue and other streets in the Borough of Richmond traversed by the Staten Island Rapid Transit Railway Company, and a continuation of the investigation into the need of private electrical plants, and the refusal of the Edison Companies to install emergency service for private owners.

Tuesday, 11 o'clock, regular meeting of the commission.

Wednesday, 11 o'clock, investigation of a complaint made by Mrs. H. J. Carroll that the Kings County Lighting Company discontinued service and refused to refigure a bill rendered her for service, and concerning the application of the Kings County Electric Light and Power Company for approval of an issue of $1,000,000 in bonds.

Thursday, 10:30 o'clock, inquiry into complaints against the rates charged for gas in the Twenty-fourth Ward by the Bronx Gas and Electric Company.

William L. Ransom, Chief Counsel for the commission, will appear for the commission at all of the hearings.

PROGRESS MADE BY OTHERS

State Charities Aid Association Gives Survey of Cases After Four Months.

The State Charities Aid Association has prepared reports of the progress of children under its care, whose stories were told in New York's 100 Neediest Cases, for which an appeal was made in THE NEW YORK TIMES last December.

Some striking examples are given by the association of children, benefited in past years by contributors to the 100 Neediest Cases, who have not only regained their health but have become vigorous, self-supporting young people. One is now a marine serving in France.

The response to the appeal for the 100 Neediest Cases last year overflowed and was used to help 222 additional cases. In all 872 persons, all hard pressed by poverty and sickness, were helped by the gifts in last year's campaign, which came from 3,500 readers of THE TIMES. The results of the appeal of last year and preceding years is shown by the following tables:

CONTRIBUTIONS, INCLUDING PLEDGES.

Charity Organization Society	$19,212.56
Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor	19,599.89
State Charities Aid Association	14,681.52
Brooklyn Bureau of Charities	8,610.00
Grand total, 1917	$62,108.47

CONTRIBUTIONS.

1915 contributions	31,819.92
1914 contributions	15,062.46
1912 contributions	3,630.68

Miss Sophie Van S. Theis, Superintendent of the Child Placing Agency, sent the following general account of the administration of the association's share of the funds contributed for the 100 Neediest Cases and supplemental cases:

Every Dollar for Relief.

"Four months have passed since THE TIMES made the Christmas appeal for special and needy people here in New York. We wish that every one might know as we who have actually worked with these families and children what it has meant to these individual people to receive not only the material assistance but the friendliness which has come with the gift. Not only the particular cases described were helped; in fact, 208 persons under the supervision of the State Charities Aid Association either have received or are receiving assistance. Convalescent care has been given to sick mothers with their babies and to homeless children, special training is being given to children who have no one of their own to help them, homes of adoption have been found, work has been found for others, food, shelter, clothing, and medical care have been provided for those in need. Every cent has been used for the direct relief of the people under our care. We shall tell what has happened to just a few of the specific cases.

"Among the cases in the appeal of 1915 was Case 70, David. He was a pre-tubercular orphan boy of 15, who was very bright, but not strong enough to support himself entirely while going to school. Help was received so that David could continue in his school work. In the meantime he was also growing stronger physically and soon he was far enough along in school so that he could find a good job and he entirely self-supporting. After war was declared last year David was among the first to join the United States marines. He soon qualified as an expert rifleman, and was sent to France early in the Spring.

"Among the cases appealed for in 1916 was Case 31, Clara, a homeless little child, who came from a bad family. She was stoop-shouldered, freckled, under weight, and unattractive in appearance and disposition. She needed to be given a chance to have good food, patient training, fresh air, affection, and a chance to be made well and strong. This opportunity came to Clara through friends who heard of her needs through THE TIMES appeal. Clara is now a very nice, steady little girl, living with a family who give her a home in return for the assistance that she can give. She goes to school, has nice playmates, and is quite attractive in appearance and well liked by her friends and the family with whom she is living. Clara will undoubtedly always be able to look after herself."

Improvement in Other Cases.

The improvement in specific cases on the 1917 list of the 100 Neediest Cases is told as follows:

CASE 6.—Christina is still in the hospital. She has been too ill to leave. She has been having special care there, and feels much happier because she knows that both her children are well cared for. Annabel is visiting with a lady, who became interested in her through THE TIMES appeal. This lady is also paying for Frank's board in a very nice family home. He and his sister are frequently taken to see their mother, and she keeps very closely in touch with her two babies.

CASE 11.—Little Dana is going regularly to the speech clinic and is improving. He is also getting stronger physically. The doctors are interested in him, and a kind gentleman is paying for his board. The child is making progress, though as yet the doctors are not certain that he can be entirely cured. At least he is being helped, and being given every possible opportunity for improving.

CASE 28—Adelaide has just passed the happiest four months of her life. For the first time ever since she was born she has known the comfort of having nourishing food, warm clothing, and regular school work. She is growing plump, and has experienced the joy of having a father, mother, sister, and a home.

CASE 30—Mrs. Hedger's letters tell best what the Christmas contributions have meant to her and her two foster children. "I wish you and all who contributed in any way might have seen the great joy and happiness in our little home when your packages were opened. And unless some of you were placed some time in circumstances like ours you can hardly realize how much kind deeds mean to us. Annette and Louis wished to have a tree, I told them I could not get any gifts to place on same and could not expect their friends to remember them this year when they were doing so much for the children left destitute by the war, but they still wanted a tree, so went to the woods and carried it home. • • • I thank you all for the great help you are giving us during these trying times, and hope the time will come soon that we will be self-supporting so you can have what you are sending us to assist other needy ones." A recent letter states, "I'm so thankful for the check you sent me, it will help out so much when it is such a problem for poor people to manage. I am gaining slowly. The children are making splendid progress in school. They are refined, responsible, happy youngsters."

Mr. A. Paul Keith and Mr. E. F. Albee take this method of tendering their heartiest thanks and congratulations to all who had anything to do with the theatrical drive. There was no holding back. Everyone gave his or her services willingly and freely.

Governor Strong, of the Federal Reserve Bank, was most helpful.

The newspapers gave columns of reading matter in the most liberal spirit.

Volunteer speakers from every walk of life, in a tireless manner, went from one theatre to another during the entire drive.

Every branch of the theatrical business entered into the spirit of the campaign whenever and wherever there was an opportunity to do something.

Managers of the dramatic, operatic, circus, vaudeville, burlesque and picture interests opened up their houses for the free use of speakers and the selling of bonds.

Actors and actresses in every branch of theatricals worked day and night here, there and everywhere.

Employees of the theatres, including the musicians and stage hands, all worked with enthusiasm.

Soldiers and sailors contributed to selling bonds and in creating enthusiasm wherever they appeared.

The Stage Women's War Relief did wonderful work, as did Mrs. Oscar Stevens and the young ladies whom she furnished to collect subscriptions amongst theatre audiences.

The banks gave every assistance, and sent their employees to help wherever they were needed.

The patrons of the theatres were splendid. They never complained of the interruption to the show. They subscribed in the most liberal and enthusiastic spirit. They showed they were all American citizens of the highest order. It was all glorious, and the satisfaction is theirs of having done their part in raising the above amount that was subscribed.

THANKS! THANKS! THANKS TO ALL!

YANKS BEAT TIGERS BY NARROW MARGIN

Detroit Comes Within One Run of Tying the Score in the Ultimate Inning.

WEIRD DOUBLE PLAY MADE

Skill and Luck Convert a Carrom from Pratt's Capable Leg Into Misfortune for Visitors.

By compounding a formula of mingled good luck and good hitting, the Yankees nosed out a victory over the Detroit Tigers at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. The score was 6 to 5. The sturdy hitting on the part of Huggins's men alone might have been sufficient to clinch the laurels for the New York clan, but the good fortune did not come amiss in one or two pinches.

In one respect the Yankees made baseball history. Never before, perhaps, has it been the good fortune of a team to turn an error into a double play in just the manner in which the metamorphosis was completed yesterday. Pratt was the hero, as after-events proved, but for just a moment it looked as if he had mussed up Veach's grounder. The famous Tyrus Cobb had just a moment before sent a snappy single to right, the ball hustling away between Pipp and Pratt without a nod to either. Veach thereupon cracked a sharp one at Pratt, and he interposed a perfectly capable shin and carromed the ball over to Peckinpaugh, who tagged the second sack, putting Cobb out, and then whipped the sphere to Pipp for the completion of a double. Beyond the carrom shot there wasn't a thing that was lucky about the play. At any rate, it cut short what threatened to be an eighth inning rally on the part of the Detroit men, for Dressen had previously struck out.

Seventh Inning Prolific.

Where Dame Fortune really smiled upon the Yankee players was in the seventh inning, the one, by the way, in which they snared the ball game from the pool of uncertainty. Just to say that there was some luck about this inning, which brought five Yankee runners across the plate, does not indicate by any means that it was entirely because of this that the Yanks were able to take the lead in a game that was far from having a rosy hue for the New York men up to that time. It was Peckinpaugh who put the spell on the ball, when he sent a sharp hit toward Bush. The Tiger shortstop had been fielding the lot with the skill of a vacuum cleaner up to that point, and, but for something unusual about the hit, would probably have gobbled up Peck's offering without much adoo. Just as Bush was preparing to take the sphere on the bound it bumped into a miniature mountain which had been placed there before the game by the crafty Huggins, and the horsehide pellet took a flying leap over Bush's head and journeyed along into left field. Walters and Fewster galloped home on the accident and tied the score. When Baker larruped a three-base hit to right a few minutes later and then scored on Pratt's sacrifice fly the Yanks assumed the lead by a margin that proved enough to insure victory, though the Tigers made a ninth-inning stand that threatened to cause trouble.

Huggins drew upon about all the available material he had in that memorable seventh. Pinch hitters and runners for them entered the fray with the best intentions of making the box score a hodgepodge of names. And, furthermore, they just about succeeded in their ambition.

Slim Love was first called to the fray by Huggins and opposed to him was Big Bill James. Barring one inning, the fourth, in which Detroit scored three runs, Slim was doing very well, and he was withdrawn in the seventh to make way for the pinch-hitting prowess of Caldwell, whose participation in the game was to the extent of a nicely placed single that scored a run. Fewster ran for Caldwell and then Allan Russell crowded his way into the same line on the score card to do the pitching for the remainder of the game.

James Finds His Waterloo.

The retirement of James was due to much persuasion on the part of the Yankees. For six innings Big Bill moved along in easy fashion, cutting down the Yanks without much sign of bother. Perhaps because of over-confidence and perhaps because the Yanks were tired of the one-sided way of things, a change was brought about. Just when Hughey Jennings's yells were loudest, just when they were tinged with a note of exultant victory, the Yankees fell upon the unsuspecting Mr. James and he went out of the game after six and one-third innings with not a ray of éclat to mark his exit.

For six innings the Yankees had garnered only four hits of James, but in the seventh they took a toll of four more, which, with a base on balls and a sacrifice fly, accounted for the five runs that won the game.

Throughout the game the Yankees played really smart baseball. They showed a fiery bit of work from first to last, which was here and there tinged with something really brilliant for the satisfaction of the 15,000 fans, who wended their way into the ball park to see the hostilities. Probably the most spectacular piece of work was Pipp's spearing of James's liner in the third inning. The sphere was designed to travel over Pipp's head, and it had all the earmarks of intending to take a through trip to right field. Wally, however, went high enough in the air to bring down the liner with a spectacular one-handed catch.

Ping Bodie was really responsible for the three runs that Detroit scored in the fourth. Vitt hit a long shot to left field when the bases were full and one down, and Ping lost the ball in the sun. The blow went for two bases, and cleared the sacks. If Hannah hadn't made an error on the relaying in of the ball he might have nipped off Veach at the plate, but, as it was, he dropped the ball and three runners scored.

Yankees Off in the Lead.

The Yanks were the first to tally. In the second inning Pratt led off with a single that slipped between Bush and Vitt. He advanced a base when Pipp singled over second, and went to third on Bodie's neat sacrifice. Miller's sacrifice fly to centre brought him home.

Love was partly responsible for the difficulties in which he found himself in the fourth. He passed Dressen, and when Cobb singled to centre Dressen took third. The Georgia Peach stole second, but it was an unnecessary effort on his part, for Love passed Veach. Heilman flied out to Pratt, but Vitt took a vicious swing at the ball and sent it hurtling over to Ping Bodie, who lost it in the sun, with the result that Dressen, Cobb, and Veach scored.

Vitt took third on the throw-in, but was nipped at the plate on Baker's quick return of Young's tap. Yelle was out on an infield grounder to Baker.

The Tigers added another run in the sixth, which Cobb teased the Yankees into giving him. Love walked the Detroit fielder, and then Cobb coaxed Love into a throw to first which was as wild as a hawk. The ball rolled on toward the stand and Cobb was on second. Third was attained on Veach's infield out, Love to Pipp, but only after Love had caused consternation among the Yankee fans by doing a juggling act that almost proved fatal. Heilman's hit through the box brought Cobb home.

The Yanks tied things up in the seventh. High, batting for Miller, was walked. Walters went in to bat for Hannah, and succeeded in dropping a hit behind Bush. Then came Ray Caldwell, batting for Love. The Yankee pitcher drove a neat single to centre, scoring High. Gilhooley advanced Walters and Fewster, the latter running for Caldwell, by a sacrifice, and then came Peckinpaugh's bounder that went over Bush's head, bringing Walters and Fewster to the plate. These tied the score. Baker's three-base wallop to right scored Peckinpaugh, and Baker himself scored on Pratt's sacrifice fly.

In the ninth inning, with two down, the Tigers tried to rally, but the effort accounted for only one run. Young doubled to right and crossed the plate on Yelle's hit past Bush.

BOSTON BEATEN IN EIGHTH.

St. Louis Bunches Hits for Victory by 4 to 2 Score.

BOSTON, May 11.—Singles by Tobin, Austin, and Gedeon, together with a dropped ball by Catcher Schang at the plate and Hendryx's sacrifice fly, gave St. Louis three runs in the eighth inning this afternoon, enabling that team to defeat Boston, with Leonard pitching, 4 to 2.

The features were the hitting and fielding of Ruth, who played first for Boston, and the sensational work of Garber and Gedeon for the visitors. It was Gallia's fifth victory of the season.

WHITEWASH BRUSH APPLIED TO GIANTS

McGraw's Men Shut Out by Buccaneers for First Time This Season.

DOUBLE PLAY IS FATAL

McKechnie Puts Out Two Men Singlehanded and Nips New York's Best Chance to Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., May 10.—The southpaw slants of Wilbur Cooper proved unfathomable to the Giants today, and the league leaders dropped their second game in a row to the Pirates, 2 to 0. Incidentally, a double play, executed without assistance by Bill McKechnie in the eighth inning, sealed the fate of the Giants, and was in a large measure responsible for the first shutout of the year sustained by McGraw's men.

Had the drive, a liner from the bat of Ross Young, which McKechnie deftly turned into a two-ply killing, got past him, it would have been good for two bases at least, and as there were men on second and third and none out at the time, there is no telling how far the Giants would have gone before they were checked.

Slim Sallee opposed Cooper on the hill and turned in a fine game, but his team mates gave him no aid in the offense, and it was inevitable that he should be charged with a defeat. Sallee hurled in his usual style. He allowed eight hits, but kept them well scattered, and, with a slightly better break in his luck, might have hung up an easy victory.

The Giants had a number of fine opportunities to score, but passed them all because of their inability to get to Cooper with men on the bases. In the third inning, with one down, McCarty singled to right, and Sallee advanced his burly battery mate to second with a clean blow to left. However, Young hit into the double play engineered by Caton, Cutshaw, and Mollwitz. In the following inning they had a most excellent chance to break the game wide open, but again they failed.

Kauff, who led off, was an easy victim on a tap to Cooper, but Burns rapped a long single to centre. He essayed a two-bagger on the drive, and reached the keystone sack in safety when Carey threw wildly to Cutshaw. Zimmerman raised a foul fly to Schmidt, after which Cooper lost his sense of direction and his judgment of distance momentarily. He hit Rodriguez and walked Fletcher, thus filling the bases. Holke had a chance to be a hero, but his best effort was a pop foul which fell into the spacious mitt of Young Schmidt.

Bezdek's team nicked Sallee for a run in their half of this frame, and more alert base running on the part of Cutshaw probably would have resulted in the scoring of another run for them. Carey, first up in the stanza, worked Sallee for a pass, and after Stengel had died on a fly to Burns, Catshaw singled to left, putting Carey on second. King popped to Fletcher, and McKechnie then distinguished himself by cracking the ball past Burns to the fence in left field for two bases, scoring Carey. Cutshaw, who, with two out, should have gotten away from first base as soon as the ball was hit, evidently was a bit puzzled, for he loafed on the start and got only as far as third before Burns got the ball back into the infield. Schmidt ended the frame by striking out.

The Pirates hung up their second and last run in the seventh inning. Cooper doubled to left after Schmidt had been retired, and Caton tripled past Young, scoring the pitcher.

Then came the eighth, with its bid for glory on the part of the Giants and its brilliant double play by McKechnie. McCarty opened up with a single to left. Jim Thorpe was sent up to hit for Sallee, and sent the ball to right centre for two bases, McCarty pulling up at third.

With the count one and one on him, Young rapped the ball down toward third with the speed of a bullet, but McKechnie got in front of the drive, clutched the flying pellet with both hands and stepped on third, doubling up McCarty, who had darted off the bag at the crack of the bat. Only Thorpe's agility in getting back to second base robbed the Pirates of a triple play, as Cutshaw was on that bag ready to take a throw from McKechnie.

More than 13,000 fans, the largest crowd to see a game here so far this season, witnessed the combat.

WEST POINT IS BEATEN.

New Mooners Take Army Into Camp by Score of 6 to 3.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 11.—Lack of hitting, coupled with stupid base running and fielding, lost a game for the Army today when the cadets were beaten by the Crescent Athletic Club of Brooklyn, 6 to 3. Williams, the visiting pitcher, was best in the pinches, and the Army, with several opportunities, was unable to connect with his delivery when hits would have meant runs.

Hans Lobert's protégés missed Oliphant, Foster, and Hezelhurst today, all upper classmen, who because of graduation, now scheduled for next month, have started a period of intensive training which takes the trio off the baseball squad.

Both teams drew blood in the opener. A pass to Nicklas and a brace of errors by Nichols, the Army's new second baseman, gave the New Mooners a run and the lead in their half of the third. More ragged fielding and Bills's sacrifice fly were responsible for two more in the sixth.

A safe drive by Jenkins, a base on balls, and Vidal's sacrifice fly gave the Army one in the same frame. The soldiers threatened in the fifth and once had the bags full, but the hit was not forthcoming. Again in the eighth the Army had a chance to tie the score, but stupidity on the bases lost them the opportunity.

A base on balls and singles by Nicklas and Campatti sewed the game up for the Crescents in the ninth. Murray's circus catch off Swasey's bat in the ninth was the fielding feature.

FARRELL'S MIGHTY HIT BEATS BROWN

Columbia Pitcher Cuts a Two-to-Two Gordian Knot in the Tenth with a Home Run.

GAME A WAR OF TWIRLERS

Knight Holds Morningside Heights Collegians to Five Safeties, but Without Avail.

Tommy Farrell was carried off South Field yesterday high on the shoulders of excited Columbia rooters after he had broken a 2 to 2 tie with Brown by driving the ball to deep left in the tenth inning and circling the bases, beating Mannex's throw to the plate by several feet. The score, therefore, was 3 to 2.

It was pitcher against pitcher throughout the entire game. Farrell and Knight struck out nine men each. Knight brought in the only runs his team made and Farrell, as above recounted, batted his nine to victory.

Farrell came back in great form yesterday after his rather loose pitching in the last few games, and whizzed the ball over in the old style. Brown's batters were unable to find a single opening until the seventh, when Knight sent two fleet Brown runners over the plate with a smashing drive along the first base line, far into the right garden.

The Blue and White twirler had excellent control of the ball. Wretched support on the part of the Brown players was most discouraging to Knight, for he held Columbia's batsmen to five hits, and only allowed three bases on balls.

Houlahan started the ball rolling for Columbia in the first inning by singling to left and stealing second. Captain Buonaguro stepped to the plate and smashed the first ball pitched high over Garside's head, sending Houlahan to third, and Johnny Hauck finished the job by lifting a long fly to right field, scoring Houlahan.

Carroll beat out a bunt in the third, stole second, and advanced to third on Ackerman's drive to centre field. Knight got rattled when Carroll danced off and on the third bag, and threw the ball wild in an attempt to catch him, Carroll jogging home for Columbia's second run.

Brown rallied in the seventh when Farrell walked Leonard, who stole second. Maguire came to the plate and singled over Buonaguro's head, sending Leonard to third. The Brown pitcher came up next and hit the ball a terrific drive for two bases, along the first base line just out of Clark's reach, scoring both Leonard and Maguire and tying the score. He tried to stretch it for three bases, but Ackerman spun the ball to Stickel and Knight ran into the ball in the third baseman's hands.

Then everything was quiet until Columbia came to bat in the last half of the tenth inning. Farrell was the first man up, and he swung with a "mighty Casey" determination on the second ball Knight threw to him. Mannex made a good attempt to get the ball, but it struck a stone and bounded out of his way and kept rolling toward the fence, and before he could field it the Blue and White pitcher was nearing home plate. That broke up the game and the cheering Columbia fans hoisted Tommy to their shoulders.

FORDHAM'S BATTERS BUSY.

Highbridge Nine Is Defeated in a Free-Hitting Contest.

Fordham defeated the Highbridge Athletics, a strong semi-professional nine from the Bronx, on Fordham Field yesterday afternoon by a score of 10 to 8. The teams met early in April in a scoreless tie, but yesterday's game developed into a free-hitting contest, with the youthful collegians having the edge on their more experienced opponents.

Halloren made his home début on the mound for Fordham. The stocky freshman had not done any twirling since the Navy game six weeks ago. He was effective in every inning but the sixth, when the visitors got four hits, which, coupled with an error, netted three runs and tied the score.

The collegians came right back in the following inning and were never headed thereafter, although the Highbridge players crept up close in the last two innings. Riconda hit a circuit clout to right field in the ninth inning, but his teammates were unable to tie the score.

Owing to the absence of Galligan, Lefevre played third base. He proved a tower of strength, for he made three hits, scored two runs, and batted in five more tallies.

Finn relieved Halloran in the seventh inning, but the Athletics took kindly to his offerings and scored four runs in the eighth and ninth innings.

Of the twenty-five hits registered by the two teams, eight were for extra bases. Fordham got thirteen hits, Lefevre and Keough starring with three bingles each to their credit.

EIGHTH FOR PAWLING NINE.

School Team Adds Another Victory to Unblemished Record.

Pawling School's baseball team continued victorious yesterday by trouncing the Hotchkiss School nine in an interesting game at Pawling by 6 to 2. This gave the successful team its eighth straight triumph this season.

The Pawling victory was accomplished mainly through the excellent pitching of Spates. He held the Hotchkiss batters to six ineffective hits and accounted for eighteen strikeouts. In the first inning a concentrated batting attack on the offerings of Calhoun, Hotchkiss's twirler, gave the Pawling nine a lead of four runs.

CRIMSON NINE IS BLANKED BY BLUE

Yale's Twirler, Talcott, Lets Harvard Down with Only a Brace of Hits.

WINNERS MAKE FIVE RUNS

Timely Batting and Good Support of Pitcher Account for Victory on Cambridge Diamond.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 11.—Yale's 'Varsity ball nine had little trouble today in following last week's victory over the Tigers with another against Harvard. The New Haven youngsters shut Harvard out by 5 to 0 in the first game the nines have played in two seasons, the Blue supporting Frank Talcott splendidly. Harvard made two hits only against Talcott's speed and his dinky drop ball, and during the game would not have passed second base except for a fumble by Centre Fielder Boyd. Talcott fanned ten batters, eight of them in the last five innings.

O'Keefe's pitching for Harvard was much less effective than that of Talcott. Yale made ten hits, most of them clean, and all except one of the runs were driven home with a hard bingle. O'Keefe made two wild pitches, and Gammack, his catcher, had two passed balls. This battery weakness and the fact that all of Yale's runs were made by players who had either stolen second base or reached that station because of a passed ball made unusually good value for the hits.

The first Yale batter in the game made a single, but no run developed, the visitors waiting until the third for their first score. Two men had fanned in the third when Gordon singled to left field. He stole second at once, and came home on Gage's ringing hit to centre.

In Harvard's half of this inning, with one out, Gammack singled, and got an extra base on Boyd's boot. O'Keefe fouled out, and then Lyman made a bad play on Evans. Hallowell hit to Lyman for the third out.

Harvard got one man on base after that, Ward making a hit in the eighth, only to be doubled up with Coolidge.

Yale scored again in the fifth on Holmes's hit, two passed balls, and a hit by Prann.

Two innings later two Yale youngsters counted. Holmes opened the seventh with a hit, and stole second, scoring on a safe drive by Prann. Prann also stole second, and was brought in by Gordon, whose liner was too hot for Coolidge to hold.

Yale's eighth inning run was easy on Lyman's pass and steal, Parker's out, and McCouch's muff of Sawyer's easy fly.

TIGERS LOSE TO NEWPORT.

Naval Reserves Beat Princeton Nine by 3 to 2 Score.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.—Princeton lost a close and well-played game here today to the new team from the Newport Naval Training School. The final score was 3 to 2, the game being called at the end of the seventh inning to enable the sailors to catch a train.

Newport opened the scoring in the first inning with two runs. Princeton came back in the third and evened the score, only to have the Reserve team go into the lead again in the last half of the third with another run. This ended the scoring.

Heegan, the lead-off man for Newport, walked in the first, advanced when Meehan reached first on Horne's hit, and both scored when Trimble threw Miller out at first after McElwee's out. Murphy was hit by a pitched ball and Maloney walked, but McSherry ended the inning when he flied to centre.

The Tigers scored two runs in the third without the aid of a hit. McLeod passed Thompson, but Kirkland forced him at second. Strubing flied to left and then Bauhan walked. McLeod hit Bade with a pitched ball. Trimble, the next man up, was also hit with a pitched ball and the first Princeton run was forced across the plate. Madden, the Tiger leader, also walked, forcing in another run. At this point Richards relieved McLeod and put an end to the scoring when Horne hit a long fly to right field.

The sailors got their winning run when McElwee was hit by a pitched ball, advanced on Miller's infield hit and scored on Maloney's out at first.

Princeton threatened to score in the fifth, but Strubing was caught at home on an attempted double steal. In the seventh Thompson opened with a clean single through second, but Kirkland placed his sacrifice hit right in Richard's hands, and Thompson was doubled off first.

Stocker of Evander Childs Gets Opportune Hit.

Evander Childs High School's baseball team found the Stuyvesant H. S. nine easy in their game on the Catholic Protectory grounds at Van Nest yesterday, and with a consistent batting attack the Bronx schoolboys hammered out an 11 to 2 victory. Erozy was on the mound for Stuyvesant, and he was belted for seventeen hits. One of these was a home run by Stocker in the second inning when the bases were crowded.

Triumph for Montclair.

Montclair Academy's nine won a loosely-played game from the Pingry School team of Elizabeth, N. J., on the former school's diamond at Montclair yesterday by 16 to 7. The victorious school went into the lead in the opening inning when six runs were registered, and thereafter tallies were scored with monotonous regularity. The big cog in the Montclair victory was Craig, who made a double, a triple, and a home run.

Yale's Cubs Win on Track.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 11.—The Princeton Cubs and Yale Freshmen fought it out stubbornly for premier honors on the track in the Stadium this afternoon, the Blue youngsters finally capturing them by a narrow margin of one point. Yale's total was 52½ points.

PENN CREW LEAVES YALE FAR IN REAR

Quaker Oarsmen Have Four Lengths to Spare at Finish of Course.

TAKE LEAD EARLY IN RACE

Red and Blue Freshman Eight Also Wins 'Mid Picturesque Spectacle on Schuylkill.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Penn., May 11.—The fulfillment of Pennsylvania's rowing ambitions was realized on the Schuylkill this afternoon when the smooth, powerful Red and Blue eight added Yale to her list of victims by leaving the Elis four lengths behind in the 'Varsity race, while the Yale freshman crew was defeated by the Penn youngsters by an even length. Against this boatload of strong sweep swingers Yale was no more of a match than Annapolis, Princeton, and Columbia, all of whom have finished a bad second to Coach Joe Wright's lads this season.

After eighteen long lean years of defeat Penn this season finds herself at the front of the college crews. It was at Poughkeepsie in 1909 that Penn swept the Hudson. This crew was the last Penn eight to crown itself with glory in intercollegiate rowing circles.

The 'Varsity race this afternoon was a joy trip for Penn. The long, thin shell, propelled with remarkable smoothness and great speed, skimmed over the river in a demonstration of oaremanship which made the Elis look amateurish. It was Penn's one home regatta of the year, and a great throng on both sides of the river cheered the crews as they battled over the Henley course of 1 mile and 550 yards.

The time of the Penn crew in the 'Varsity race was 6:55, which was unusually fast under the wind conditions, while the time of the victorious Penn freshman crew was 7:12.

Setting Is Picturesque.

The day was perfect for rowing. An up-river breeze swept over the water, making just enough of a ripple to transform the river into a shimmering surface of glistening silver. The regatta today was far more picturesque than the Hudson and Thames spectacles of other days. Instead of the crews finishing in a lane between rows of palatial yachts, Penn shot over the mark a winner this afternoon through a wide pass, crowded on each side with hundreds of canoes.

Instead of the long snakelike observation trains creeping along the river banks like they used to at Poughkeepsie and New London, thousands of automobiles crept along the river drive with the crews, keeping pace with them in their test of stamina and speed. The drivers all the time crowded and jammed each other with good-natured rivalry to get the places of vantage, and both banks of the river were crowded with spectators, who greeted the oarsmen with cheers as they shot past.

All of this animated scene had for its setting Fairmount Park, now at the zenith of its Spring beauty. Each side of the course shaded with maples and the blossoming shrubbery splashed the grassy banks with color.

At the start the Penn oarsmen got away with beautiful rhythm, hitting up a 38 stroke which carried the cedar nose of their frail shell in front of the Eli boat after three or four strokes. Then Penn started out to win the race without delay. Jack, the Penn coxswain, instead of lowering the stroke down to 30 or 32 to the minute as is usually the case after the start, kept his crew keyed up to a snappy 36. Behind this rapid blade action was a world of power and with the oarsmen swinging their sunburned bodies backward and forward with perfect unity, the Quaker boat slipped away from Yale at every sweep of the Red and Blue oars.

Yale's Stroke Is Slower.

Yale, coached in a longer and slower stroke, was having a hard time of it. They splashed badly and after the first few hundred yards the spray from the oars showered the athletes as they started in the futile pursuit of the Quakers.

Yale for the first mile rowed a 32 stroke, depending on their long sweep and additional weight to carry their shell up on even terms with Penn. After a quarter of a mile, Penn, settling down to a 34, had pulled away from Yale so rapidly that there was a stretch of open water between the stern of the Quaker boat and the beak of the Eli shell. Knutt, the Yale coxswain, realized that Pennsylvania was pulling farther away at every stroke, and he called upon his men frantically to hit up the beat.

Hyatt, the Yale stroke, was pulling at his oar like a man possessed, and when he came forward on his swing his head sank far down between his knees. Try as they would, the long swing of the Yale oars, kicking up the water in a great spray, did not make any perceptible change in the speed of the Eli shell. The Blue oarsmen were ragged in their work, and the shell went along with a noticeable jerk.

In an automobile following the crews was the Yale coach, Professor Mather Abbott. With him was Averill Harriman, a former Yale oar and coach. Professor Abbott's face wore an expression of deep disappointment as he watched his charges splash in their vain efforts to better their place in the Schuylkill parade.

As the Penn crew slipped under the trolley bridge and was for a moment lost to view from the river banks there was more than a length of open water between the shells. Penn shot out into view again from behind the bridge abutments, skimming along faster than ever. Yale was lagging and pulling frantically, but all their power and strength was going for naught.

Penn Advances Smoothly.

Stocking persistently to a thirty-four-stroke now, Penn did not falter. The true, harmonious watermanship of the Quaker oarsmen sent the boat along as if it was sliding along on a greased surface. Veteran rowing coaches who were following the crews gave exclamations of admiration at the beautiful form and execution of the Penn oarsmen.

At the head of the island in the river which marks the stretch of the Henley course, Pennsylvania again shot the stroke up to 36. Yale made one desperate effort to catch up. The Yale stroke went to 33 and the Elis were giving every ounce of strength they had in this last attempt to close up on the flying eight in front of them.

Penn was going along so fast now that the gap of open water between the shells widened with every sweep of the oars. Holding to the same impressive, powerful oarsmanship that has brought them along their race of triumph, they pulled along with renewed vigor. Yale was done when the Eli boat passed the head of the island.

It is about forty strokes from the upper point of the island to the finish, and although the Elis increased the beat of their stroke the shell did not respond. The oars chopped the water, which sparkled in the sun. Penn tore down to the finish mark with all the men rowing with machinelike perfection.

Thousands of auto horns set up a terrific din, and from the crowds along the river bank came volumes of cheers as the Quakers forged more and more to the front. The Penn coxswain, Jack, barked words of encouragement at his men. The stroke oar, Carl Thomas, heard the response, and the last hundred yards of the race saw the Penn shell cutting through the water at a terrific clip.

Yale was a pretty well spent boatload of oarsmen when they crossed the line more than four lengths behind the Quakers. They leaned far over their oars in exhaustion, and although none of them toppled over, they had given every bit of stamina in a race which was a hopeless chase all the way.

The critics all regard Penn's crew as fine a rowing combination as have been developed in years. All the old-timers retort that there will be no chance to see the victorious eight in a four-mile test. They freely admit that it would rank up well with the best crews of the past.

The Yale freshmen crew, on which the Elis had staked a lot of confidence, was a great disappointment against the Penn youngsters. As in the Varsity race, Penn took the water better at the start and with a faster, shorter stroke.

Their shell was out in front just as soon as the race had started. The Blue cubs splashed badly at times, and the Penn crew was a far more smoothly working combination than their New Haven rivals. When Penn had increased its lead to more than a boat length, the Yale youngsters gave a demonstration of gameness and grit by sending their strike up to a pace which for a time cut down the Quaker's lead. Foot by foot the Elis crept up until it looked as if they might be able to make up the gap between the shells.

This desperate effort by the Eli lads, however, took its toll in strength, for they had to drop their beat a bit and Penn increased her lead again to a full shell's length and stuck doggedly to it until the thin, swift running shells, had shot over the finish line.

MANHATTAN BOYS IN VAN.

Public School 62 and De Witt Clinton Score in Track Meet.

Schoolboy athletes representing the intermediate and high school talent of Manhattan carried off the lion's share of the honors yesterday in the annual intermediate schools track and field championships, high schools novice games and championship relays held at Brooklyn Athletic Field under the auspices of the Public Schools Athletic League.

In the intermediate branch of the day's sport, Public School 62, Manhattan, showed the way in the point score with thirteen tallies. This was three better than the record compiled by the youthful representatives of P. S. 55, the Bronx. The young athletes of P. S. 158, Brooklyn, were third, with five points.

The high schools supremacy of Manhattan was upheld by the athletes of De Witt Clinton H. S. They tied with the novice champions of last year, Stuyvesant H. S., in the battle for novice superiority, each school being credited with fourteen points, and in the relay title competitions the lads from the West Fifty-ninth Street institution successfully defended their title won last year by garnering the winning total of nine tallies. One point behind in the latter event came Manual Training H. S. and H. S. of Commerce, tied for second with eight points.

De Witt Clinton's representatives showed to the front in unmistakable fashion in the relays. Two De Witt Clinton teams were nominated for the mile event, and they finished in first and third positions. In the quarter-mile relay the De Witt Clinton runners were third.

Of the three relays, the one-mile race was the best and produced some spirited running. The colors of the De Witt Clinton first team, which won, were carried to the front on the second relay by Carter, and thereafter the West Fifty-ninth Street School's emblem always blazed the trail. On the third leg Caldwell, for the winning team, was forced to extend himself by Bob Crawford of Flushing High School, P. S. A. L. mile champion. Crawford picked up ground rapidly and cut down the De Witt Clinton lead by fifteen yards. On the final relay, however, Singer went away for De Witt Clinton, and gained victory for his team in convincing fashion. The time was 3:38 2-5.

The day was ideal for the sports and several improvements on marks made in former years were recorded. Close, thrilling finishes were the rule rather than the exception. The individual star among the novices was Vanderclute of Richmond Hill High School, who negotiated two successes. He won the 100-yard senior dash in 10 4-5 seconds, and the 220-yard senior dash in 24 seconds. In the one-mile run Ward of Evander Childs pulled through with a victory after a hard race. His time was 4:50 3-5, and at the finish line he led Burns of Stuyvesant High School by about two feet. In the 12-pound shotput, Leo Hilgemanxe of Evander Childs was the winner, with the unusual distance, for a schoolboy, of 43 feet 3 inches. This improves by more than one foot the mark made by Gouldowsky of De Witt Clinton High School in winning the same event last year.

KINSELLA VICTOR AT SQUASH

Champion Defeats Lafforgue in Handicap Exhibition Match.

In a squash tennis match for the benefit of Auxiliary 128 of the Red Cross, Walter A. Kinsella, the world's professional champion, defeated Frank Lafforgue, the Yale Club professional, yesterday at the Scarsdale Country Club, with the score 11—15, 18—17, 15—13, 15—12. Kinsella conceded five aces to his opponent, and this so nearly equalized matters that Kinsella was hard pressed to pull out a victory. In the third game Lafforgue was leading at one time by seven aces, but Kinsella managed to retrieve the lost ground and win.

LEADING NET STARS IN FIRST BIG EVENT

RICHARDS VICTOR AT START

Youngster Takes Opening Match, as Do Tilden and Other Experts with Racquet.

Those who have had misgivings as to the ultimate fate of tournament tennis during this season cannot help but have their doubts dispelled by the representation which was brought forth for the beginning of play in the Harlem Lawn Tennis Club tournament, the first of the open events of the year, which started yesterday. With an entry of some fifty-three contestants, including many well-known players, the tournament promises to equal, if not surpass, in quality of play those which have gone before. The centralization of soldiers and sailors at the various training stations near New York has apparently been a fund upon which the tournament could draw.

For instance, the present event is probably the first that has ever been played which could boast an entry from the Californian school. This year's representative is none other than Ward Dawson, who was challenger, with Maurice E. McLaughlin, for the national doubles championship two years ago against Clarence J. Griffin and William M. Johnston. Dawson did not get into the matches yesterday, but will compete this afternoon unless unforeseen circumstances intervene.

Other prominent players in the tournament are William T. Tilden, 2d, of Philadelphia, who was one time holder of the national mixed doubles championship with Miss Mary Browne; Vincent Richards, the natinal boys' champion; W. J. Clapp, the former Yale burdler, and J. S. O'Boyle and H. B. O'Boyle, two Georgetown players, who are now at one of the naval stations near here. The entry of Dawson is also due to the fact that he is training at one of the stations. All of the leaders experienced little difficulty in winning their way through first and second round matches yesterday, with the exception of Richards, who was hard pressed at the start by Embree Henderson.

Henderson developed a fine net attack against his younger rival, but he did not have the reserve energy to stall off the keen play of Richards in the last two sets, and was beaten at 3—6, 6—1, 6—1. Richards showed a finely balanced game.

The success of Tilden was scored at the expense of W. Schattman. The Philadelphian, who has been a formidable contestant in several national singles championships, was moving along at a fast pace for so early in the season, and his terrific service and sharp net attack held Schattman helpless. Schattman was able to get only one game, that in the second set.

J. S. O'Boyle, who was runner up two years ago for the national junior indoor championship, being beaten in the final round by Elliott Binzen of Fordham, did not meet serious opposition in his second match against J. Mandelstan, winning at 6—3, 6—0. H. B. O'Boyle was, however, forced to give way before the aggressive play of Henry Bassford, the score in this case being 8—3, 6—2.

There were few three set matches. One of these, however, tested the skill of W. J. Clapp, who not long ago was taking a prominent place in squash tennis play. Clapp succeeded in defeating a worthy opponent, H. J. Steinkampf, with the score 6—2, 4—6, 7—5, which proves that he may be a hard player to overcome in some of the later rounds. C. L. Schmidt, after winning a first round match, was forced to give ground before the spirited play of Ingo Hartman, who won at 6—0, 6—3, a fine assortment of passing shots, carrying confusion to his rival.

The winner of the tournament of a year ago, H. H. Manchester, will defend his laurels this season.

The scores:

First Round.—Benjamin Jetson defeated J. Osgood, 6—2, 6—2; H. Bassford defeated A. Iler, 6—2, 6—1; C. L. Schmidt defeated M. Thomasulo, 6—0, 6—1; C. Buchner defeated W. L. Lenzel, 6—0, 6—1; J. Henson defeated W. H. Pritchard, 6—0, 6—0; W. T. Tilden, 2d, defeated W. Schattman, 6—0, 6—1; E. Landau defeated W. M. Fischner, 4—6, 6—3, 7—5; W. J. Clapp defeated H. J. Steinkampf, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5; T. B. Kane defeated H. K. Feilg, 6—3, 8—6; A. J. Mooyer defeated M. Abelee, 6—3, 1—6, 6—2.

Second Round—Vincent Richards defeated E. Henderson, 3—6, 6—1, 6—1; J. S. O'Boyle defeated J. Mandelstan, 6—3, 6—0; H. Bassford defeated H. B. O'Boyle, 6—3, 6—2; Ingo Hartman defeated C. L. Schmidt, 6—0, 6—3.

Penn Players In Even Match with Princeton Rivals.

Fletcher of Princeton defeated his opponent, Warner, in two sets, 6—0 and 7—5. Nassau of Penn found Smith of Princeton a difficult opponent, but finally downed him, 5—7, 6—4, and 6—2. The summaries:

ANDERSON WINNER PAIRED WITH HAGEN

Travers and Barnes Beaten in Golf Match for Red Cross at Garden City.

BOTH TEAMS PUTT WEAKLY

Siwanoy Expert Negotiates Second Hole with a Birdie 3 in Four-Ball Contest.

Slipshod putting by those who make a specialty of getting into the cup once within hailing distance of the hole marked the four-ball Red Cross exhibition match at the Garden City Country Club yesterday in which Walter Hagen of Rochester, former open champion, and John G. Anderson of Siwanoy, Westchester amateur champion, defeated Jerome D. Travers, former national amateur and open champion, and Jim Barnes, Western open champion, at 3 and 1, in an eighteen-hole heat-ball affair. Hagen was superior to the others, turning in a 75 for the course, and it was mainly his steady play which decided the issue.

None of the four could do anything sensational, although Anderson came closest to rising to supreme heighths when he dropped the ball into the cup at the second for a birdie 3, a stroke better than any other of the players could do. Travers was second to Hagen in the day's play, having 78 for the journey, but Barnes and Anderson found the greene too difficult at this time of the year. Barnes made 81 with 40 out and 41 in, and Anderson, after having an exemplary 39 out, needed 45 to come back for an 84.

The best ball of the winners was 72, which is surprising under the circumstances. However, when Hagen slipped for the moment it seemed that Anderson was able to rise to the emergency, and often he sent his ball for a 3 or 4, which either tied or bettered the efforts of the losing pair. Barnes and Travers seemed to fall at the same time, and while many of their holes were made in par figures, when one was confronted with obstacles the other invariably got into trouble.

The first hole was halved, but at the second Anderson sank a long putt for a birdie 3, putting his side 1 up. The third and fourth were halved in 4s, and the fifth in 3.

The seventh found Hagen and Travers with 4s, and at the eighth it was Anderson who again came to the front with a winning 4, while all the others had 5s. Barnes heroically won the ninth with a birdie 4, which brought Hagen and Anderson to the turn 2 up.

All had 4s at the tenth, and Hagen slipped a 3 into the score to win the eleventh. Travers won the twelfth with a 4, a hole which proved too hazardous for the others. Four 5s were made at the thirteenth, and at the fourteenth Barnes won with a 6, when the others found too many obstacles in the way. Hagen got the fifteenth with a 3, and after the sixteenth was halved, Hagen settled the issue by winning the seventeenth.

GALA GOLF EVENT TO GO TO CHICAGO

Planned to Hold Contest Between Evans and Ouimet Against Barnes and Hagen.

MATCH AROUSES INTEREST

May Be Held Over 72 Holes to Test Skill of Amateurs in Long Match with Professionals.

Every indication is that Chicago will be entertained by the golf exhibition de luxe during July. Officials of the Western Golf Association, who are doing yeoman service just now in raising funds for the Red Cross, announce that it is more than likely that a four-ball best-ball match will be arranged with Chick Evans, the national amateur and open champion, paired with Francis Ouimet, Western amateur champion, against Jim Barnes, Western open champion, and Walter Hagen, former national open champion.

The Western officials could not have found a more attractive card, nor could they have selected more proficient players than the quartet. Undoubtedly the four are the best players in this country, and, according to such an authority as James Hepburn, now professional at the National Links and one-time a leading Scottish professional, there are no four better players in the world. Hepburn is firm in his conviction that Evans, Ouimet, Barnes, and Hagen could play against Vardon, Ray, Taylor, and Braid, the British links leaders, and more than hold their own.

If the match, now tentatively scheduled for the middle of July, were made a seventy-two-hole affair of two days' duration, it might provide the national golf army with a decided line on the ability of each of the contestants. For some time golfers have been divided as to the strength of the leading amateurs as compared with the best of the professionals. It is the contention of many that the professionals would win in any match of seventy-two holes. However, the amateure are for their kind to a man, and Evans and Ouimet would have undoubted support against even Barnes and Hagen.

Have Already Beaten Pros.

Both of the amateurs have distanced the professional field in the national open tournament. When Evans won his open title Jock Hutchinson finished second, and Barnes was third. While this would seem conclusive proof that Evans is a shade better than Barnes it only brings forth the proof for that one match. Evans is a par golfer all the time. But so are Hagen and Barnes.

Ouimet won his open title in probably the most sensational golf tournament this country ever knew, since it was in that tournament that Harry Vardon and Edward Ray came to this country and tried to lift the American laurels. At the end of the seventy-two holes of play, Ray, Vardon, and Ouimet were all even, but in the playoff Ouimet finished several strokes to the good. Since that time Ouimet has been a consistent leader, whether pitted against professionals or amateurs.

A meeting between the four would allow of a comparison of golf as played by the best in the nation. It would determine, at least for the time being, if the approach of Evans is as valueless as the putt of Hagen, or the tremendous powar of Barnes is as valuable as the finished product of Ouimet. All four are long drivers, Barnes possibly being able to get the greater distance off the tee. Evans undoubtedly would have a small advantage once out on the fairway, but when the green was reached it would be Ouimet and Hagen who could be expected to do the impossible.

Every one of the four has shattered enough course records to last an average golfer a lifetime and each is able to play record golf at a moment's notice. No matter the feat of golf furnished, any one is liable to make the course appear simple, as was the case at Baltusrol when Ouimet made seven birdies in the first nine holes, over that long and hazardous course. Chicago followers of golf will not soon forget the 283 for seventy-two holes turned in by Barnes in the Western open tournament held last season, and it will be hard for the Chicagoans to concede a chance of defeat to Evans, as the redoubtable "Chick" has played some wonderful golf around his home city.

Furlough to be Arranged.

The match appears to be the best possible as a war relief venture, as it should attract a record gallery. If it is a match of sufficient length it probably will draw enthusiasts even from New York. Sergeant Ouimet already has expressed his willingness to take part, and all that is necessary now is to arrange a furlough for the soldier player and get the consent of the other parties involved.

Had it not been for the cleverness of Perry Adair and Tom Prescott the Columbia golf team would probably still be unbeaten. As it is, the only defeat suffered by A. L. Walker, Jr., George A. Bijur, A. L. Rohdenburg, and C. R. Ward was at the hands of Georgia Tech. The team has defeated Pennsylvania and Williams since that loss to the Atlanta players. Columbia is to meet Princeton Friday and will play a return match with Pennsylvania in Philadelphia Saturday.

Inasmuch as Princeton also defeated Penn it is likely that the Columbia players will find a hard match confronting them when they visit the New Jersey institution. Penn beat Harvard, and Yale was unmercifully swamped by Georgia Tech., which would bring Columbia and Princeton to the forefront as the leading college golf teams in the East this season. Georgia Tech. is in the South.

The Hudson River Country Club is about to rearrange its course to fit with the stately and attractive clubhouse. The members have found the present course entirely too short for their purpose, and the acquisition of more land has made it possible to fix up an eighteen hole links which will be of championship length when completed. At the present time there are eight holes at Hudson River, between 250 and 340 yards in length, all just between a par 3 and par 4. Nearly all of these eight holes are a few yards too long for a one-shot and an equal distance too short for two shots.

The Spring golf tournament of the Real Estate Board of New York is to be held at the Greenwich Country Club next Thursday. Besides the usual prizes offered in this annual affair there will be a special event for guests of the members. At present more than seventy entries have been made, and the prospects are that more than 100 players will make the trip. The players will be divided into three classes acerpding to their handicaps. The President's Cup, which is the main trophy of the organization, is for the lowest net score at eighteen holes, and must be won twice to become the property of the fortunate player.

Most of the golf clubs in the Metropolitan district already are under way for the season, and have even started their tournament season. Several have planned unusual events beneficial to the Red Cross, and with Thrift Stamps and War Saving Stamps taking the place of the usual prizes. Dunwoodie is to be an unusually active place throughout the Summer. Red card competitions are to be held every Saturday throughout the season, and there will be monthly tournaments from June to October. Special tournaments are to be held Memorial Day, July 4, and Labor Day.

Official recognition of the new practice of giving War Savings Stamps as golf prizes has come from the Executive Committee of the United States Golf Association. In an open leter addressed to the numerous clubs affiliated with the national body, Howard F. Whitney, Secretary of the U. S. G. A., makes it known that the subject of playing for prizes in the form of War Stamps or Liberty bonds has been brought to the attention of the Executive Committee, with reference to its bearing on the by-laws defining amateur status. The letter goes on to state:

"After careful consideretion, the committee believes that during the period of the war no valuable prizes of any character should be played for and that the money so expended in the past should be donated to the Red Cross or other war funds.

"Inasmuch as some of the clubs have held competitions in which War Stamps and Liberty bonds have been the prizes, the committee is of the opinion that the association would approve a liberal interpretation of this by-law and has, therefore, decided that playing for War Stamps or Liberty bonds as prizes will not affect the amateur status of the players during the period of the war. The committee further believes that the same liberal interpretation should be made as to the payment of expenses of players in matches for the purpose of raising money for the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A. or other recognized war charities. The right is reserved, however, to take action in any case where this interpretation is abused for mercenary motives."

NEW RULES FOR BIG TEN.

Conference Colleges Adopt Federation Track and Field Code.

The Intercollegiate Conference Association, known in college circles as the Big Ten and comprising in its membership colleges of the Middle West, has agreed to amend its rules so that they will in future conform with the rules of the International Amateur Athletic Federation and the Amateur Athletic Union. This announcement was made at local A. A. U. headquarters following the receipt of a letter from Charles A. Dean of Chicago, President of the A. A. U. This means that amateur track and field sport throughout the country will in future be governed by rules which are universal.

The Intercollegiate Conference Association is the last governing body in college track and field sport to fall in line and amend its rules so that they conform to the international standard. President Dean is the official referee for the I. C. A. championship meets and local A. A. U. officials said yesterday that it was because of his suggestion, during a recent meeting, that the amendments to the rules were adopted.

The most important amendment is that having to do with the measurement of tracks over which the championships titles are decided yearly. Heretofore the tracks were measured on a line eighteen inches from the border, but under the new rule they will be measured on a twelve inch line. An amendment to the javelin throwing rules has also been adopted.

This will make for uniformity, particularly in the cases where record performances are made.

In the past there have been instances where I. C. A. athletes have equaled records while competing in their championships, but because of the variance between the I. C. A. and the federation and A. A. U. rules these performances were not accepted by the national A. A. U. body. A case in point is that of Binga Diamond, the colored sprinter, who, while representing the University of Chicago several years ago, equaled the world's record for 440 yards. However, because the performance was made on a track measured on an eighteen inch line, it was not accepted by the A. A. U.

Last year another unusual performance was registered when Higgins, another Western college athlete, threw the javelin the remarkable distance of 196 feet. Official reports, however, disclosed that Higgins had employed the free style of throwing the javelin, holding it at the end instead of in the middle as called for by the federation and A. A. U. rules, so this performance was also unrecognized.

The first meet which will be governed by the new rules will be held by the Intercollegiate Conference Association at Chicago on June 8, when the annual outdoor track and field championships are decided.

SWIMMING RECORDS SET.

Good Crop of New Marks Produced During Past Season.

With the holding of the last national indoor swimming championship for men recently the pool season passed into history and it is interesting to note that, although a number of the speediest contestants were engaged in army or navy duties and unable to compete, a good crop of new records was reaped.

Norman Ross of San Francisco proved the year's leader and his brilliant work was really surprising, for he is now in the aviation corps, with little chance to train, and his truly sensational performances were accomplished during a short furlough granted him to attend the title races.

Two events held in Chicago, the 500-yard championship and a special 300-yard open swim, provided the wanted opportunity for the Californian to attack the standards. In the former he cuvered the full distance in 5:53 2-5, as against his own American former mark of 6:05 3-5, and the world's record of 6:02 4-5 by J. H. Hetfield of England; but he also disposed on the way of two other national classics, lowering the 400-yard figures from 4:52 1-5 to 4:38 2-5, and those for 440 yards from 5:16 2-5 to 5:08 4-5. In the shorter contest Ross brought down three more standards at recognized distances, clipping the 200-yard figures by one second in 2:06 4-5, those for 220 yards by 3-5 of a second in 2:20 2-5 and those for 300 yards from 3:26 1-5 to 3:16 3-5.

It needs be mentioned that, although several of the foregoing records represent world's marks, actually and comparatively, they cannot be listed as such. All were set in 60-foot pools, and the International Federation only considers performances made over courses measuring not less than 75 feet. They will rank only as American records.

Perry McGillivray, formerly of the Illinois A. C. of Chicago, now a petty officer at the Great Lakes Naval Station, furnished one of his frequent surprises in the title fixtures by making his début as a back stroke swimmer and capturing the 150-yard championship under required conditions in the world's record time of 1:49 3-5, beating the old mark for a 75-foot pool by fully 03 2-5. In the elimination heats McGillivray did even better, touching out in 1:48 4-5, but there is some question about the acceptance of this time officially.

Plunging records were shattered both in 60 and 75 foot tanks. The figures for the shorter course were improved several times by Benjamin Princell and John Lichter, two Chicago A. A. representatives, and finally remained to the credit of the latter at 15 3-5, but Princell took possession of the standard for a 75-foot pool in winning the national event in 0:41 4-5, or 0:4 4-5 under the former world's time.

YATES TO TRAIN AVIATORS.

Brooklyn Athlete First Man Chosen for New Position.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 11.—David J. Yates, former pitcher of the New York Americans, all-round athlete, coach and trainer, has been announced as the first director and conditioner of American aviators. He has been assigned to the Pensacola Station.

About two weeks ago Government officials invited Walter Camp to assist in selecting a large number of college trainers to be sent to the aviation fields. The appointment of a large number is expected soon to take up the important work.

Mr. Yates is a graduate of St. John's College, Brooklyn, and was Captain of the football, baseball, basket ball and swimming teams while an undergraduate. He has since played baseball with the New York American, Newark, N. J., Steubenville, Ohio, and Ocean City, N. J., nines. He has been athletic director, coach and trainer at the Horace Mann School, New York, the New Rochelle High School, and the Proityman Boys' Camps for a dozen years.

YOUNGER PLAYERS TO FORE IN TENNIS

Many Older Stars Will Not Compete, but Season Promises to be Lively.

With the season of tournament tennis just starting, every indication points to a series of competitions which will far overshadow the rather haphazard period of a year ago, when inertia militated against the success of many of the more important tournaments of the year. Probably the factor which has done more than anything else to rehabilitate tennis on something like its prewar footing is the sanction given by the United States National Lawn Tennis Association for championship events.

It was found that the Red Cross feature of last year, while it accomplished much in the way of raising money for the ambulance service, did not supply the kind of tennis which is necessary to keep alive interest in the game and in the clubs.

It will be strange this year to find tennis tournaments of national importance being played without the presence of Williams and Johnston, Church and Washburn, and others of equal note throughout the sphere of tennis. There is probably no sport which has given more freely of its best men than tennis, but it does not by reason of their absence, in the much more serious game being played overseas, augur that the tournament play of this season will be other than of a high standard. It may, in fact, prove to be beneficial to the game that some of the stars are absent, for there will be added incentive for the younger players to make themselves worthy of the places left vacant by the call to war duties.

Were the men of the first ten and of the second ten here to play it would be a confident minded youth who would aspire to really championship honors in the midst of such stars. Now the field is cleared for the younger players who are seeking to ascend to the heights of the game, and from observations during the indoor season it seems not at all unlikely that there will be such a season of tennis as will develop new men of real class, worthy successors to the ones who are now in France.

It was one of the most fortunate of happenings for tennis when the national association took council at the font of wisdom some two years ago and decided that to insure the future success of the game there should be a campaign carried on which would instill a love of the sport and a proficiency of play among the rising generation. Thereby was created the foundation for the season which is just opening, for without the younger talent the game would be stagnated and clubs would be preparing for the foreclosure of mortgages and the cutting up of tennis courts into building lots.

But aside from the youngsters there will doubtless be some of the older tennis experts who will take upon themselves some of the burden of keeping the game alive. That such men may provide some of the most interesting play of the season is not a guess of too hazardous proportions. Those who attended the patriotic national singles championship at Forest Hills last Summer will long remember the thrilling match which Craig Biddle played against one of the Western whirlwinds, Robert Lindley Murray, nor will it be forgotten how close Nathaniel W. Niles came to winning the national singles crown, which eventually rested upon Murray's shoulders.

It appears that tournaments for boys and juniors, which were held so successfully last Summer, will have even a greater interest this season and from the viewpoint of the women players it is a step forward that championship tournaments for girls will be played.

A glance over the tennis schedule cannot help but show that there has been a marked cutting down in the allotment of tournament dates, but it is also true that this may prove more advantageous than otherwise. Heretofore there has been a growing number of conflicting dates in the same section of the country, with often a division of the leading players and a consequent lessening of interest in the events. Now the men will have a fine opportunity of clashing one against the other during a single tournament which has no rival attraction, for of all the conflicts have not been avoided, but at least there are few in number and inconsequential as regards the more important events.

Announcements of the first annual junior metropolitan championship for girls have been sent to all the schools and tennis clubs in the metropolitan district. This event, which is held under the auspices of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association, will be played at the West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I., beginning May 18. The Tournament Committee includes Miss Florence A. Ballin, Chairman; Helen Rice, Elizabeth Guller, and Eunice Rossman.

All girls are eligible to enter who will not reach their ninoteenth birthday before Oct. 1 of this yeor. The tournament will begin at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning, May 18, with two rounds of singles, and will continue in the afternoons of the following week. Matches will be scheduled at 2 o'clock, except when possible to play them earlier, so that girls will not have to be absent from school.

On Monday afternoon the doubles will start. The mixed doubles, in which all boys eligible for boy and junior tournaments may enter, will begin on Wednesday afternoon. Suitable trophies will be awarded in each event. Entries should be sent to Miss Florence Ballin, West Side Tennis Club, Forest Hills, L. I., not later than Wednesday, May 15. The proceeds of the tournament will be given to the War Department's Commission on Training Camp Activities.

GOLF TOURNEY ON MAY 16.

Metropolitan Advertisers to Play in Three Events at Arcola.

The first tournament of the Metropolitan Advertisers Golf Association will be held at Arcola May 16. There will be three events, a 36-hole medal play handicap, an 18-hole medal play handicap, and a four-ball medal play event.

In the morning round a novel scheme has been devised to raise money for the Y. M. C. A. This will consist of taxing each contestant 10 cents for every stroke his net total is in excess of par for the course. The prizes awarded in all the contests will consist of golf balls, hose, stockings, and other useful things which every golfer has to buy.

RACEGOERS AWAIT JAMAICA'S OPENING

Plant in Splendid Shape for Start of Local Season on Thursday.

New York racegoers have been restive for the last month or so while the sport has been flourishing in Maryland, but the period of probation is nearly over, and on next Thursday the Metropolitan Jockey Club will set the local season in motion at Jamaica. The meeting will last for nine days and will be followed by six more days of racing after Belmont Park has had its innings with a Spring meeting that will last for nineteen racing days.

There have been moments of doubt during the strenuous Winter as to whether the coming season would come up to the standard of its immediate predecessors. Transportation difficulties were hinted at, and many owners have been so wrapped up in war service that a reduction of interest might reasonably be looked for. These gloomy forebodings all disappeared with the coming of Spring.

Horses found little difficulty in reaching Maryland and Kentucky, while arrangements have been made to have the leading thoroughbreds shipped to Jamaica in time for the principal events. Owners now have their war duties under control, and though many of the younger men will be at the front, it is fairly well assured that there will be a large turnout of the turf leaders at Jamaica, and that these will be increased in a great measure when Pimlico ends on Friday.

There are indications that the season may be even more successful than that of 1917. Several Canadian owners have entered the list since racing in the Dominion has been abandoned. They have taken to the sport in no halfhearted way, and with no opposition across the border it is a certainty that the fields will be larger. The liability of two-year-olds to buck their shins may keep the juvenile evente down a little just now, but the Maryland campaign has put the all-aged horses in trim and a continuance of the large fields that have been the vogue at Pimlico may be expected.

Contrary to general opinion, the trainers insist that the severe Winter was of great benefit to the horses in their charge. The cold served to stamp out the diseases that frequently attack thoroughbreds early in the season, while the fine open Spring has given plenty of opportunity to prepare the cracks for their stake and handicap engagements.

Jamaica Plant Ready.

W. C. Edwards, Racing Secretary for the Metropolitan Jockey Club, talked enthusiastically yesterday over the prospects for Jamaica. The plant is in excellent shape, as work was started a month earlier than usual to offset labor trouble. The track itself is lightning fast, as proved by the fact that one of the candidates for the Paumonok, the opening feature, worked six furlongs one day last week in 1:13. There was little in the way of improvements to the stands, as these were furbished up last season.

For months past the management has been busy refusing application for stable room, and Secretary Edwards said that not only were all the stalls engaged, but that twice the number at the track could have been disposed of. There will be no trouble on this account, however, as all the owners will be accommodated either at Belmont Park or at Aqueduct.

Many who have been racing in Maryland will desert Pimlico in order to be in at the opening of Jamaica. A trainload, carrying about 100 horses, left Baltimore yesterday, and these will all arrive in time to have galleps before next Thursday.

One of the largest stables at the track is that of John Sanford, who has engaged accommodation for thirty-two thoroughbreds. The care of these will be shared by W. J. Young and Preston Burch. The horses of James Butler are also in evidence, and the cherry and white is almost sure to be seen on the opening day. Willis Sharp Kilmer already has twenty-two at Jamaica and sixteen more are coming from Kentucky, which will have to find stable room at Aqueduct.

Rosa to Ship Stable.

Fifteen horses owned by the late H. C. Hallenbeck are at Jamaica, and these will be raced by his son, John Hallenbeck. The large stable of the Canadian owner, J. K. L. Ross, will be shipped from Pimlico, and one of these is the great Cudgel, which is named with Omar Khayyam for the Kings County Handicap next Saturday. Walter J. Salmon, a young owner who has recently secured Eugene Ward and as trainer, has engaged eight stalls. His two-year-olds are doing well, and among them is a colt by the French sire Sardanapale, of which great things are expected.

Phil Chinn, the Kentucky sportsman, is expected tomorrow with a good-sized string, some of which are believed to be owned by John A. Drake, who years ago raced a pretentious stable with Charles G. Gates. There is a newcomer from the West in C. E. Mickelwaite, who has been accommodated with five stalls. James Fitzimmons has a large public stable, including the horses of H. L. Pratt, and some of the others who will have stable room at the track with the number of stalls allotted are: Beverwyck Stable, 12; A. A. Reilly, 6; Andy Blakely, 12; Sandy McNaughton, 6; W. C. Clancy, 5; E. Soule, 8; Potomac Stable, 15; Cleveland Stable, 6; J. W. McClelland, 9; W. L. Oliver, 11; Herbert P. Gardner, 11; Henry Watterson, 11; Dave Gideon, 9, and A. Clopton, 3.

It was impossible yesterday to get any idea of the prehable starters for the Paumonok Handicap at six furlongs, which will be the opening day feature, but it was whispered that two old favorites would be among the starters—Andrew Miller's Roamer and James Butler's High Noon. On Saturday the best handicap horses will be asked to go a mile and a sixteenth in the Kings County Handicap. This may provide a real treat, as Omar Khayyam and his Western conqueror are among those entered.

Expect a Record Crowd.

Arrangements have been made to handle a record crowd on the opening day. These have been complicated by the necessity of collecting the war tax on admissions, but all is now smoothed out, and only fine weather is necessary to insure a banner opening of the sport. The daylight saving scheme will not affect the time of starting the races, which will be 2:30 o'clock, allowing plenty of time for automobile parties to get home to dinner in daylight.

Owners who have horses quartered at the old Gravesend track have been worried by rumors that the plant may be taken over by the Government for war purposes in the near future. The property was examined not long ago by a military delegation, and it is believed that the proximity of the track to the Bush stores may render it decidedly useful to the Government. Even if turned over to the military authorities the owners and trainers hope to continue using the track for training purposes by stabling their horses at Parkway and in private stables in the neighborhood.

A fine lot of two-year-olds have been rendered ineligible for stake races because of the death of H. C. Hallenbeck, who failed to file a partnership clause with the Jockey Club. His son, John Hallenbeck, will race these youngsters in the overnight events at Jamaica. One of the two-year-olds is Golden King, a son of Star Shoot and King's Daughter, and John E. Madden is a half owner of this promising colt.

Herbert P. Gardner will be a new name in racing this season. He is a young broom manufacturer of Amsterdam, N. Y., who last year raced one horse under the name of the Crown Stable. This season he has about a dozen horses, including some promising two-year-olds, and will race them under his own name with Jack O'Brien as trainer.

Frank Davitt's Fanny Mechan, one of the juvenile sensations in Maryland, is already at the Jamaica track and is being trained for the Colorado and other two-year-old stakes. The best of the Whitney, Kilmer, and Belmont youngsters are entered for these stakes, and Fanny will receive a real test.

A. McL. Earlocker, Secretary of the Saratoga Association, has announced that entries for the four principle steeplechase stakes, which closed early in the week, shewed that this branch of the sport would be fully up to the high standard of the past. All the prominent owners have named their best jumpers.

Weldship, which was the leading fencer in 1916 and 1917, has again been named by Edward M. Weld, who also will be represented by St. Charicote, one of the best of last season. An old champion, Blankenburg, will attempt to come back. He has recovered from his lameness and has been nominated by Archibald Barklie.

Mrs. Grant Hugh Browne has named two good Imported ones of quality in Fair Mac and Moonlight II., while William A. Prime's entry contains horses brought from abroad, with Silver Dart perhaps the best.

Hal Parr will be well represented with Robert Oliver, Captain Parr, and Shannon River, and there will be considerable interest in the appearance of the Whitney castoff, Hwfa, through the field, as this son of Hamburg narrowly missed being a good horse on the flat.

The United Hunts Racing Association, which will stage its annual Spring meeting at Belmont Park Terminal Saturday, May 25, announces that entries for the Great United Hunts Steeplechase will close next Wednesday. This five-thousand-dollar event is one of the sportiest of the steeplechase type in America, and most of the prominent owners will show their colors in this test. Another of the special features at the Terminal meet will be the Double Event, a five-thousand-dollar race, which usually results in one of the stiffest contests of the timber-topping type.

As Light Goes Through Glass

Just as light rays penetrate through glass, so current passes freely through Threaded Rubber Insulation. Nearly 200,000 tiny threads in each insulator mark the path for the current flow.

The hard rubber stands guard against the formation of short circuits between battery plates.

There's another reason why the Still Better Willard Battery with Threaded Rubber Insulation is worth so much more than its slightly higher cost. It's the one and only battery with the "Bone Dry" principle that is your absolute assurance of getting a battery as new as the day it left the factory.

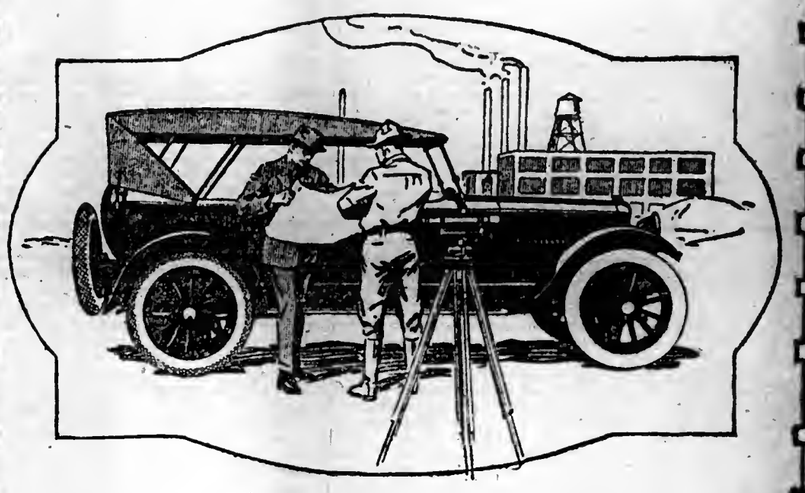
PAIGE

The Most Beautiful Car in America



The Car of Your Choice

It is a well known fact that a shortage of motor cars is inevitable. Already there have been substantial curtailments in production and the freight situation has made deliveries extremely difficult.

So now is the time of all times to buy the car of your choice. If you put the matter off too long you may have to compromise on "any car" that is available. And that is never a very satisfactory way to solve your automobile problem.

If you are like the average intelligent American, you have already decided what car you prefer and can afford to purchase. Quite naturally, we hope that your choice has been a Paige. But, at any rate, be sure to buy the car that you believe in—and buy it immediately.

In the field of mechanical products, the Paige nameplate stands as an unquestioned guarantee of honest manufacturing and fair dealing. It is a hall mark of quality—a symbol of our obligation and the confidence and respect which our product enjoys.

We ask you to buy that nameplate—rather than four wheels and a painted body. We ask you to buy a reputation that has endured through many fitful periods in the motor car industry—a reputation that will endure so long as Paige cars are made for and sold to the American people.

TRIALS WILL SHOW ARMY DOG AT WORK

German Shepherd Dog Club of America to Hold Contests Saturday.

TESTS ARE COMPLICATED

Aim Is to Demonstrate Utility of Breed in Scouting, Patrol Work, and Aiding the Wounded.

Next Saturday at Weequahic Park, Newark, there will be held the first field trial of the season for police and army dogs under the auspices of the German Shepherd Dog Club of America. This trial will be in the nature of a public demonstration of the peculiar adaptability of the shepherd dog breed for police and, especially, for scouting and Red Cross work. It has been estimated conservatively that there are not less than ten thousand dogs with the enemy armies and five or six thousands dogs with the armies of our allies.

The service, in scouting, patrol work, and in finding the wounded and bringing assistance to them, which these dogs render is inestimable. There is a growing feeling in this country that our own overseas forces should be adequately supplied with trained dogs to render service of this sort, and the field trial at Weequahic Park Race Track, as well as the other trials which will follow during the season, will give public demonstration of the remarkable work of which these animals are capable. The trials, which will begin promptly at 11 o'clock, may be reached directly by way of the Lehigh Valley Railroad or by automobile over the route of the Lincoln Highway.

In all the preliminary trials there are open and novice classes, and in the final trial an open class only. In order to compete in the final trial the dog must have secured at least 70 per cent. of the required points at any one of the preliminary trials competing in the open class. Moreover, no dog may compete in the preliminary class until it has won forty out of sixty-five points in the obedience exercises and seventy out of 115 points in the police work exercises in the novice classes.

The degree of finish which the trained police dog has attained is based on implicit obedience and attention to his master. The trials are intended to show how far it has been possible for the trainer to control his dogs. Guides are required to present themselves punctually with their dogs and to take their places near the judge's stand, but out of sight of the public and also out of sight of all dogs which are working. The first tests which the dog must pass are those of obedience in the following order and with the following scale of points:

1, heeling on leash, 5 points; 2, heeling without leash, 10 points; 3, refusing food offered by strangers or thrown or found on the ground, 5 points; 4, guarding objects, 10 points; 5, giving tongue on command, 5 points; 6, retrieving objects weighing two pounds, 5 points; 7, retrieving over a hedge one and one-quarter yards high, 5 points; 8, retrieving over wall one and one-half yards high, 5 points; 9, scaling wall, jumping ditch two yards high, 5 points; 10, lying down three minutes, 5 points.

In heeling, the guide is required to turn to the right and left; run, walk, and stop without interruption. Where the leash is used, it must be a long one and held loosely to prove that the dog really does follow at heel. In the test for refusing food the dog must lie down, and without leash and in the absence of the guide must refuse bread, meat, or any other food. In guarding objects an attempt is made to fool the dog and tempt him to relax guard. The dog is chained beside the object which he is to guard in such a way that he can reach about two feet beyond it. The object must be as large as a handbag and weigh eight or ten pounds. The dog must lie quietly beside it and not permit himself to be excited by persons walking or standing a yard away from him.

Not until the judge reaches for the object should the dog growl or show his teeth, but when the judge becomes more energetic and even uses the stick in an attempt to take the object away, the dog should defend himself and it most vigorously. In this test the judge is not permitted to attempt to remove the object with the aid of a stick, but he should try to induce the dog to leave it in every way that he can. If the dog should desert the object and follow the judge as the latter walks about, the exercise is, of course, badly done and points should be deducted. The same is true if the dog gnaws or chews the object.

In giving tongue, the dog must bark continuously after one command. It is insufficient if the dog barks only once or twice. Judges are instructed to deduct points if any assistance is given the dog by the guide during this exercise.

In retrieving, the dog must sit down and await comand in that position, and when the object to be retrieved is thrown he must immediately recover it and bring it back in front of his guide, sit down and hold the object in his mouth until relieved of it. These requirements also apply to retrieving over ditches and high hurdles. When instructed to lie down, the dog must obey at once at one command, and remain in position while the guide goes away.

The second portion of the exercise consists in scouting and police work. The order of tests and points are as follows:

1. Scouting over ground and barking at any person foreign, 15 points; 2, transporting a prisoner without nipping, 10 points; 3, retrieving an object let fall inconspicuously by the prisoner, 10 points; 4, protecting the guide without command, 10 points; 5, watching the prisoner quietly when the latter is quiet, 10 points; 6, arresting and holding the prisoner on attempted flight, 10 points; 7, guarding the prisoner during the absence of the guide, 10 points; 8, fearlessness of things thrown at the dog; fearlessness to blows with a stick, 10 points; 9, fearlessness of shots, 5 points; 10, general obedience in which the whole attitude of the dog during the previous tests is to be considered, 15 points.

At the command to scout, the dog shall follow the direction indicated by the guide and cover the ground carefully, searching in every hiding place. At least three hiding places should be provided. As soon as the dog has found the hidden person, he must watch him and by barking, attract the guide's attention to the spot. While the prisoner is being transported from his place of concealment, the dog should follow quietly behind the prisoner without barking or nipping. He should pick up eny object dropped inconspicuously, bringing it immediately to the guide, and then continue the guarding of the prisoner without waiting for the command.

If the prisoner attempts to escape or attacks the guide the dog should immediately attack him, but should with equal promptness let go as soon as the prisoner is quiet. During this attack the prisoner should shoot at least once in the air as a test. The dog should lie down, without being held, until commanded to follow the fleeing prisoner. When so commanded he should stop him and not let him move. The prisoner should attempt to drive the dog away with blows or with a whip or by throwing sticks at him. The dog must watch the prisoner when the guide is not present, and should stop attempted flight, but as soon as his captive is quiet the dog should let him alone and watch him until the guide comes.

The most difficult branch of the trials is concerned with detective work. In this, the order of tests and their scale of points is as follows:

1. Searching for an object left by a stranger at the end of a trail 400 yards long and half an hour old. The trail should be unfamiliar to the guide and the dog free of leash, 15 points.

2. To search for and find a person hidden at the end of a trail 400 yards long and half an hour old, and to bark at the person when found. Trail to be unfamiliar to the guide, and the dog to trail either on leash or free, 15 points.

3. To scout over ground and bark at any persons discovered, 10 points.

4. To pick out a man standing among four others and bark to identify him; scent having been given from some object belonging to this man, 30 points.

5. To pick up and follow a fresh trail crossed by water, and to wade or swim across and continue to search until the object has been found. Trail to be 500 yards long, and the scent to be given on some object.

In laying trails different persons should be used for each dog. The trailer should be carefully instructed by the judge as to the direction he should take. He must walk at a natural pace, and at the end of the trail stand still for about a minute, rubbing his feet well into the ground, place the object to be found between his footprints, and then take the shortest route to the place indicated by the judge. In setting a dog on the trail the guide should be very quiet and see that the dog's nose is not pressed to the ground. Strong emphasis is laid on slow trailing. The more slowly and thoroughly a dog trails the better his work is. The object which is to be sought by the dog may not be conspicuous in color, smell, or size. In awarding points for these tests the judges are instructed to consider how the dog takes the scent and picks up the trail; how he follows it and picks up the object, and at what pace he returns. He should return at a fast pace, sit down in front of his guide, and at the command surrender the object which he has retrieved.

It can be readily seen from this outline, which is based on the official order of trials promulgated by the club, that the dogs are expected to display an exceedingly high order of intelligence and the strictest discipline. The manifold uses to which this intelligence and discipline can be put in the prosecution of the war as well as in the work of Police Departments and State Constabulary are manifest to all who see the dogs go through their tests.

COLUMBIA CREW IMPROVES.

Oarsmen Working Hard in Preparation for Race on Severn.

The Columbia rowers during the past week have been trying out no less than three shells for the purpose of deciding upon which will be the most suitable craft to ship this week for the Annapolis Regatta, when the Blue and White oarsmen meet Penn for the second time this season, the Navy making the third entry. Coach Rice and the Varsity oarsmen finally agreed upon the one used at Princeton in the Childs Cup Race.

There has been a noticeable development during the past week in the Columbia oarsmen. The fact that Coach Rice has been able to get his men away on an early start gives them a much better chance for the contest this Saturday than the position they held when at Princeton. The crew will leave for Annapolis Wednesday afternoon, and will be ready to row on the Severn Thursday and Friday.

AUTO RACERS PLAN AN ACTIVE SEASON

Resta, Duray, and Oldfield Are Among Those to Appear on Various Speedways.

Automobile racing this season promises to be one of the most successful in the annals of the sport. Already pretentious race meetings have been arranged for the speedways at Sheepshead Bay, Chicago, and Providence, as well as for the tracks in other cities throughout the country.

Great impetus has been given the sport by the announcements of Dario Resta, Arthur Duray, and Barney Oldfield that they intend to make this the most active season in their careers. These three are among the most sensational and most daring drivers, and the fact that they will be seen on all the big speedways should serve to draw out record throngs at every meet.

Oldfield is the dean of auto pilots, having maintained his place in the Sweepstakes of $50,000, losing by a margin of four minutes over the 500-mile route. Resta has the distinction of being the only driver ever to win two Vanderbilt Cup and and two Grand Prix classics in successive years.

Great interest attaches to the return of Barney Oldfield, the oldest of racing drivers. Oldfield is ready to retire after nearly twenty years of strenuous competition, and this is to be his final season.

TO SWIM FOR CITY TITLES.

High School Boys Will Compete in Junior Championships Friday.

The first annual high school junior indoor swimming championships will be held at the College of the City of New York Friday. The coming meet will furnish a climax to the high school junior dual meet series, which recently concluded with De Witt Clinton H. S. winner of the team title.

During the five weeks this series progressed, W. H. Whyte, Chairman of the P. S. A. L. Swimming Committee, introduced several innovations, including a 200-foot breast stroke swim, form diving, and a relay event at 400 feet. These competitions proved successful, and they will be continued at the coming title meet. The events of May 17 will he for city championship titles.

LEADING AUTO DRIVERS WHO WILL BE SEEN IN ACTION SOON.

championship division for more than seventeen years. Resta, who held the title of Speed King in 1915 and 1916, is out to regain the laurels he voluntarily relinquished last season, while Duray is the present European champion and holder of the world's record average of 147 miles an hour.

The Frenchman made his record run in a mile time trial at Ostend, Belgium, several years ago. He is at present on his way to this country.

Resta will compete in the Harkness Handicap at 100 miles, which is to feature the inaugural track-and-air meet to be held at the Sheepshead Bay Speedway on Decoration Day. Resta handed in his entry last night to Promoter William H. Wellman after the pair had been in conference for more than an hour.

Louis Chevrolet will start from scratch in this event, for which $30,000 in prizes and bonuses is offered. Barney Oldfield and Ira Vail are the other two drivers who have thus far entered.

There is much speculation as to what allowance, if any, Resta will receive from Chevrolet. The latter won the Speedway championship by finishing first in the Harkness Gold Trophy Race at Sheepshend last September. Resta started in this event, but was forced to withdraw after a few laps because of a broken camshaft. It was the only race in which Resta participated last season.

Resta's five-year record in the racing game in this country is the best ever compiled by a driver in the history of the sport. He has won every race in which he has finished but one, and that he lost to Ralph De Palma, the sprint champion of 1917. Resta finished second to De Palma in the 1915 Indianapolis

FORDHAM ARRANGES TRIP.

Boat Chartered to Carry Rooters to West Point on May 25.

The Fordham University baseball management has practically completed plans for the excursion to West Point on May 25, when the Maroons will meet the Army team in their annual game. The steamer Sandy Hook of the Central Railway of New Jersey has been secured, and Joseph Kinsley, the Maroon manager, announced that 2,500 people can be accommodated. The annual game on the plains is one of the big attractions on the Fordham schedule, and, as both nines have been going well this season, a large crowd of Maroon rooters will no doubt make the trip.

The Bronx collegians are playing through one of the longest and stiffest schedules that has ever been listed for a Fordham nine. To date twenty-seven games have been arranged, and it is likely that the number will reach thirty before the season is ended. The Maroons have lost only three games so far. The Navy humbled them on the Southern trip, Seton Hall triumphed at South Orange, and Holy Cross won out at Fordham Field last Thursday. Despite the lack of veterans and the youth and inexperience of the players, the Fordham team seems bound to make as good a record as any that has represented the Bronx university.

MINOR SPORTS HOLD INTEREST AT YALE

Annual Interscholastic Meet Promises to be Biggest Attraction of College Year.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 11.—A close observation has been kept at Yale on the effect of war conditions on all branches of athletics, and three conclusions have already been reached. First, every sport has been changed by the war; second, the war has greatly weakened conditions under which the principal 'Varsity sports are held; third, the squads, interest and enthusiasm attending the minor sports, the freshman and the interscholastic athletics have never been as pronounced.

In track athletics Yale has no 'Varsity team, no Captain has been elected, and it is doubtful whether any entries will be sent to the Intercollegiate meet. Yale's freshman track team, which yesterday opened its season with a dual meet against Princeton, and which will close it next Saturday with a meet against Harvard, is regarded as fully as strong as any previous freshman combination.

Plans for the annual interscholastic track meet, which Yale will hold next Saturday, show it the most pretentious ever attempted by the university track management. For the first time separate events have been planned for academies and high schools. The entry list is the largest on record, both in regard to individual and school entries, and indications are that the most brilliant set of preparatory school track men who ever came to Yale will compete.

Although Exeter is a slight favorite for the team victory, exceptionally formidable teams will be sent here by Hill School, Taft School, Hotchkiss School, Berkeley-Irving, Choate School, and Loomis Academy. Exeter has won the Yale Interscholastic Cup three times and needs only one more victory to insure permanent possession of the trophy.

Exeter's team will contain about twenty members. The team, which will be sent here from the Hill School will include twenty-two men. Among them will be Bushnell and Turner, the Interscholastic sprinters and middle-distance runners, who have several records to their credit; Massey, a remarkable hurdler, and Gardner, a leading broad jumper and pole vaulter.

Twelve events are open to all schools, including the resulation intercollegiate list, with the exception of the two-mile run, and four special events, a 100-yard and 440-yard dash, a mile run, and a high jump, have been added for high schools alone, making a total of sixteen events.

CAPABLANCA BACK IN FORM.

Cuban Chess Champion Plays 38 Opponents Without a Defeat.

That José R. Capablanca, te Cuban chess champion, has lost no ground, despite his abstinence for seventeen months from serious chess, was demonstrated in his simultaneous performance at the Manhattan Chess Club last week, the first given by him since his return from Havana. Thirty-eight opponets lined up at as many tables, and, after four hours of unremitting effort, Capablanca emerged with a score of thirty-three victories and five drawn games. Not a single one of his adversaries was able to defeat him. Five women players conducted a game apiece, and of these Mrs. Soderer of the New York Women's Chess Club succeeded in drawing Miss Julia Bartha, in consultation with F. Bartha, also drew the others who made an even score with the young master being W. Wolfman, who was a pawn ahead in the ending; G. Christenson, and L. Uztariz. Next Wednesday J. Janowski of Paris will give a similar exhibition.

Roy T. Black, the Brooklyn champion, by winning the tenth game of the series, was returned winner of his match of five games up with Alfred Schroeder at the Brooklyn Chess Club. In the early portio not the contest Schroeder held his own well and made an even break with the local champion up to the point where they had won three games each. The final score was: Black, 5; Schroeder, 3; drawn, 2.

G. Klingapor has again won the championship of the Staten Island Chess Club, after a close struggle with William T. Ryan, a former titleholder. The twenty-eighth anniversary of the club will be celebrated next Tuesday evening at the clubhouse in Stapleton. The program will consist of a rapid transit tournamont and a problem-solving competition.

BEST SWIMMERS TO MEET.

Many Outdoor Events Planned for Summer Season.

The outdoor swimming season, already well under way on the Pacific Coast, will soon be in full swing throughout the United States, and it promises to provo the most brilliant and successful in history. The widespread interest in water sports has enabled clubs to secure for their important meets not only the foremost swimmers in the country, but some world's champions from other lands.

The visit of Miss Fannie Durack, Australia's peerless swimmer, stands out as the season's leading feature, for it will afford the home girls their first opportunity to try conclusions with a famous foreign rival. Hardly less interesting will be the tour of such water fliers as Duke Kahanamoku, Clarence Lane, and Harold Kruger of Honolulu, who are booked to take a coast-to-coast trip for the purpose of raising funds for the Red Cross.

Miss Durack is due in San Francisco June 3, but she is not expected to take part in races of a decisive nature until July, when the Eastern champions will cross the continent to meet her. After that the Australian star will go to British Columbia, accompanied by the best of her American rivals, then start eastward early in August and head for New York.

The itinerary of the Hawaiians has only been arranged tentatively, but clubs in this neighborhood have been asked to hold meets for the team during the week of Aug. 7 to 13. The tour will start in California, probably in June, for the South Sea Islanders are expected in Chicago by mid-July, and a number of coast clubs are endeavoring to book them for earlier appearances.

Apart from the promised visit of the Honolulu watermen, which is likely to bring to this city other male champions, local interest will turn chiefly upon activities for fair natators, as the New York A. C., the leading organization in aquatics, will not hold championships or he represented for the duration of the war.

SALESMEN
often make the mistake of remaining too long in positions where they have little chance to show initiative and personal results.

A year ago a young man left one of the big bond houses to join our sales staff. He had been five years out of Yale, and was earning $150 per month. There was nothing in sight for him except his daily round of routine calls and correspondence, with a small promotion from time to time.

In his second month in our organization he earned commissions amounting to $205; in his third month, $358; in his fourth month, $498. In his fifth month his former chief offered him the general management of a trading company then being reorganized, but he preferred to continue with us. He has just been given a district managership in our company.

This man's experience might be yours. He has gone ahead rapidly in the last few months, not because of any remarkable talents, but because he has found the field of work in which his brains, education, and energy count to the utmost. He is in a new and growing line of business, where there is a corresponding opportunity to get results—and get them quickly.

Our work consists of conducting modern methods of advanced business training for executives, department heads, salesmen, correspondents, clerks, and others in progressive concerns. The company is not an old one, but has already achieved results which speak volumes for the possibilities of the near future.

The sales organization is made up of men of education and experience. They must be men of strong, clean, likable personality; they must know how to meet and convince executives; they must be good "closers," not merely good talkers; they must have faith in themselves, and must be dissatisfied with incomes of less than $4,000 a year.

We can take on a few such men at once. Write us fully, outlining your training and experience; in return we shall gladly give you full details, and if it proves mutually desirable, we shall arrange for an interview. All correspondence will be held absolutely confidential.

Please apply by letter only, addressing
BUSINESS TRAINING CORPORATION,
185 Madison Av., New York.

WANT 2,000 MEN FOR TANKS.

Two-Week Drive Opens Tomorrow—Navy Needs 10,000 a Month.

The recruiting officers directing the campaign for men to man the tank units, which this country is to send overseas, will begin this week a drive for 2,000 more men tomorrow. This service is now the only branch of the army open to volunteers of draft age. The physical requirements of the regular service are rigidly enforced in the selection of men for the tank units. The recruiting office of the tank service is at Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue.

The navy is making a drive for 10,000 men a month until further notice. Lieut. Commander Newton Mansfield, U. S. N., in charge of recruiting in the New York district, states that uncalled men of draft age may be enlisted, provided they obtain the proper authority to do so from their district draft boards.

The War Department has made an appeal for laborers, to work eight hours a day, on piers under the control of the Government in New York, Brooklyn, and Hoboken. Applicants, who are urged to apply at 54 Dey Street, must be American citizens, or allies or friendly neutrals having first naturalization papers. Army officers say that men who are not physically or otherwise fit for military service could be used on this work.

PICTURES IDENTIFY AUTOS.

Used Instead of Numbers in War Zone—Adoption Here Urged.

A victim dazed by an automobile, which has just knocked him down, could not be expected to get the license number correctly, especially a hyphenated number in the tens of thousands, but if the vehicle's distinguishing mark were a large painting of a rabbit the prostrate person could easily give the accurate clue to his assailant's identity. This hint is given to the traffic police in a bulletin issued last night by the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. The picture system, the bulletin says, is used with great success in registering motor trucks in France.

Herbert S. Stone, who put aside his duties as manager of a hotel in Northfield, Mass., to work as a Y. M. C. A. divisional secretary in the war zone and who has returned to America, tells of the picture system. Each truck of the fleet he worked with, he says, had a simple picture assigned it, painted on both sides and the tailboard.

STEEL MILLS NEAR A RECORD OUTPUT

Production Increasing Steadily as Factories Receive Greater Supplies of Coke.

NO CHANCE FOR OUTSIDERS

Commercial Users Are Sidetracked by Mill Owners, Who Are Eager to Fulfill War Orders.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, May 11.—Production of pig iron and steel continues to increase steadily, and it will take but a few weeks for a record rate to be reached. Production of pig iron in April, as shown by reports recently published, was at a rate of 40,400,000 gross tons a year, the best rate in eleven months, and showing a substantial gain over the average rate in either 1917 or 1916. The rate at the end of April was well above the average rate during the month, and this month there has been a further increase.

The increased production of pig iron is due, of course, to increased supplies of coke. At the present time the blast furnaces are operating very advantageously, and further increases in total production will come chiefly through the blowing in of furnaces that have been altogether idle for months. In the last week the Carnegie Steel Company blew in two additional furnaces, giving it fifty-three furnaces in operation out of a total of fifty-nine. The company's pig iron production is between 85 and 90 per cent. of capacity, while in the Pittsburgh district alone it is operating at practically 100 per cent.

Pig iron production as a whole is now at the rate of fully 42,000,000 tons a year. Capacity lately has been estimated at 43,000,000 tons, as against about 39,000,000 tons at the beginning of 1916, but it is now possible that the furnaces will show they actually can produce more than 43,000,000 tons a year. While the report of steel ingot production in April is not yet published, it is known that there was a very considerable increase over the March showing, which indicated a rate of about 42,000,000 tons a year. It is quite possible that steel ingot production is now at the rate of more than 44,000,000 tons a year, perhaps 45,000,000. The output would be still greater but for a scarcity of scrap.

Coming on the heels of the arrangement whereby each steel mill is to ship the maximum possible tonnage of steel against war orders on behalf of the Government and its allies, the increase in the production of steel is of particular interest to the ordinary commercial consumer, because the extra production cannot all go to the filling of war orders, since some of the departments having war orders already were fully supplied with raw steel. Even in the case of the so-called commercial steel, however, the mills are, at the behest of the Government, distributing such steel as is available to those industries whose operations are of the greatest indirect benefit to the prosecution of the war, first place in that list being accorded to the oil industry and the agricultural implement industry.

No Delivery Promises.

The United States Steel Corporation's unfilled obligations decreased during April by 314,524 tons, this comparing with a decrease of 232,049 tons during March. The greater decrease in April was due chiefly to heavier shipments. Since the 1st the corporation's bookings have averaged about two-thirds of capacity. The bookings were made up chiefly of war orders, but there was a liberal sprinkling of some commercial orders. In most departments the practice is to book old customers with additional tonnages as their old orders are worked out. On these bookings there are absolutely no delivery promises.

Iron and steel exports in March, as officially reported by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, amounted to 382,000 gross tons, against 440,000 tons in February and 607,000 tons in March, 1917. In recent months, however, these official figures have not been indicative of the amount of iron and steel actually leaving the country, because vessels owned or chartered by the Government do not clear through the regular channels, and their cargoes, even though not owned by the Government, do not get into the regular export figures.

Practically none of the large tonnage sent abroad for the American railroad and other operations in France will ever figure in the export statistics. Furthermore, General Pershing has proved himself a remarkable borrower of steel, and the steel in repayment probably will not appear in the statistics. Recently it was announced that the General had borrowed 750,000 tons of steel from the French and British, and expected the Washington authorities to repay the loan as soon as possible. Since then he has announced the borrowing of steel equivalent to 500,000 tons more, making 1,250,000 tons in all.

A wide divergence between the percentage rates at which blast furnaces and steel mills are operating has appeared this week. A fair estimate would be 85 per cent. of capacity for the mills and the pig iron capacity about 90 per cent. The difference of 5 to 10 per cent. comes from the scarcity of scrap, as stated above, a condition about which all the mills are complaining.

There are several plants at which the Bessemer capacity exceeds the open hearth, and as the latter gets the scrap resulting from rolling both classes of steel there is a good supply. The detached open-hearth plants, with no Bessemer steel departments at all, are shortest of scrap, the Carnegie Steel Company being in the last named category. Offerings by scrap dealers this week have been light, despite the fact that the 8½ per cent. commission, for which the dealers contended so long, has been allowed.

Must Have Credentials to Buy.

While the new order of Government priority prevents the mills from making delivery promises to customers, it does not preclude their making sales. In many cases, as a matter of form, the orders are entered as of the second quarter, since it is only for this quarter that prices are fixed. The chance buyer of steel who has no regular mill connection, finds it practically impossible to buy any steel, unless he has the necessary Government credentials. Such tonnage, however, is very small compared with the tonnage that moves regularly between mills and customers whom they have on their books right along, and whose requirements do not vary greatly.

In the sheet department a 50 per cent. shipment for war purposes out of the whole capacity of the mills is a fair estimate. Some mills are operating at only 50 per cent., and a few are averaging above 75 per cent., making the general average for the whole industry in the neighborhood of 65 per cent., so that there is about 15 per cent. of capacity left for purely commercial uses of sheet steel. In a few isolated cases some of the Government shipments are diverted to semi-commercial uses, because of their relation to war orders, the Government sometimes setting aside sheets for a specific purpose.

Tinplate production in April was approximately the same as in March, both months being fairly good, while January and February were poor. The four months together do not make up the average desired or expected, as more than 36,000,000 boxes was expected for this year, and the monthly average thus far has been well under 3,000,000 boxes. The mills have been trying to reach an average of 3,250,000 boxes, but they were unable to do so in April, and from now on will have greater difficulty in operating at high pressure owing to the spells of warm weather, which will interfere with full production. Close to 95 per cent. of the mills are regularly in operation, the chief interruptions being due to a shortage of steel.

Coke trade conditions are taking on a more promising aspect. Even if coke is not leaving the Connellsville region in materially increased volume it is getting through to the furnaces with greater dispatch and regularity, and there is much less uneasiness among consumers over the certainty of maintaining a supply than there was some weeks ago. Records of Eastern and river shipments show the former to have been 42,058 tons last week, compared with 45,990 tons the preceding week, and by river 16,120 tons, as against 17,620 tons for the previous week. The aggregate movement from the region is believed to have been a trifle less than that of the preceding week, or about 305,000 tons. Production was affected last week in the Connellsville region by reason of a religious holiday by the foreign element.

More Money Than They Need.

One of the big shipbuilding corporations is wrestling with the problem of Monday. On their present wage scale many of its employes are earning more money on a five-day week than they ever did before in six. Consequently, although they do not quit any earlier, when they have quit they are reluctant to begin again. On repeated Mondays they have been unable to muster more than 60 per cent. of the yard working force. The remaining 40 per cent. have so far proved impervious to persuasion and appeal, but efforts are making to get them to invest in war savings stamps and Liberty bonds, and put in a full week to keep up their payments.

The Cotton Crop Outlook.

A prominent spot cotton dealer who, while not actively interested in the futures market, is considered temperamentally bullish by his friends, has been predicting recently that there will be the biggest abundoned acreage in the cotton belt this year that has ever been seen. He bases his opinion on reports of the great and increasing labor scarcity in the South, and the indication that, with the great increases demanded for the army, practically every farm hand will probably be in khaki by cotton-picking time. His friends do not take his gloomy prognostications so seriously, with prices going down, as they did when he could point to prices going skyward a month or so ago.

LIBERTY LOAN DRIVE AIDS STOCK MARKET

One of Several Features Contributing to Noteworthy Advance of Last Week.

CROP REPORT ALSO HELPS

Clearer Realization That Industry Will Be Fully Employed This Year on War Work.

The advance in the stock market last week is worthy of notice as an expression of investment and speculative feeling over a combination of favorable developments. While the Street gossipped during the upturn of Monday and Tuesday about the effective work of "pools" in certain issues, particularly members of the steel group, the buying later became sufficiently widespread to show that more important factors were at work in the market than the operations of limited groups of operators. The two sessions whose turnovers were well in excess of 1,000,000 shares each proved that. The best opinion obtainable on economic matters as related to security prices was to the effect that the expansion of purchases was stimulated by four or five significant developments.

The first was the successful conclusion of the Third Liberty Loan campaign, not in regard to the disposal of $4,000,000,000 bonds so much as the fact that the people had participated in the subscriptions to a greater degree than in the preceding flotations. Next came the Government report on the condition of the growing crops, which indicated a possible yield of wheat this year greater than the country had ever produced before. Particular emphasis on the wheat situation lay in the chance that if the nation actually produced 1,000,000,000 bushels, and Canada lived up to predictions of a yield close to 500,000,000 bushels, the needs of the allied countries could be comfortably cared for.

Big Improvement in Steel.

A third influence was the clearer realization that industry is likely to be fully employed this year in lines centred on the conduct of the war, shipbuilding, mining, railroad equipment, and other departments of business. The steel companies have reported a substantial improvement in production and deliveries since the Spring weather came along, and the feature of the week's news, which reached into numerous other industries and stimulated buying of particular stocks and bonds, was the proof that the setback of last Winter had been followed by rapidly expanding earnings with the better weather.

The war situation on the western front and at sea was believed to be satisfactory, and had a part in persuading many speculators to buy stocks. The bullish habitues of brokerage offices laid stress on the belief that brokers' loans were at a low level, indicating that in recent months many stocks had been sold by Wall Street and absorbed by investors outside, thereby reducing the floating supply. Inquiries among brokers and bankers as well showed a general belief that all of these constructive forces had animated the market.

Result of Week's Dealings.

The result of the week's dealings in case of many prominent stocks is displayed in this table:

Active Buying of Steel.

On the first of the million-share days, Steel common accounted for 30 per cent. of the full turnover and for about 20 per cent. of the aggregate business on the second day. The discussion of the source of the buying of Steel, as heard on the Stock Exchange floor, indicated that houses with branch offices in the Middle West and Southwest were unusually active, while brokerage firms reputed to handle speculative accounts for wealthy manufacturers, mining and oil men, took Steel by the thousands of shares. The other steel stocks and several equipment issues were in large demand all the way along, especially Baldwin Locomotive, Crucible Steel, Lackawanna, and Republic Iron and Steel.

The steel group naturally was influenced by the progress of the leading member. Next in significance, perhaps, was the advance of numerous railroad stocks whose course had been uncertain ever since the Government became the temporary operator of the lines. A development which affected them was the indication in Washington news that a substantial freight rate increase would be permitted before long, as a necessary offsetting factor to the rising cost of maintenance and operation. Reading's advance of 6⅝ points stood out more prominently than the increases in other directions, but Union Pacific was not far behind, and the gains of between 2 and 4 points of St. Paul, Delaware & Hudson, New York Central and others reflected an improvement of sentiment toward the rail situation as a whole.

Railroad bonds were also active and moved into higher ground, as a whole, than at any other time this year. Reflecting investments, the demand and consequent forward movement of New York City and other municipal bonds attracted favorable attention in banking circles.

Southern Spot Cotton Markets.

The stubbornness with which farmers are holding on to the remainder of their cotton holdings, particularly in the eastern part of the belt, is exemplified in the spot quotations. The quotation has been "pegged" at Savannah at 32.50c for more than a week, and in all that time not a single bale of cotton has been sold through that market. On the other hand, a very fair business has been done at New Orleans and Little Rock and Galveston around 29 and 30 cents. Some 3,000 bales of cotton changed hands in those three markets yesterday at those prices.

COMMODITIES MARKETS.

WHEAT.

There were no new developments of importance in connection with either the movement of old wheat or in regard to the new crop outlook. Receipts at primary points were very moderate, and apparently the efforts to dislodge holdings in the country are not meeting with much success. Weather conditions were favorable and everything is progressing satisfactorily as far as the new crop is concerned.

RYE.

The local rye market was quiet and unchanged at $2.86 cost and freight New York. Minneapolis was 3c lower at $2.30.

CORN.

The corn market was weak throughout the session, the July position in Chicago closing with net losses of 2c per bushel. Receipts at primary points were moderate, but exporters are not buying, and it is thought more than probable that farmers will sell more freely as soon as the planting season is finished. In the local cash market Kiln-dried No. 3 yellow was quoted at $1.60; No. 4 yellow, $1.50, cost and freight New York.

July	1.44⅞	1.42⅝	1.43¼	1.45⅝	1.48⅛

OATS.

The oats market broke 1¼c to 2c a bushel, with the May position showing the greatest weakness. The decline was attributed to a growing belief that there is likely to be more oats tendered on May contract. The weather was favorable for the new crop and export buyers were not in evidence. The local cash market was weak; natural quoted at 83 to 85c and clipped white 85@86c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was under pressure and prices were lower throughout the list owing to a decline of 5 to 10 points in the hog market and in sympathy with the weakness in grain. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 15,000; estimated for Monday, 42,000, and for next week, 160,000; Kansas City received 700 and Omaha 6,800.

COFFEE.

The market for coffee futures opened with a steady undertone, first prices being unchanged to an advance of 2 points, but the market was a very narrow one and easily influenced by orders either way. Late in the day a couple of September selling orders appeared and prices reacted a couple of points or so from initial figures, the close being net unchanged to a decline of 1 point. SUGAR.

In refined sugar the general demand is fair, although orders are more or less restricted. Refiners are experiencing some delay in shipments, being unable to secure sufficient quantity of barrels and bags in which to pack sugar. A cable from Havana states that six centrals have stopped grinding having harvested their crops, leaving 175 mills now in operation. The weather is reported as being unsettled in some parts of the island. The International Sugar Committee has made quite heavy purchases of raw sugar lately, but no purchases were reported on Saturday.

Forest Hills Gardens

FIFTEEN MINUTES FROM PENN. STATION

Dignified in their substantial combination of rich, dark brick and stucco, three new detached houses of eight rooms and three baths have been completed for sale. Located on a quiet residential street, they have an unusual charm of appearance which makes them notable even in the Gardens. On account of the shortage of housing facilities rents have increased and will continue to rise. Any thoughtful person will realize that it is cheaper now to own a home that can be purchased on a small cash investment, paying the balance as rent. The supply of new houses is limited and the future cost of building will be excessive.

The environment is pleasanter than in Manhattan.
The floor space is cheaper than living in Manhattan.
The accessibility to the business, shopping and theatre districts is equal to living in Manhattan.
The frequency of electric trains, with a running schedule of fifteen minutes, discourages the idea of commuting.

DOINGS AND SAYINGS IN THE REAL ESTATE WORLD

REVIEW OF REAL ESTATE MARKET

Business Strengthened by Well-Maintained Demand for Private Dwellings.

COMMENT AND OPINION

Important Bills Signed by Governor —A New Chain of Terminal Hotels.

Private houses, principally in the Lenox Hill district, where there has been a well-defined buying movement under way, figured prominently in last week's business. The demand concerned itself also with commercial properties in the downtown section, not a new development, but nevertheless encouraging in that the buyers of these buildings have been merchants who are backing up their faith in the real estate of their locality by placing their capital in it.

Operators Still Active.

Speculative interest in improved properties promises to be a prominent element in the market. Washington Heights apartment houses and downtown commercial buildings attracting the capital of operators.

New Legislation.

The Burlingame-Youker (Torrens) bill, supported by the Mayor's Committee on Taxation, the Torrens Title League, and the recording officers of the five counties, has been signed by the Governor and brings to a conclusion one of the most strenuously contested and interesting legislative struggles in New York real estate history.

In the opinion of the supporters of the bill, it will simplify the system of title registration. It is claimed that the new system will permit the public to have titles examined more cheaply and registered by the Supreme Court for less expense than the cost of a title company examination, and that expensive and antiquated methods of title examinations, continuations, and re-examinations in use will be abolished.

Queens Borough real estate owners will be interested in the enactment into law of Senator Farrenkopf's bill, authorizing the New York City Board of Estimate to construct a boulevard across Jamaica Bay, under plans approved by the Secretary of War. Governor Whitman has just signed this bill, which seeks to shorten by ten miles the distance between New York City and the fort at Rockaway Point. The cost of the improvement, exclusive of bridges, may be assessed in whole or in part upon benefited property owners.

The New Hotel Chain.

The sales of the Belmont and Murray Hill Hotels, resulting in ons of the largest hotel mergers in the city, take rank among the leading transactions of the year. On account of the size of the transactions, the central location of the properties, and the general interest which attaches to such well known structures, the deals assumed general rather than real estate significance.

It is interesting to nots that nnder the new arrangement the chain of hotels surrounding the Grand Central Terminal passes into a single control, so that the traveler via the Terminal, no matter which way he turns, reaches a hotel in the allied group, consisting of the Commodore, the Biltmore, ths Manhattan, the Belmont, and the Murray Hill.

The Recent Board of Appeals Resolution.

The bulletin of the Board of Standards and Appeals publishes in its latest issue a rather lengthy report of the resolution adopted by the Board of Appeals recently, which permits Lord Astor to go ahead, under certain structural conditions, with the construction of a business building on the west side of Madison Avenue, (Nos. 200 to 214,) between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, and on land at 12 to 18 East Thirty-sixth Street and 11 to 17 East Thirty-fifth Street, the entire sits improved at present with dwellings. The avenue frontage is restricted by ths zoning law against bnsiness, the side streets at this point are not.

The resolntion, which was adopted unanimously, reads in part as follows:

"Whereas, In the opinion of the Board of Appeals thers are unnecessary hardships in the way of carrying out ths strict letter of the provisions of this building zone resolution in this specific case; and appropriate conditions can be imposed upon the extension of the building into the residence district so as to properly safeguard the more restricted district; and the general purpose and intent of ths building zone resolution, to promote the general welfars and do substantial justice both to the property owners and to the public interest, can best be served by permitting such extension;

"Resolved, That the appeal be and it hereby is granted, on condition that the building shall conform in appearance, except as to the parapet wall, with the water-color perspective submitted by the appellant; that ths building shall not exceed seven stories nor 112 feet in total height; that the three façades shall be faced, uniformly, with either limestone or marble; that there shall be but one entrance to the building on the Madison Avenue front; that the balcony shown over the second story shall be constructed of matsrial uniform with the rest of the façads; that the parapet wall above the main cornice of the building shall be designed to harmonize with the architecture of ths three façades; and that during the occupancy of said building only the windows of the first story shall be used as show windows."

Increased Cost of Labor.

According to the Bureau of Statistics and Information of the New York State Industrial Commission the month of March, 1918, showed the highest average weekly earning for individual workar which has been reported during ths past four years. This average was $18.71 per week and was an increase of $1.05 over the month of February. The corresponding averages for March, 1917, 1916, and 1915, were, respectively, $15.79, $13.96, and $12.65.

Improving Coal Deliveries.

The coal situation, according to the New York Building Managers' Association, looks a little brighter now that the Government has let contracts for freight and coal cars. Fifty thousand coal cars alone have been ordered, deliveries of which are to begin July 1. There will also be built fifty wooden coal barges and twenty-five large tugs to assist in handling the coal business.

ELEVEN RECOMMENDATIONS

Submitted by Mayor's Committee to Relieve Realty.

Elsven important recommsndations designed to alleviate the present burden on real estate through the provision of additional sources of revenue and the institution of far-reaching reforms in the administratien of the City Government have been prepared by the Subcommittee on Additional Sources of Revenue of the Meyor's Committee on Taxation and the Investigation of Mortgage Loans, Nathan Hirsch Chairman.

These recommsndations were decided upon as the result of a careful study end were adopted at a recent meeting held at the call of Bryan L. Kennelly, who is Chairman of the sub-committee. The other members include Charles Partridge, William C. Bergen, George Adrian, and William Randolph Hearst.

The proposed reforms were submitted to the Mayor purely as recommsndations, with the suggestion that public hearings be held for gensral discussion on each specific recommendation at the earliest possible time.

The following recommendations were submitted to the Mayor:

First—That immediate steps be taken to abolish the present Court House Board; that instead of the erection of a Court House on the expensive site which has been purchased, two stories be added to the present Court House in City Hall Park, the interior modernized and the exterior of the building sandblasted, and a new building be erected on the site of the present old brownstone structure used by ths City Court to conform architecturally with ths present Court House.

Second—That all unused property of the city be sold if possible; if this is not possible at this time that the ground be rented under long-term leases on a basis whereby taxes are to be paid by the lessee in addition to the rental. The new Court House site would be available for this purpose inasmuch as there is no sales market for the property at ths present time. This land should be rented on ten or twenty-one ysar lease terms, with the privilege extended to the tenant of buying the property at a stipulated price at any time during the term.

Third—That all profsssional and business men gaining their livelihood in New York City should be licensed and a moderate yearly license fee imposed.

Fourth—That all city dock rentals be investigated by a special committee appointed by the Mayor, and that all leases or rights of the city with regard to water-front privileges be sold at public auction or through sealed bids.

Fifth—That there be a consolidation of all city departments affecting real estate; that the Fire Prevention and Tenement House Departments be merged with the Building Department, the committee feeling that under present conditions the Building Department is capable of attending to all the work now being done by the Fire Prevention and Tensment House Department.

Sixth—That the Building Dspartment and Architectural Staff of the Board of Education be transferred to the supervision of the Building Department, provision being made, however, for the appointment of an inspector representing the Board of Education to see that all contracts and plans are properly carried out.

Seventh—That push carts be removed from the streets of New York generally or that they be grouped in certain localities so as not to interfere with the rentability of stores in the neighborhoods where they have been congregating.

Eighth—That as a substitute for a personal tax, which heretofore has not been satisfactorily collected, the following income tax be imposed:

One-quarter of 1 per cent. on incomes of married persons amounting to $1,200 or more.

One-half of 1 per cent. on incomes of unmarried persons amountiag to $1,200 or more.

One per cent. on incomes of persons amounting to $10,000 or more.

Two per cent. on incomes of persons amounting to $20,000 or more.

Ninth—That a yearly license fee be collected on all horse and motor trucks and automobles, the amount of fees to be determined by the wsight of these vehicles.

Tenth—That all city employes be residents of the City of New York.

Eleventh—That all church properties and real estate belonging to charitable institutions not used by them for church or charitable purposes be liable for taxation.

FEWER BUILDINGS GOING UP.

Decrease General Throughout the State During March.

A report by the New York State Industrial Commission says that the building departments of the ten first and second class cities of the State show that during March every one of them, except Yonkers, issued fewer permits for building construction than for the corresponding month of 1917.

"The decrease," the report continued, "in the estimated cost of work to be done was 60 per cent. of all of ths cities combined, with Schenectady as the lowest at 15 per cent. less, and Binghamton as highest at 73 per cent. less.

"New York City reported a decrease of 63 per cent., to which each borough contributed. On the other hand, there was a 24 per cent. increase for March, 1918, as compared with February, 1918. Albany was the only city which showed a loss for that period. Although New York City increased by 21 per cent from February to March, Manhattan Borough reported a slump of 42 per cent."

Queens Borough Building.

Plans have been filed in Queens by the Sage Foundation Homes Company for a $20,000 one-story brick garage to be erected on the seuth side of Archway Place, 125 feet east of Continental Avenne, Forest Hills Gardens; by the Keiner-Williams Stamping Company, for a $20,000 office and garage, to be srected on ths west sids of Vine Street 275 feet north of Ridgewood Aveaue, Richmond Hill; by the F. L. Bradbnry Co., for a $12,000 garage on the west sids of Seventh Avenue, 142 feet north of Washington Avenue, Long Island City, and by the Dukeshire Steel and Forge Company for a $15,000 foundry to be erected on the west side of Creek Street, 75 feet north of Grand Street, Maspeth.

State Island Auction.

J. Sterling Drake, will offer at auction on Wednesday, May 15, 346 lots at Giffords-by-the-Sea, on the south shore of Staten Island. The sale will begin at 2 o'clock, and will be continued daily until all the lots are sold.

MOVEMENT BEGUN TO OBTAIN INCOME FROM UNPRODUCTIVE COURT HOUSE SITE

Temporary Utilization of Large Plot Urged in Resolution of Board of Aldermen and in Report of Mayor's Committee on Taxation—Property Offered to Government for Military Use.

Both the Board of Aldermen and the Mayor's Committee on Taxation took action last week with reference to the Court House site at Lafayette, Leonard, Baxter, Park, Dusne and Pearl Streets and City Hall Park, in the initiation of a movement to obtain some income return to the city from the property.

Aldermaa C. A. Haubert's resolution urging ths Court House Board to temporarily utilize the site on the most advantageous terms possibls, was referred to the Committee on General Welfare of the Board of Aldermen.

In a report submitted to the Mayor his Committee on Taxation urged the abolishment of the Court House Board and the abandonmeat of the entire new Court House project, suggesting, also, in ths meantime, that ths land be leased under the most desirable terms.

Costs City $500,000 a Year.

Neither of the two moves was entirely unexpected. Ever since it became apparent that the building of the Court House would be held in indefinite abeyance, while the idle sits was costing ths city about $500,000 a year, sentiment was beginning to crystallize along the lines defined by the Board of Aldermen resolution and the Mayor's Committee.

A strong effort was made during the past session of the Legislature to transfer the power of the Court House Board to the Board of Estimate, but the bill failed to pass. Now that no action can be expected from Albany for another year, an effort will bs made to obtain as much income as possible from the unproductive part of the site to offset ths hugo overcharge now piling up against the property, amounting to a dead loss.

A new phase of the situation which developed yesterday is the possibility that the United States Govsrnment may occupy the site for a concentration camp.

Board of Aldermen Resolution.

The resolution introduced in the Board of Aldermen reads as follows:

"Whereas, the City of New York is ths owner of certain premises located on Lafayette, Leonard, Baxter, Park, Duans and Pearl Streets and City Hall Place, in the Borough of Manhattan, City of New York, which were purchased for the purpose of having erected thereon a new County Court House for New York County; and

"Whereas, the city has been the owasr of a portion of said premises since March 1, 1913, and the remaining portion since May 6, 1915, and since acquisition thereof nothing has been done to improve said premises, same being vacant and unemployed, bringing no income to the city, but on the contrary have been the source of tremendous expense, and incidentally by reason of the present condition of the premises are an eyesore in a locality where land is extremely desirable and valuable; and

"Whereas, The city paid for said premises the sum of $12,031,562.36 for which amount up to Dec. 31, 1917, corporate stock was allotted; and

"Whereas, The estimated annual interest at 4 per cent. on said sum amounts to $481,262.49, and the estimated taxes lost through city ownership of the premises amounts to $600,000; and

"Whercas, Tbat inasmuch as the proposed new Court Hoass will not be erected for many ycars to come, owing to the city's impoverished financial condition, considering the enormity of the interest bearing charges and taxes lost per annum, which together amount to about $500,000, by reason of ths city ownership of said site, both of which have to be paid and stood for by the taxpayers of the City of New York, and furtbcr considering the high tax rate for the ensuing year, therefore, be it

"Rcsolved, By the Board of Aldermen of the City of New York:

"1. That the Court House Board of the City of New York be and it hereby is respectfully requested to take any and all necessary and proper measures, as it may deem proper and advantageous to the people of the city, not in conflict or inconsistcat with aay legislative, judicial or othcr act relating to ths uss of said sits, either to improve said sits for the purpose of temporarily housing some of the city departments, boards, commissions, or other municipal bodies, to house which large sums of rent are now being paid by the city to private owners, or to lease said site or parts thereof to private parties for adequate reat, upon proper terms and for periods which will not interfere with the origiaal purpose for obtaining said site, or to take such other steps or measures in the matter which will produce reveaue to the city and thereby assist in reducing the enormous carrying charges of the premises in question.

"2. That the said Court Houss Board be and it hereby is respectfully requested to proceed with all convenient speed in ths aforesaid matter, for the purpose of alleviating to some extent, if possible, the financial burden of the taxpayers of the City of New York, and also, to advise the Board of Aldermen of its contemplated action in the matter."

Discusses the Resolution.

Alderman Haubert in discussing the resolution said:

"The present city administration is pledged to economy aad a reduction of the tax rate. The tax rate for the current year is 2.40, the highest the city has experienced since consolidation, and while the present administration is not responsible therefor, still strict economy is absolutely necessary and must be practiced fer the next three years at least in order to enable the city to recover its financial strength, and this is the task of the present executive city officials; it is for them to devise waye aad means whereby revenue will be produced and expenses curtailed and thus assist and protect the already overburdened taxpayer.

"Very few people of the city are aware of the fact that the city owns a site as set forth in my resolution for the purpose of having erected thereon a new County Court House, and which, when completed, will cost as estimated, about $20,000,000, which in my opinion is altogether too much, as thers is no reasonable occasion for so costly an edifice to house our courts. The site in question has cost the people of the City of New York $12,031,562.36, and was acquired in March, 1915, since which time it has cost the people the sum of $481,262.49 annually to pay the interest charges on the corporate stock bonds issued to pay for the site and other expenses; the city has lost about $600,000 in taxes by reason of city ownership of the site, and np to date it has cost the people upward of $2,000,000 to carry the property which is vacant and not put to any use whatever. This is too much of a financial burden for the people to carry and is extravagance of ths worst type and should bs brought to an immediate stop.

"Mayor Hylan should get in immsdiate touch with the Court House Board, which has complete jurisdiction in the matter, and endeavor to have it put the property to some use for reveaue which will tend to reduce the amount of the interest-bearing charges, at least, either by building soms temporary structures to house city departments or by leasing the site for adequate rent. If the United States Government desires to nse the site for military or other purposes then let it be so, but to permit it to remain idle and nonrevenue producing is almost criminal in these trying times when every one is obliged to save and struggle.

"In fact, the city should dispose of all its real estate holdings which are nonrevenue producing and idle, so that at least taxes can be collected from the property, because taxpayers are now paying tremendous amounts for taxes and are necessarily obliged to raise rents and thus strike the rent payers, who are likewise suffering from the high cost of living. Something should be done with the Court House site and the Court House Board is the one to do it and do it quickly. Millions are going out and nothing coming in. The old Court House will do for a while, as it has done for many years, and no one will be injured thereby."

Statement from Court House Board.

When ths attention of L. Laflin Kellogg, Chairman of the Court House Board, was called to the resolution before the Committee on General Welfare of the Board of Aldermen, he said: "While the precise question has not been taken up before the Court House Board, I do not hesitate to say that the resolution is quite in accord with the previous action of our board.

"Under the original acts of the Legislature, and the acts amendatory thereof, the following work has been accomplished:

"First—The land and buildings on the sits chosen have been condemned by the city and paid for.

"Second—Most of the buildings on the site have been razed.

"Third—An architect and plans have been chosen by competition.

"Fourth—The contract, plans, and specifications have been drawn and approved by the Corporation Counsel.

"Fifth—The contract, plans, and specifications have been approved by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, by the Court House Board, by a majority of the Justices of the Supreme Court, and by the Art Commission.

"Prior to April 10, 1917, the Board of Estimate and Apportionment by a resolution of that board authorized a tentative appropriation of $7,500,000.

"Finding that the prices of materials and labor had, by reason of war conditions, rendered it impracticable to call for bids at that time, ths Court House Board on April 10, 1917, adopted the following resolution notifying the Board of Estimate and Apportionment that the Commissioners waived all compensation from that time until it should be advisable to erect the building, and that ths Board of Estimate and Apportionment was at liberty to nse the site for war purposes:

"'Resolved, Tbat in view of the conditions brought about by the entry of the United States into war, it is the opinion of the Court House Board that it is inadvisable at this time to invite bids for the construction of the nsw Court House; and

"'Resolved, That the Court House Board tenders to the Mayor and to public authorities of the city, for purposes of defense or other military purposes for the present, the site purchased by the city for the new Court House, including the Hallenbeck Building, now vacant, or any other buildings that may become vacant upon the said site; and

"'Resolved, That the members of this board tender to the Mayor and public nuthorities of the city their services and the services of their employes and the use of the offices of the Court House Board for such use and services as may be appropriate without detriment to the intsrest or requirements of ths Court House Board; and

"'Resolved, That the members of the Court House Board hereby agree to accept no compensation for further services from this date and until such time as it is decided to take up again the erection of the new Court House.'

"It is my understanding that the offer contained in this resolution was accepted by the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, and that one of the officers of ths United States Army is now considering the erection of buildings to be used for war purposes.

"The buildings now on the site which have not been razed are furnishing a rental saving to the city amounting altogether to about $200,000.

"It thus appears that the policy of the board has been and probably will be to reduce the expenses of the board to the lowest minimum, now $7,500 per year, and to obtain all the rental for the property in the interim until the building of the Court House can be commenced.

"As far as I am concerned I fully approve of the proposed action of the Board of Aldermen and the resolution. The Court House Board so far has only been too willing to comply with the requests of the public authorities for the housing and rental of the buildings upon the site in order, as much as possible, to meet the carrying charges of the property until the building of the Court House can be commenced."

HOW THE GOVERNMENT CONDUCTS ITS REALTY BUSINESS

By L. WARD PRINCE.

Washington in wartime reminds one of a comet with a tail that is constantly throwing off flying particles. These particles in time become cometa themselves. Departments and Bureaus of Departments are born over night. Last month the Shipping Board threw off the Housing Administration and today it is a thriving department in itself.

Over a remodeled garage on G Street N. W., Washington, Otto M. Eidlitz, a Manhattan builder and general contractor, holds forth with a staff of young and energetic experts in the realty field.

One of the strongest members of the staff is William S. Shannon, Manager of the Real Estate Division, who knows Washington and its ways like a book. Publicity is the watchword. If anybody has anything to say there will be plenty of opportunity before the Government invests any money.

Mr. Shannon's first move when he took charge was to summon to Washington all the officers of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, and to these men he outlined his system of appraisals. Two men were appointed from each State and five members of this board in each locality were appointed to work with him.

The National Board went on record by pledging itself to free and disinterested appraisal service from all its members as well as the direct assistants of its officers.

This is the buying scheme and it is practically graft-proof. When a request comes in to the bureau for purchase of real estate in any part of the country, it passes over ths desk of Mr. Eidlitz to Mr. Shannon, who has directly under his control a corps of field men with a chief in charge. If the conditions are found to justify Government action a conclusion is reached as to just what character of relief shall be given.

Let us take a concrete case for illustration. Suppose it develops that Pittsburgh needs 1,000 houses to aid some Government munition factory in the housing of its employes. The Pennsylvania field men report to their chief, who sends on a report to Mr. Shannon. Suppose they find that there are two sites available and suitable, one of thirty acres held at $500 per acre and another of forty acres held at $700 per acre.

The bureau sends to the Pennsylvania State agent nearest to Pittsburgh asking for an appraisal and he in turn sends it on to the local committee of five. A request is also sent to the Chamber of Commerce of Pittsburgh for an appointment of a committee of five members with the restriction that none of these men shall be in the real estate business.

Then a committee of five members from the Pittsburgh Rotary Club is selected and their appraisal is filed with the department. Lastly, the Mayor and possibly some other member of the political organization in power is called upon for an appraisal. So, it will appear that at least seventeen opinions of value are taken upon every piece of property considered by the Government.

No request is made to keep the matter secret, and sooner or later it is bound to get into the Pittsburgh newspapers, and the public press may be relied upon to bring out the arguments for and against each parcel considered.

Suppose it is decided that the thirty-acre parcel is to be taken. The price offered is usually a compromise of the figures of the seventeen men. If the offer made is accepted the matter is closed. If the owner does not accept, the Government's proposition is final. There is no dickering in the Bureau of Housing, no offers and counteroffers are allowed. We are at war, and speed is essential.

If the owner is unwilling the Government pays him 75 per cent. of its offer, and the owner is then free to present his claim for any amount which he deems proper compensation over and above the amount paid. His attention will be called to the fact that the Court of Claims is about to adjourn and is not likely to reconvene until the termination of the war.

It will also be shown to him that when ths war is over and his claim comes up for settlement his chances of prevailing against the Government with its backing of seventeen patriotic citizens are very small indeed. In most cases the Government is going to get what it wants without a lawsuit.

The bureau needs all the co-operation it can get and every local real-estate board in this country ought to hasten to put itself on record, offering to do everything in its power to aid ths Government in procuring necessary sites at reasonable prices. Their services should be rendered free of charge. Surely this is little enough to ask from the real estate profession.

The duties of the Housing Administration are twofold. To buy land and build. In nearly every case where the Government builds directly the housing will be of a temporary character and the cost will have to be written off at the end of hostilities as a war expense. Ten million dollars is being appropriated by Congress for the housing of Government employes in the District of Columbia alone. Fifty million dollars is being appropriated to relieve housing in the munition centres outside of shipbuilding.

A large proportion of this construction will be temporary, but when the need is found to be permanent, and time permits, permanent housing will be done. Lawrence Veiller, Secretary of the National Housing Association, and one of the leading authorities in this country on industrial housing, has submitted a set of rules governing such work and upon compliance with certain other fixed rules loans will be made on such houses up to 80 per cent. of cost amortized over a period of fifteen years at 4 per cent. interest per annum.

Rules governing the sale, reatal and management of such properties will be made a condition precedent to such loans. Only a small percentage of the cost under this plan need be written off as a cost of war, and it is not unlikely that Government aid of this sort will continue after ths war. Nearly every country in the world has extended similar credit to industrial workers and there is no reason why we should not continue this practice. Fifty million dollars is but a drop in the bucket. England has spent almost a billion dollars already and her problem is not yst solved, but we have made a start in the right direction.

Some wonderful benefits are going to accrue to the workingman of this country through war housing. Better and cheaper homes, more light and ventilation and a greater number of conveniences. The speculative builder with his makeshift methods must go. The numerous middlemen's profits will be saved to the home owner. Easy terms of payment will make purchasing simple. We have the chance of a lifetime now to do what we could not have done in a decade or more of peace.

Few people realize that one of the biggest and finest problems of the war is up to Mr. Eidlitz and his coterie of assistants. This delay in passing the necessary legislation is making the problem still more difficult, but the housing administration has not been idle and when the word comes to speed up this department will be ready.

The Housing Department's activities are not confined to housing for munition workers alone. Another very important branch is the buying and leasing of necessary land and buildings for the army and navy. In most cases the management of such properties will undoubtedly pass from the housing bureau as soon as they are in use by the respective departments. In all other cases the management will remain in the housing bureau.

THE TORRENS AMENDMENTS

The Youker bill amending the Torrens land title registration law was signed by Governor Whitman last week and its provisions go into effect at once.

With the signed bill the Governor filed the following memorandum: "At a hearing which I held upon this bill two of the principal arguments advanced against the bill were: First, that certain of its features were unconstitutional; and, second, that the official examiners of title were to be appointed by the Registrars or County Clerks instead of by order of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

"I have referred the bill to the Attorney General for his opinion on the constitutional questions, and he advises me:

"'Altogether, in my opinion, there is sufficient notice and hearing provided by the bill to constitute due process of law; at least the court, and not myself, where a minimum of notice is being approached, should take the burden of deciding just the length of notice and nature of notice which divides adequate and reasonable notice from inadequate notice.'

"In regard to the second objection: The official examiners of title are to be appointed by the Registrars or County Clerks after they have been admitted as such according to the rules prescribed by the Court of Appeals; and if the Court of Appeals deems it advisable it can require that the official examiners be appointed after obtaining an order from the Appellate Division showing their qualifications.

"The appointment of official examiners by the Registrars or County Clerks is for the purpose of having a disinterested official examiner of titles, and not one retained by one of the parties.

"It is urged by those favoring the bill that the present system of registering land titles is cumbersome, and, although this bill may contain some objectionable features, it will, if it is held constitutional by the Court of Appeals, give great relief to the owners of real estate.

"For these reasons the bill is approved."

Walter Fairchild, Secretary of the Torrens Title League, said yesterday:

"The matter of greatest importance for which the fight of the last four years has been made is accomplished by the new law—that is, a simple, inexpensive procedure is provided.

"The chief cause of failure of the New York law in the past has been the high cost of the initial proceeding and the length of time required for the first registration.

"Under the new law an ordinary title can be registered in three or four weeks' time, so that a person holding a thirty-day contract to purchase land may have his title registered.

"The new law especially provides that the holder of a contract may apply to register and have ths title certificate issued directly in the name of the purchaser when the proceedings are completed and the deed delivered.

"The Register's office is the official medium by which most of the work of registering titles is done.

"As soon as the owner files his application the title is examined by the examiner in the Register's office and the Registrar sends out all of the notices required under the statute.

"The fees and expenses must be paid by the petitioner. These fees are in proportion to the value on the property. The examiner's fee is $10, plus one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the assessed value of the property, which must be paid in advance to ths Registrar.

"When the proceedings are complete an assurance premium of one-tenth of 1 per cent. on the assessed value of the land must be paid to the Registrar, together with a fee of $5 for the certificate of title.

"The expense of publication and of sending out the notices will be between $20 and $30.

"Altogether the fees for a $10,000 property would be about $51, exclusive of the survey, which must be furnished by the applicant. For a $50,000 property the fees would be about $131.

"These fees, of course, apply only to the first registration. Subsequent transfers are issued at a cost of $3.

"The Torrens Title League, of which J. Clarence Davies is President; John J. Hopper Treasurer, and Walter Fairchild Secretary, will continue its activities to popularize the law, and will give information to any one contemplating ths registration of a title."

LEXINGTON AVENUE SUBWAY

Commissioner Whitney Says Line May Be Opened in June.

Work is being pushed with all possible speed on the new Lexington Avenue subway, and, according to a statement made lest week by Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney to the Secretary of the Bronx Board of Trade, the line will be put in operation next month.

The opening of this line is of great importance, especially to the western section of the Bronx, for it will mean that the Jerome Avenue subway trains will go direct through to downtown points instead of to 149th Street only, as at present, and that the disgraceful "rush hour" conditions at the station at Mott Avenue and 149th Street will be eliminated. In addition, it should mean a considerable lightening of the "rush hour" traffic now carried by the Third and Second Avenue elevated lines because of the parallel routes traversed in the lower city.

The eastern branch of the new system will at first operate only to 138th Street, Third and Alexander Avenues, the service being extended in the late Summer or early Fall to the Hunts Point section. Eventually, the eastern branch will be operated to Pelham Bay Park, via Westchester Avenue, tapping the entire East Bronx area.

Steps that will tend to materially hasten the completion and bring nearer the operation of the "H" system are expected to be taken by the Public Service Commission, now that the Mayor has approved the Lockwood bill, passed by the 1918 State Legislature and transmitted to the Mayor by the Governor.

This bill, which was approved by the Bronx Board of Trade, and which is meant to give the Public Service Commission and the city supplementary powers over the dual subway system construction contracts, provides that the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate may relieve the contractors building the new subways from the burdens placed upon them by the high costs of labor and materials, and to do whatever is best to complete the work as speedily as possible.

That arrangements will be made with the present contractors to complete the work at cost, with the understanding that the contractors will forego all profits, is probable, because, it is believed, this will be ths cheapest and most expeditious way of getting the much-needed lines in operation.

After the bill was drawn it was carefully studied by ex-Judge William L. Ransom, Chief Counsel of the Public Service Commission, and by the Attorney General, and both expressed the opinion that it was constitutional. In a letter to the Mayor on April 23, Chairman Straus called especial attention to the constitutional aspects of this bill, and quoted from an opinion prepared by Judge Ransom to the effect thet the Legislature had the right to authorize the authorities to deal with emergency conditions, and to adopt ths course best designed to get essential work actually completed in war tims.

A statement by the commission said that the bill clearly and definitely provides that the commission and the Board of Estimate be clothed with power to meet any emergency for the speedy completion of the much-needed rapid transit lines.

Just what the additional cost of completing the lines will be is not known. In a letter to Theodore P. Shonts on March 27 the Mayor roughly estimated that the cost would be from $6,000,000 to $8,000,000 over the present contract prices.

Construction work to the value of $117,000,000 has been completed, and $45,000,000 worth of work on additional contracts totaling $60,000,000 is also finished. Altogether there is about $35,000,000 worth of work awaiting completion, and if the Mayor's estimate of the additional cost is accurate, it would mean an increase of about 35 per cent., which is considered reasonable.

NEW MORTGAGE FIELD.

Gilchrist Bill Legalizes Trust Investments on First Mortgages.

The Gilchrist bill which legalizes as trust investments first mortgage certificates, when the mortgages themselves cover unincumbered real property worth 50 per cent. more than the amount loaned thereon, was signed by the Governor lest week.

In the present condition of the investment market it has become difficult to finance the larger real estate operations, by reason of the fact that the number of investors and institutions able or willing to make large loans is very limited. During the continuance of the war and while Governmeat requirements are so great, it will become increasingly difficult to place large real estate mortgages.

The enactment of this new law creates the opportunity of dividing such mortgages into parts or shares that are legal investments for trust funds, thus considerably broadening the market for such mortgage certificates.

Trust funds may now be invested promptly in guaranteed mortgage certificates, in any amount, without the usual delays and loss of interest incident to finding single mortgages for funds awaiting investment.

Several of the title and mortgage companies of this city have already introduced mortgage certificates with their guarantee of the payment of principal and interest, so that they are well known to the investment public. The New York Title and Mortgage Company is issuing a pamphlet giving full tsxt of this new law.

LLOYD GEORGE'S JOY IN MEETING A CRISIS

Again and Again He Has Stood Up Against His Opponents and Has Emerged Victorious from the Fray

It is a dull month in David Lloyd George's life that brings him no crisis to face. If ever there was a man who glories in conflict, who eats trouble alive, it is he. It is the breath of his life; the flint that strikes sparks from his steel. There is only one thing more difficult to imagine than Lloyd George not in trouble, and that is Lloyd George not able to get out of it.

Once more he has been up to his neck in a crisis. Once more his opponents had marshaled their forces against him and he had leaped to the trumpet call of battle. Before last week Lloyd George hadn't been in a fight of the first magnitude since he stood up before the House of Commons last month and demanded conscription for Ireland, amid the frenzied howls of the Irish Nationalists. That was a month ago. It was high time for another crisis in his life; without it there was danger that Lloyd George might "go stale," as they say in football.

And the new crisis was a real one, of a kind to make the fighting British Premier positively gleeful. It was precipitated by the sensational letter of General Frederick Barton Maurice, formerly Chief Director of Military Operations at the British War Office, accusing the Premier of misinforming the country as to the military situation before the disaster to British arms on the western front last March. General Maurice, just before the date of his letter, had been relieved of his War Office post on account of his famous "Where is Blucher?" interview while the fighting about Ypres was at white heat. His statements were taken as a reflection on General Foch, Commander in Chief of the allied armies, and punishment was condign and prompt. But Maurice did not take his punishment lying down. He "came back" with his letter, and only a glance at it was needed for one to see that it carried the germ of a genuine Government crisis.

But what is a crisis to Lloyd George? His life has been largely made up of crises and he has weathered them all, including this latest one.

His political career before the war was one long fight. He was the best-hated man in England; to his foes he was the evil genius of the country. No epithets were too harsh for him, no steps to curb his growing power too stringent. But he met his foes with the joy of battle in his eye and laid them away one after the other. There was no stopping him.

The great war came. The English met the test with splendid valor. They marched to battle without flinching and died like men trying to stem the German tide surging toward Paris. Hats were off to them all over the world; there was no question in anybody's mind of the quality of the British soldier. But those behind them, the leaders of the British Government, the men whose task it was to see that the soldiers at the front did not die in vain, committed great mistakes. Ugly stories got abroad of incompetency and mismanagement in high places. People of opposing political beliefs drew closer and closer together under the impulse of the German peril. There was a call for the best man to face the crisis, the strongest man in the British Empire. Eyes turned more and more to Lloyd George.

At the outbreak of the war he was Chancellor of the Exchequer. In that post he had been cheerfully going about his task of meeting crises and vanquishing them. The war had placed upon him a colossal burden, one that no predecessor in the post had ever had to face. Undaunted, he worked out a scheme of finance that has marked a new era in British fiscal history. He introduced schemes for raising money calculated to make conservative Britons howl with horror. But they didn't. They paid. Lloyd George had a sole object at the outbreak of the war—that was to raise money—and he raised it by millions and billions. The financial crisis was over. Lloyd George had won his first great victory as a wartime statesman.

But crisis has followed crisis. To enumerate every one would be like chronicling every bout of John L. Sullivan. Following the crisis confronting him as Chancellor of the Exchequer, it may be said that Lloyd George has faced six other major crises, including the one precipitated last week by the Maurice letter. Narrowing them down to such a small number excludes several of his statements of war aims, each of which represented, to some degree, meeting a crisis brought about by German peace manoeuvres and discomfiting the German peace schemers. But these crises, dramatic though they were, had not the elements of actual conflict characteristic of the six chosen.

The next great war emergency faced by Lloyd George after he had placed Britain on a satisfactory financial basis was when he was taken from his post as Chancellor of the Exchequer and made Minister of Munitions. The munitions scandal had been one of the gravest of the war; it had seriously impaired the fame of Lord Kitchener, whom many accused of sacrificing thousands of British lives by supplying the armies at the front with too little ammunition, and that not of the sort needed to overcome the Germans. Lloyd George tackled the job with his usual impetuosity. He drove home to the minds of Englishmen who still clung to the shreds and tatters of conservatism that this war was something which must tax every man to the uttermost ounce of his strength. He put the munition plants of the realm on a war basis. He thundered at slackers. He argued with labor leaders. He met heckling laborites with felicitous rejoinder and crushing retort. He was fight personified. British industry was set humming, munitions were poured out to the army in quantities undreamed of before; the Germans, instead of being sprinkled with shrapnel, were deluged with high explosive shells.

Lloyd George wiped the sweat of battle from his brow as he contemplated the inert form of his War Crisis No. 2. Then, like Alexander seeking new worlds to conquer, he called loudly for more trouble.

It came to him in the form of the Premiership of the British Empire, the most important and most difficult post in the whole world. He became Premier in 1916, at a time when Germany was especially active in peace manoeuvres, when the fainthearted in Great Britain and other allied lands were shaky with war weariness and in a questioning mood as to the wisdom of fighting to a finish.

Lloyd George's first speech as Premier electrified England and the world, thrilled bitter-enders to new efforts, sent the war-weary back into line with new courage. "There has been some talk about the proposals of peace," said the fiery Welshman. "What are those proposals? There are none. To enter, upon the invitation of Germany, proclaiming herself victorious, without any knowledge of the proposals she intends to make, into a conference, is putting our heads into a noose with the rope end in the hands of Germany."

Then he reiterated Mr. Asquith's peace terms and went Asquith one better in the memorable words: "Complete restitution, full reparation, guarantees against repetition."

In the rest of the speech he took up the grave question of the moment, without mincing of words or minimizing of dangers. It was Lloyd George at his best. It gave the country and the world the measure of the man whom the greatest emergency in history had called to the helm in Great Britain. If fighting spirit was to be the means of winning the war, Lloyd George's debut as Premier augured well for Britain.

His next great crisis came in the following year and was one of the most serious in his whole stormy career. After the disaster to Italian arms along the Isonzo in October, 1917, which brought the Austrians and Germans across that stream into the plains of Northern Italy, Lloyd George attended a council of allied leaders at Rapallo, where measures were concerted to meet the new peril. Subsequently he went to Paris and there made a speech that created a hornet's nest. He said bitterly uncomplimentary things about the conduct of the war on the allied side, and urged centralization of allied military control as the only effective way of vanquishing the Germans.

This speech—which will doubtless go down in history as the "brutally frank" speech, from one of its author's trenchant sentences—was keenly resented in England. The opposition marshaled its cohorts and prepared to give the Premier a warm reception on his return from the Continent. It was felt that he had been not only indiscreet, but insulting. The familiar words, "Grave British crisis," appeared in the headlines of our newspapers, coupled with such ominous phrases as "It is hinted that the fall of Lloyd George is imminent."

But Lloyd George didn't fall. The row that he found on his hands when he landed on English soil was exactly to his liking. People waited breathless to see how he would meet it. They didn't have to wait long. Lloyd George breasted the full force of his opponents' accusations with all his joyous eagerness for conflict.

They told him that he had been provocative. "I meant to be," he said. He calmly acknowledged that he had dressed up his speech oratorically so as to make it more sensational. He wanted to wake up England, he said. He withdrew not a word; he made no apologies. As for the plan of centralization of military control which he proposed, it was the only road to victory.

His opponents hinted at civilian "butting in" on military management. Lloyd George retorted that his plan of centralization had been demanded by Kitchener as far back as 1915. He said that the British, French, Italian, and American General Staffs wanted just that sort of control.

The opposition said that he had not consulted the Cabinet before advancing his suggestions. He retorted that the whole thing had been submitted to the Cabinet and discussed in detail before the speech.

And so he went on, disposing of accusation after accusation, once more "getting away with it" by sheer fighting and audacity, thrilling the crowd that packed the hall at last by the triumphant news that, on the Saturday before, five German submarines had been destroyed by the British Navy. The crowd went mad. The opposition gnashed its teeth and was silent. It was a Lloyd George triumph.

Three months later he was again head over ears in trouble. Again his Government was violently assailed. He had fallen out with Sir William Robertson, head of the British General Staff, and one of the most prominent of British Generals, over the Government's conduct of the war, and Robertson had withdrawn from his post. Again there were plentiful hints that Lloyd George's doom had come. That there was a limit to his ability of discomfiting his opponents and remaining at the helm.

But the Welshman's capacity for getting out of trouble had not suffered a jot from the arduous experience of the previous Autumn. Boldly confronting his foes in the House of Commons, he challenged them in so many words to throw him out of office if they disapproved of his war council scheme and his methods of conducting the war in general. The opposition did not take the dare. Asquith and those with him backed down. Within a couple of hours from the time that the doughty Welshman had risen to his feet and thrown down the gauntlet the crisis was over, the spectators were dribbling away from the galleries, and members were saying to each other: "Let's get on with the war."

"Next!" cried Lloyd George.

The next was the Irish conscription crisis. That was—and is—a crisis with a vengeance. It presented elements of conflict that must have filled Lloyd George with delight. When he told the House of Commons on April 9 last that the time had come for Irishmen to be conscripted as well as the rest of the men of Britain he brought down the most terrific storm that had ever beat about his head.

It was not possible to justify excluding Ireland any longer from conscription, said the Premier bluntly.

Irish members leaped to their feet, red with anger, shouting defiance.

"It is a declaration of war on Ireland!" cried one.

"You come across and try to take us!" yelled another.

Lloyd George stuck to his guns. His mind was made up and no amount of howling could make him back down an inch. It was the boldest stroke of his whole career. Its ultimate effect is yet to be known, but about the amazing "nerve" of the man who thus daringly introduced a question fraught with dynamite there can be no question. The way of it, the whole scene as he stood in the midst of the tumult provoked by his bomb, was Lloyd George all over, Lloyd George at the zenith of his career as a man who loved trouble for its own sake. Possibly history will call the step a mistake, but it is 10 to 1 that whatever its final judgment may be it will give full credit to the audacity of the doughty battler who made it.

In the same speech in which he demanded conscription for Ireland Lloyd George sowed the seed for his next great crisis when he said, referring to the German offensive that began on March 21 last:

"What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties in 1917, the army in France was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917."

And again:

"In Mesopotamia there is only one white division in all, and in Egypt and Palestine there are only three white divisions. The rest are either Indians or mixed with a very small proportion of British troops in these divisions. I am referring to infantry divisions."

Those two statements were flatly called into question in General Sir Frederick Barton Maurice's now famous letter of the 6th of the present month. Referring to the first, General Maurice said:

"That statement implies that Sir Douglas Haig's fighting strength on the eve of the great battle which began March 21 had not been diminished. This is not correct."

And, apropos of the second statement, General Maurice merely said bluntly: "This is not correct."

Another crisis was on. Besides the points made by Maurice there were other things in the Premier's speech of April 9 which had aroused dissatisfaction. Among these was his statement that Sir Henry Wilson, Chief of the British General Staff, had made a "remarkable" forecast of the German offensive at the Versailles conference, in which he had said that the attack would come south of Arras, on a very wide front, the widest ever assailed, that the Germans would accumulate ninety-five divisions, that they would throw the whole of their resources and strength into breaking the British line at that point, and that their objective would be the capture of Amiens and the severance of the British and French forces.

"I think that it was one of the most remarkable forecasts of enemy intentions that was ever made," declared Lloyd George in his April speech. "Almost in every detail that very remarkable forecast has been verified in the event."

That was all very well, objected Lloyd George's opponents, but why had he not acted upon the forecast when it was made? A fine business, they said, for the head of the Government to praise to the skies a prophecy because it had come true instead of preventing it from coming true. This and other points whipped his foes to a high pitch of anger. And so last week they again got ready to face Lloyd George and the indomitable Welshman prepared to meet them in his old manner, eye to eye and blow for blow.

But it never came to that. He got up and made a speech tearing the Maurice charges to tatters. His opponents backed without a struggle. And Lloyd George is in the saddle as firmly as ever—until the next crisis.

DON THE UNIFORM, NOT CAP AND GOWN

That is the Motto of Dean Lucke of Columbia Mechanical Engineering Department.

If Professor Charles E. Lucke, Dean of the Department of Mechanical Engineering of Columbia University, had his way the figure of Alma Mater, at the foot of the steps leading to the Columbia Library, might be surmounted by a placard reading, "Academic Studies Discontinued During the War."

Professor Lucke is civilian director of the United States Navy Gas Engine School at Columbia and at almost any hour of the day scores of clean-cut young men in the uniform of seamen, commissioned and non-commissioned officers, may be seen in his laboratories in the Engineering Building of the university. Since last Fall Professor Lucke has trained about 1,400 men for work on American vessels. Many have since been assigned to submarine chasers.

Several days ago Professor Lucke, speaking before the annual General Assembly of the Columbia University Faculty, in Schermerhorn Hall, caused a stir when he urged that the university forbid all activities not contributing to the winning of the war or to reconstruction afterward. He went further and said that the university should abandon all regular courses, even on subjects contributing to war work, when students were so few as to involve wasting the time of a talented instructor if he could contribute more to the war otherwise.

"The university should make the maximum direct official war service use of its equipment and property," he said, "as well as of its organized staff. The university should forbid all activities not contributory to winning the war or to reconstruction.

"The university should assist in finding, or should create, war jobs for its staff and for other citizens anxious to serve but unable to find a place, and it should try to have these officialized whenever, as created, they are unofficial. War jobs will not seek the man, the man must find the job, and the university can be very useful here as agent.

"The university should discharge or expel all enemies under its control, and all persons unwilling to contribute to its war program, if there be any such. Otherwise the university will become a hiding place for obstructionists.

"The university should assume responsibility for the larger war activities that are beyond the scope of one man's job, but still within the capacity of its organization and plant. If necessary, specialists should be engaged to carry through the project.

"The university should establish a War Service Council and War Service Faculties to direct and conduct such a program, membership to be limited to people who themselves have war jobs, whose knowledge of war needs is intimate, and whose judgment is sound.

"To make such a program effective full publicity must be given to the announcement that Columbia is a War Service university, and that here the winning of the war is regarded as a more serious and compelling duty than such things as researches on Medicine and Mathematics in the Sixteenth Century, to mention just one, published last week."

Professor Lucke believes that each person in the community should have a war job. "Each must contribute the maximum possible amount of his time," he said, "dropping all non-contributing activities to make time, preferably full time to the limit of endurance; part time if full is not possible."

HINTS FOR MIDSUMMER GARB

Hats of Light and Airy Materials—Calico Dresses for Warm Weather—Summer Silks in Gingham Patterns.

SMART and beautiful things are appearing in the shops now as a sort of forecast of the things we shall wear in midsummer. And they certainly have about them enough of charm to make us positively long for warm weather. We have the opportunity now to make a careful choice; and now, certainly, is the time to do it.

First—always a forerunner of any season or semi-season—are the hats—big, floppy, picturesque, sunshade hats, made of the lightest and airiest of materials. Lace, the newest of chosen fabrics, is being largely employed in the making of these wide-brimmed hats. One lace hat that might serve as a pattern for many was made with a drooping brim of black chantilly all-over lace, showing scarcely a trace of support, so filmy was its texture. About its edge ran the narrowest of black satin cords, and its crown, of the high and crushable variety, was also made of black satin. There really wasn't any trimming to speak of, but the crown ended in a faced end of its own material that stuck out in a dashing way a little to the right side of the back.

Then there are the hats, transparent all but their crowns, which are made of fascinating combinations of flowers. These have the most summery appearance, for so well are they done that it seems to see the roses springing from their mother bush or the violets growing on the mossy bank. A hat with a violet crown had a brim of flat purple grosgrain ribbon laid over its foundation of straw. The ribbon was folded in a simple enough way, yet with the true touch of an artist about it, and the hat made one dream of garden parties and all sorts of old-fashioned romantic things.

One midsummer hat was made entirely of dark blue maline, artistically folded over the extremely wide brim. Its weight was no more than the proverbial feather, as it was transparent in every particular, even the crown being so constructed as to allow the hair to show through. And what could be more in keeping with a blistering day than this creation? It was the very spirit of coolness and freshness, yet with simplicity ever present.

Another new hat, with a brim of orchid Georgette, had a crown of twisted and crushed soft ribbons, seemingly of every imaginable pastel shade. A breath of flowers and Summer fragrance was contained in that light and airy head covering, though no sign of a flower was anywhere to be seen.

Calico dresses are the very last word for Summer, and these, too, have their important reasons for existing. You see, gingham has soared outrageously in price and so, as in years gone by, women have turned to calico. And just by way of showing how cheerful they can be about a dire necessity, they have made those calico gowns so truly beautiful that they are the smartest of all new Summer creations. The dotted ones show a decided supremacy, for polka dots, in whatever class of material they may appear, are always picturesque and satisfactory to wear. There are black ones on white grounds, and white ones on navy blue grounds, and there are all sorts of variations on this theme, as well as other patterns of plaids and tiny scattered figures.

The calico dresses are displaying a decided tendency to show the fichu as a right and proper part of their construction, but it is no drooping, demure, and old ladyish fichu. It has the most youthful appearance, made of crisp white organdy, cut on a circular pattern, so that it stands high behind the coiffure, rolls and gracefully disappears into the belt. More often than not it adds to its freshness by having an additional frill applied all about the edge. There are turn-back flare cuffs to match, showing their frills crisply pulled out on the edges from the regularity of their pleats.

One dark-blue calico frock, with tiny white figures scattered over its surface, was draped as to its bodice section to show a stiff—and also draped—white piqué waistcoat, appearing from somewhere under the arms and folding into a draped high girdle over the simply gathered skirt. Still another had a wide and folded fichu-like collar, made of white piqué.

Summer silks in gingham patterns are vying with the real ginghams for first place as morning frocks. They have in their favor the fact that they are more simple to launder, and then there is no denying the fact that silk is the coolest of all materials. A style set by the smartly dressed women at Palm Beach during the season there is being repeated here. That is to use white piqué in wide bands as trimming for Summer silk dresses. It is most effective when the silk is black and white, the chalky whiteness of the piqué standing out in an interesting contrast to the silk.

Short sleeves are appearing on these gowns. The Parisian models set the example, which is being followed more or less tentatively and wonderingly until the American woman shall demonstrate just what is her wish in this regard. For coolness and Summer comfort the short sleeve has no rival, and for the slim contour of a beautiful arm it is surely the sleeve de luxe. However, the cause of its general popularity remains to be discovered.

Fringes of Chenille on a Gown of Silk Brocade.

Transparent Midsummer Hat of Black Lace and Black Satin.

Sashes with wide butterfly bows are another feature of the midsummer gowns. They take their place beside the fichus as a Victorian revival of great charm, and the style is adapted in a less frilly manner for gowns designed for daytime wear.

Enough Spring days have passed by now for the styles to have become established. At the smart hotels and on the street at tea hour one has an excellent opportunity to observe what points among the fashions put forward in the early days of Spring have been generally accepted. Here are accepted fashion points that are distinctly new:

Hats have high crowns, though most of them are soft and crushable, at least in appearance.

Little trimming is the rule for hats, often the so-called trimming being a part of the hat, as when tiny flowers are sewed close together to form a brim or crown.

Red hats dot the landscape more and more conspicuously. They are particularly smart when worn with dresses or suits of navy blue serge.

Hindu turbans are conspicuously popular, the newest of them being made of twisted bands of contrasting colors of Georgette crêpe.

A veil is often the sole trimming for a Milan or hand-sewed hat. In this case the veil streams loosely from the hat brim and floats carelessly from the brim.

Fur makes the most favored of all Spring wraps, and it varies from narrow animal scarf to the most elaborate of fur coatees made up from two different kinds of skins. The Summer furs are sable, squirrel, mole, ermine, and kolinsky.

Capes, capes, capes in every possible shape and size are seen floating in the wind. They are graceful descendants of the bulky topcoat. A very new cape seen last week reached only to the waistline. It was cut very circular and was made of an outside layer of deep plum satin—almost black in tone—and a lining of light wistaria satin. It was worn over a blue serge frock, with a drooping picture hat of black satin.

The suits among the various varieties of women war workers lean mostly to those of heavy tweed in light and cheerful colorings. They are extremely good-looking when worn with low sport oxfords and untrimmed blocked hats of stiff straw.

Satin dresses and some satin suits are appearing furtively. They are still a trifle sketchy in weight for the prevailing weather, but they promise to be far more popular as time goes on. Just now, worn with the fur coatees, they are most attractive and decidedly the newest thing to be seen.

Several hats were seen made all of embroidered satin, and the embroidery was done in a shade of silk floss to match the foundation silk.

Straight, chemise frocks of serge are the thing. Many of them are lavishly embroidered; others are made perfectly plain with but a row of buttons down the back to take away from the trim severity.

Wide pleats that hang in a straight line from shoulder to the hem of the garment are a feature of some of the new serge dresses.

Sleeves, these days, have no cuffs to fit the wrists. Instead, they are left wide open at the hands, with wide or flaring bands for a finish. They have more of a kimono look than anything else, and they help to add a widened line to a silhouette that grows, sometimes, monotonously thin.

Many of the serge street frocks have groups of pleats, either accordion or narrow knife pleats, inserted in sections in their skirts. The remaining intervals are apt to have loose, swinging panels to cover their plainness.

Foulard in interesting designs is much used along with serge, and the combination makes a very interesting gown, even more so than one made wholly of foulard. The use of the plain surfaced material gives a gentle relief to the continuousness of the pattern.

The vogue for the use of real lace has led to some lovely uses of lace with street and afternoon gowns. Little inserted vests of creamy lace peep out of otherwise sombre necklines, and tightly fitting cuffs are livened by a touch of this lace.

Fringe grows daily more popular. It is used on gowns, on capes, and on hats, and even on blouses. Chenille fringe in two tiers on a skirt of a figured silk frock makes a most arresting combination.

High, draped girdles are good. They are seen on street frocks and on Eton jacket suits.

The Spring shoe is the pointed kid oxford. It gives the foot that much-to-be-desired slim line and at the same time is held snugly in place by its tied lacings. This is more than could be said of the pumps of old. These new shoes have, as a rule, French heels.

Beaded bags are the smart things to carry in one's hand when shopping. Their bright and glowing colors help materially to enliven a plain, dark gown.

Colored blouses peep out from beneath the coats of tailored suits, demonstrating the fact that color has superseded white in these suits, at least for the time being.

For afternoon dresses, printed silks and printed chiffons have the upper hand. They are most popular for wear at informal dances.

Draped gowns with no trimming whatever are really smart.

The bolero jacket has been adapted and used on some of the new Spring gowns.

Many interesting little white yokes and tiny inserted white frilly waistcoats are appearing in place of the white collars so long popular.

A few sleeveless jackets of velvet worn with pleated plaid skirts have appeared on the street during the last few warm days.

REPUBLICAN PARTY ANNIVERSARY

Hall Still Stands in Bloomington, Ill., Where Lincoln Delivered "Lost Speech"—Celebration on May 29 to Mark Birthday.

REPUBLICAN national and State leaders will assemble in Bloomington, Ill., on May 29 to celebrate the birth of their political organization. They will temporarily lay aside the affairs of state and the issues of the war and recall the days when those elements opposed to slavery united and launched the Party of Lincoln, of Grant, and others whose names will be forever linked with the history of America.

The anniversary celebration will be marked by the presence of former President Taft, Senator Wesley A. Jones of Washington, Governor Frank O. Lowden, Senator L. Y. Sherman, Congressman Medill McCormick, Congressman John A. Sterling, and many others. The coming event is generally regarded as the opening gun of the campaign of 1920 for the Presidency, and this fact has increased the interest. Republicans past, present, and future will be the keynote of the gathering to celebrate that historic day, just sixty-two years before, when the party sprang into being.

On May 29, 1856, men in long coats and top hats and women in hoopskirts assembled in a building still standing in Bloomington, then known as Majors Hall, and listened to the words of Lincoln, words which projected him as America's foremost citizen and gave to the United States the fundamental principles of Republicanism.

Historians are agreed that this convention, made famous by the "lost speech" of Lincoln, marked the real inauguration of the party. Before that the elements which opposed slavery had been known as "Anti-Nebraskan." The word "Republican" was favored at mass meetings in various sections of the country held to denounce slavery. At the Bloomington meeting the name was approved. The convention of 1856 was the first State gathering at which the name was adopted, and the credit for being the birthplace of the Republican Party, therefore, is given to Bloomington.

Abraham Lincoln was the choice of many men for Governor of Illinois, but he illustrated his political sagacity by suggesting instead the nomination of an anti-Nebraskan Democrat, rather than an oldtime Whig like himself. He recommended William H. Bissell of St. Clair County, and when the convention was held in Bloomington three months later Bissell was unanimously nominated. As Lincoln had predicted, he was elected in November.

Majors Hall, where the historic convention was held, still stands. So far as known, none who attended that famous gathering is now living. If any can be found they will have a place of honor upon the platform during the anniversary celebration. Lincoln was one of the eleven delegates from Sangamon County. John M. Palmer represented Macoupin County. John G. Nicolay, biographer of Lincoln, came from Pike County. Richard Yates, Sr., later Governor, was sent from Morgan County. Owen Lovejoy was present from Bureau County. When the ticket was completed Lovejoy spoke for half an hour. He was followed by Lincoln, who spoke for an hour, holding the convention spellbound by the power of his argument, the irony of his invective, and his earnestness. The reporters were so enthralled that they forgot to take notes. Not until he had concluded was it realized that the great speech was unrecorded.

OUTDOOR SEASON BEGINS

Garden Party at Zoological Park—Puppet Vaudeville on Fifth Avenue for Red Cross Sponsored by Society—"Camp Concert" at Mrs. John H. Hammond's House—Many May Brides in Hurry-up Weddings.

THE early Summer weather has brought some semblance of country life awakening. The nearby country clubs are enjoying a delightful early season after a partial shutdown when fuel was so scarce. Several sporting meets are promised for the last of the month, when the racing season opens.

The coming season promises to be rather an unusual one, for society is so closely allied now with war relief work that scores will have to remain in town or within close call during the hot months. Affairs of a social-patriotic nature keep things going, and the smart hotels are crowded with fashionable folk from other cities and visiting officers from the war camps. Americans returning from London say that the London hotels and restaurants are experiencing the best business in their history, for the officers and men on furlough put all thoughts of war behind them and enjoy their holidays to the utmost.

One of the first outdoor affairs will be the annual garden party of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the New York Zoological Society, which is to be held on Thursday afternoon at the Zoological Park, tea being served, as usual, in the Administration Building. Members of the organization attended a dance in the old Aquarium last week down on the Battery seawall, inspecting the finny specimens between the one-step and the fox trot. Not since Jenny Lind sang there has such a notable gathering of New Yorkers assembled under this historic roof.

In connection with the Red Cross drive, and beginning the week before, tomorrow there will be a novelty performance at 725 Fifth Avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, in the shape of a Marionette Theatre. It will be constructed and decorated particularly to suit its miniature performers and will have the great advantage of opening directly on the street, making it easy of access for children going to and from the park, and grownups, who, if they are wise, will not miss the opportunity of coming under the spell of these diminutive artists.

The three-a-day performances will be frequent and short enough to allow every one to see them with less effort and more air than such entertainments usually provide for. The first will start at 3 o'clock, the second at 4:30, and the evening show will begin at 8:30.

The history of marionettes dates back to the early beginnings of Italian dramatic art, and the fascination that puppets have always had for children will have an added opportunity of exerting itself in this particularly happy setting, which no less an artist than Paul Chalfin has conceived for them at the Red Cross Puppet Theatre.

The patronesses are to be Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Seymour Cromwell, Mrs. William Adams Delano, Mrs. Reginald Fincke, Mrs. Sumner Gerard, Mrs. Meredith Hare, Mrs. Paul Manship, Mrs. Walter Maynard, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, and Mrs. H. Rogers Winthrop.

The marionettes, under the management of Tony Sarg, will appear in such vaudeville fascinations as "A Night in Delhi," "The Musical Clown," "The Juggler," and "The Harem Dancer." Prominent artists are to assist in entertaining, and Junior League girls are to act as ushers. The price of admission at the afternoon performances will be 50 cents; evening, $1. Tickets may be had at the agencies, the same as for the regular theatres.

The seating capacity, of course, is limited, and the whole house can be bought for $75. Some folks interested in children's charities are planning to send their little beneficiaries to a performance. Every little bit will help the Red Cross, for all the proceeds go to this worthy cause, as overhead expenses are paid up. Bright, snappy posters were made by Paul Manship, Rockwell Hunt, Harry F. Taylor and members of the Penguin Club for the theatre, which are to be sold at auction on the last night.

JUNIOR LEAGUE girls from twenty-two organizations throughout the country have been attending the conference at Cleveland, Ohio, many from New York enjoying the meetings and the hospitality of the city on the lake. The members are all débutantes of present and past seasons, and they are all doing wonderful war service work at home and abroad.

"We must realize, and we must make the members of our various leagues realize, that they are helping with war work quite as much if they support and work with established home charities as with new war organizations. It is even more essential that we continue our work with local organizations now than in former years."

Mrs. Allan G. House, President of the Junior League Confereoce, which was held at the Mayfield Country Club on Wednesday afternoon, thus voiced the most important point of discussion which the conference considered—how much of the work of the league for the coming year will be war work and how their workers may be kept interested without the glamour of war work and the distinction of a uniform to hold them.

Following Mrs. House's address of welcome, short reports from the leagues whose delegates had arrived were given on the new work undertaken since the Philadelphia conference two years ago.

Each league is an organization of débutantes and young society matrons in the larger cities of the United States for the purpose of giving financial and volunteer aid to local charities, giving help to all philanthropic movements, such as baby dispensaries, homes for aged men and women, for delinquent children, juvenile court and free kindergarten work, also aiding civic and patriotic movements.

Mrs. Willard D. Straight, President of the New York League, gave a report on the work done by our league.

The Committee for Free Milk for France has organized, through the efforts of Miss Josephine Osborn and Mrs. Warren McConihe, for the purpose of sending a ton of dry milk a day to war-stricken France.

A large group of society women are daily at work at the headquarters, 675 Fifth Avenue, that wounded soldiers, dying babies, and tuberculosis sufferers in France may have milk as the result of their efforts. A ton of dry milk costs $1,100. It is the equivalent of 8,400 quarts of liquid milk. Little babies require a quart of milk a day, so that the Committee for Free Milk for France has undertaken to daily succor 8,400 starving infants.

Miss Grace Hendrick, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Hendrick, Whose Engagement to Rodney Chase Has Been Announced.

The committee never doubts that the immediate needs of France will be met generously by New Yorkers. The milk question is critical. The milk famine that France faces is the result of the war's hideous havoc on the farm and pasture lands of that devastated country.

The initial call that Miss Osborn sponsored resulted in the organization of the committee. The members consist of Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Miss Caroline L. Morgan, Mrs. Robert L. Bacon, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. Bernard Baruch, Mrs. William Thaw, Mrs. Joseph B. Thomas, Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., Mrs. W. Bourke Cockran, Mrs. Nina Larrey Duryea, Mrs. Frederick Patterson, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Alvin Untermyer, Mrs. Chadbourne, Mrs. George Ethridge, Mrs. Stephen C. Clark, Mrs. Alfonso Villa, and Miss Elizabeth Bowen; with Miss Osborn as Chairman and Mrs. Warren McConihe as Vice Chairman. The Treasurer is the Equitable Trust Company, 37 Wall Street.

From Mrs. Warren McConihe came the urge that led this group of women to organize. For nearly a year she served as a nurse in Janson de Sailly, a hospital devoted to the care of the most seriously wounded. She knows the perilous shortage of milk for wounded soldiers in French hospitals. A feature of the Summer months, according to present plans, is to be a series of concerts at the Sumner watering places, Bar Harbor, Newport, Gloucester, Southampton, and Oyster Bay, under the auspices of the American Friends of Musicians in France. This is the newest of all the war relief enterprises, and is helping the impoverished French and Belgian musicians whom four years of war have left in distressing straits.

Among the musicians in this country who have volunteered to come anywhere, at any time, for these musicales, are George Harris, Miss Ethel Leginska, Mischa Levitski, Carlos Salzedo, Miss Lorraine Wyman, Rudolph Gänz, the Flonzaley Quartet, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers, Miss Marcia Van Dresser, John Powell, and Tom Dobson.

Mrs. George Montgomery Tuttle, Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harkness Flagler, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Beck, Reginald de Koven, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Garrison Villard, Mrs. Edwin T. Rice, Miss Georgina Schuyler, Robert Underwood Johnson, Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, and Mrs. Frederic Tams are among those on the committee.

The entertainment unit of the Dewey Navy Recreation Committee of the Woman's Naval Service, Inc., is arranging an entertainment intime, to be given Sunday evening, May 19, at the Studios, 40 West Fifty-seventh Street. Many prominent theatrical stars have volunteered their services for the unique program, and the entire proceeds of the benefit will go to the Smoke and Canteen Fund of the committee.

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, who is National Chairman of the Navy Recreation Department, is to bring a large party from Philadelphia to the benefit.

The tickets, which are $5 each, are being sold by the members of the Canteen unit, Miss Julie Lentilhon, Chairman, under the direction of Miss Marion Tiffany. They may also be obtained at 40 West Fifty-seventh Street and at the headquarters of the committee, 27 West Fifty-seventh Street.

THE week is almost weddingless, according to the social calendar. The outlook was the same last week, and yet there were a number of interesting nuptials, most of them hurried by the war, before the week was over.

One wedding, scheduled for Tuesday, took place yesterday, the bride being Miss Janet Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Sheppard, Jr., who was married to Ensign Charles Lane Poor, Jr., U. S. N., in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church. The change of date was brought about by the exigencies of war. The wedding invitations were just going out to the relatives and intimate friends when it was found that the day would have to be advanced.

It is the uncertainty that makes all war weddings informal, and the bride is wise these days who sets the date and then prepares her bridal finery for a hurry call, just as her soldier husband-to-be is at all times prepared for the emergency.

Miss Caryl Hackstaff, a popular member of the younger set since her début, two years ago, was married hastily in Hampton, Va., last week, to Howard Ogden Wood, Jr., of Brooklyn, at the home of Mr. Wood's aunt, Mrs. Alexander Purves. The couple had been engaged for some time, and when Miss Hackstaff accompanied Mr. Wood's parents South no plans had been made for the marriage. But when Mr. Wood received urgent army orders the ceremony was hastily arranged. The bride, following her husband's short furlough, will make her home here with her father, Charles L. Hackstaff of 45 East Sixty-second Street. She has been active of late with the canteen work of the Y. M. C. A. Both families are Summer residents of East Hampton, L. I.

Another interesting wedding abroad has been arranged. This time the scene will be in Florence, Italy. Many of the recent ones have taken place in Paris. Miss Cornelia Thayer Baldwin, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. William Wilberforce Baldwin of Florence, will be married on June 19 to Arthur Bliss Lane, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Warren Lane of 48 East Fifty-second Street and St. James, L. I. Mr. Lane, who is a Yale graduate, has been Secretary of the legation in Rome for the last two years.

Mrs. Edward Burke of Green Spring Valley and Baltimore, daughter of Mrs. Charles R. Forrest, was married on Tuesday at her home, 1,824 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C., to Major Henry Stewart Hooker, U. S. R., of New York City. The ceremoney was performed by the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, rector of St. Thomas's Church.

Major Hooker is a graduate of Yale, class of 1902, where he rowed on the 'Varsity crew, and is a member of the Union, Tuxedo, Racket and Tennis, and Yale Clubs of New York, and the Metropolitan Club of Washington. He is a member of the law firm of Marvin, Hooker & Roosevelt of New York City, and entered the United States Army at the outbreak of the war.

The marriage of Miss Susan McKee Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Preston Pope Rogers of East Orange, formerly of Louisville, Ky., and Lieutenant Charles Ridgely Lee, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Lee of East Orange, took place at Spartanburg, S. C., on Saturday, May 4, in the First Presbyterian Church, the Rev. John S. Watkins officiating. Lieutenant Lee is stationed at Camp Wadsworth with the 105th Field Artillery.

Miss Marie Goodman, daughter of Mrs. George E. Goodman, Jr., and Lieutenant Arthur K. Wylde, U. S. R., of Seattle, were married yesterday in San Francisco. The bride has relatives in this city, where she was educated, and is a granddaughter of Harrison Millard, the composer. The wedding was a military one, and took place in the Hotel Cecil, where the bride and her mother spent part of the Winter.

Mr. and Mrs. William V. V. Powers of 375 Park Avenue have told of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Margaret Van Vorst Powers, to George Stafford Bucknall of the 307th Field Artillery, U. S. A., who recently returned from France, where he served for six months with the Norton Harjes ambulance unit. He is the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. J. Bucknall of Glen Cove, L. I.

The announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Julia Lake Talcott, daughter of J. Frederick Talcott of 16 East Sixty-sixth Street, and the late Mrs. Frank V. Crawford Talcott, to Lieutenant Thomas M. McMillinn, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. McMillan of Mobile, Ala.

Miss Talcott is a débutante of last Winter, and a member of the Junior League. She is the sister of James Talcott, Jr., graduate of Harvard, 1916, who married Miss Mary S. Johnson of Boston, and Ensign Hooker Talcott, Harvard, class of 1918. Lieutenant McMillan is a graduate of Princeton University, class of 1913, and also of the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. He is now completing his preparation in New York for service abroad.

The engagement of a widely known Brooklyn girl, now in England in the service of the Y. M. C. A., has just been announced. She is Miss Marian Macdonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Stone Macdonald of 1,305 Albemarle Road, and her fiancé is Major Seaward Grant of Montreal, Canada.

Miss Macdonald is working with the Volunteer Aid Detachment, known abroad as the V. A. D., and made up of the country's finest girls.

Major Grant is now returned to Canada, having been wounded in France, where he went with the first Canadian contingent.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Eleanor Wilmer Bartlett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel E. Bartlett of Andover, Mass., to David H. Atwater, son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Atwater of this city. Mr. Atwater has been doing ambulance work in France, having returned recently to this side.

An interesting engagement was made known in Washington, D. C., last week when Maj. Gen. Peyton C. March, Acting Chief of the General Staff, U. S. A., announced the betrothal of his daughter, Miss Josephine March, to Major Joseph M. Ewing, Field Artillery, U. S. A., who has recently returned from France, and is now on duty as aid to General March.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cady Sturges of 116 East Thirty-sixth Street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Mary C. Sturges, to Captain James H. Frier, Jr., U. S. A., son of Colonel James H. Frier, U. S. A., at present stationed at Camp Merritt. The wedding is to take place on June 8 at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Sturges is a granddaughter of the late Jonathan Sturges of New York. Captain Frier graduated from West Point, class of 1917.

THE American Girls' Aid benefit performance will be given by the Snarks and the Amateur Comedy Club at the Plaza on Wednesday night, with dancing afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers, who have just returned from entertainment work with the Y. M. C. A. in the United States camps in France, will give a "camp concert" and an informal talk on conditions in the American expeditionary forces on Thursday afternoon at 3:30 at the residence of Mrs. John Henry Hammond, 9 East Ninety-first Street, for the benefit of the Art Workers' Club for Women. Tickets, at $2.50 each, may be had from Miss Howland, 37 East Thirty-fifth Street.

Among the associate members of the club are Mrs. Bayard Cutting, Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. C. B. Alexander, and Mrs. Thomas F. Ryan.

Much interest is being expressed over the benefit entertainment in aid of the New York Home for Homeless Boys, which is to be held in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton on Wednesday evening. The principal object of the institution is to provide a home with religious and moral instruction for friendless and homeless boys, and to enable them to become useful and honorable members of society. Over 17,000 boys have been cared for since the home was opened.

Tickets are $2 each, and may be obtained at the Ritz-Carlton, or from any of the patronesses, including Mrs. L. M. Bull, Mrs. George Gordon Battle, Miss Cuyler, Mrs. Lawrence Elliman, Mrs. P. A. S. Franklin, Mrs. C. A. Haisey, Mrs. Arthur Ryle, Miss Jennie Taylor, Mrs. Snowden Marshall, Mrs. Clarence Chapman, Mrs. Vanderpoel, and Mrs. William Floyd-Jones.

The annual old-fashioned garden party in Washington Square will be held early in June, under the auspices of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense. It is being planned and directed by Mrs. Philip Lydig, Chairman of the Social Welfare Committee, who is to be assisted by several members of the committee and sub-committee.

Many will remember with pleasure the party last year, when turnips and carrots were sold for as much as $3 each, and when all were obliged to come armed with huge baskets of potatoes, tomatoes, cucumbers, and other vegetables, in order to enjoy the many attractions that were offered at the various booths.

The same plans of admission will be used this year, and many original ideas in the arrangement of the booths, and in artistic expression will be introduced. Soldiers and sailors will be admitted free, and there will be dancing, theatricals, and similar attractions in addition. Booths where practical and fancy articles will be sold will also be there.

The proceeds of the affair will be devoted to the many activities of the Mayor's Committee of Women, including canteens, places of amusement for soldiers and sailors, and relief for the families of those at war.

Many interested in the welfare of Poland and Serbia have purchased boxes for the concert to be given in Aeolian Hall on the evening of May 21 to aid the Franco-Serbian Hospital Fund. With so well-known a Polish patriot as Mme. Helena Paderewski to aid as a leader in the movement in France, other well-known women have come forward to aid, and there is every reason to feel that at the concert, which will be most novel and entertaining, the entire house will be sold out. The program will consist of Slav folksongs and dances.

OUTDOOR SEASON BEGINS

Garden Party at Zoological Park—Puppet Vaudeville on Fifth Avenue for Red Cross Sponsored by Society—"Camp Concert" at Mrs. John H. Hammond's House—Many May Brides in Hurry-up Weddings.

THE early Summer weather has brought some semblance of country life awakening. The nearby country clubs are enjoying a delightful early season after a partial shutdown when fuel was so scarce. Several sporting meets are promised for the last of the month, when the racing season opens.

The coming season promises to be rather an unusual one, for society is so closely allied now with war relief work that scores will have to remain in town or within close call during the hot months. Affairs of a social-patriotic nature keep things going, and the smart hotels are crowded with fashionable folk from other cities and visiting officers from the war camps. Americans returning from London say that the London hotels and restaurants are experiencing the best business in their history, for the officers and men on furlough put all thoughts of war behind them and enjoy their holidays to the utmost.

One of the first outdoor affairs will be the annual garden party of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the New York Zoological Society, which is to be held on Thursday afternoon at the Zoological Park, tea being served, as usual, in the Administration Building. Members of the organization attended a dance in the old Aquarium last week down on the Battery seawall, inspecting the finny specimens between the one-step and the fox trot. Not since Jenny Lind sang there has such a notable gathering of New Yorkers assembled under this historic roof.

In connection with the Red Cross drive, and beginning the week before, tomorrow there will be a novelty performance at 723 Fifth Avenue, between Fifty-sixth and Fifty-seventh Streets, in the shape of a Marionette Theatre. It will be constructed and decorated particularly to suit its miniature performers, and will have the great advantage of opening directly on the street, making it easy of access for children going to and from the park, and grownups, who, if they are wise, will not miss the opportunity of coming under the spell of these diminutive artists.

The three-a-day performances will be frequent and short enough to allow every one to see them with less effort and more air than such entertainments usually provide for. The first will start at 3 o'clock, the second at 4:30, and the evening show will begin at 8:30.

The history of marionettes dates back to the early beginnings of Italian dramatic art, and the fascination that puppets have always had for children will have an added opportunity of exerting itself in this particularly happy setting, which no less an artist than Paul Challis has conceived for them at the Red Cross Puppet Theatre.

The patronesses are to be Mrs. James A. Burden, Mrs. Seymour Cromwell, Mrs. William Adams Delano, Mrs. Reginald Fincke, Mrs. Sumner Gerard, Mrs. Meredith Hare, Mrs. Paul Manship, Mrs. Walter Maynard, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, and Mrs. H. Rogers Winthrop.

The marionettes, under the management of Tony Sarg, will appear in such vaudeville fascinations as "A Night in Delhi," "The Musical Clown," "The Juggler," and "The Harem Dancer." Prominent artists are to assist in entertaining, and Junior League girls are to act as ushers. The price of admission at the afternoon performances will be 50 cents; evening, $1. Tickets may be had at the agencies, the same as for the regular theatres.

The seating capacity, of course, is limited, and the whole house can be bought for $75. Some folks interested in children's charities are planning to send their little beneficiaries to a performance. Every little bit will help the Red Cross, for all the proceeds go to this worthy cause, as overhead expenses are paid up. Bright, snappy posters were made by Paul Manship, Rockwell Hunt, Harry F. Taylor and members of the Penguin Club for the theatre, which are to be sold at auction on the last night.

JUNIOR LEAGUE girls from twenty-two organizations throughout the country have been attending the conference at Cleveland, Ohio, many from New York enjoying the meetings and the hospitality of the city on the lake. The members are all débutantes of present and past seasons, and they are all doing wonderful war service work at home and abroad.

"We must realize, and we must make the members of our various leagues realize, that they are helping with war work quite as much if they support and work with established home charities as with new war organizations. It is even more essential that we continue our work with local organizations now than in former years."

Mrs. Allan G. House, President of the Junior League Conference, which was held at the Mayfield Country Club on Wednesday afternoon, thus voiced the most important point of discussion which the conference considered—how much of the work of the league for the coming year will be war work and how their workers may be kept interested without the glamour of war work and the distinction of a uniform to hold them.

Following Mrs. House's address of welcome, short reports from the leagues whose delegates had arrived were given on the new work undertaken since the Philadelphia conference two years ago.

Each league is an organization of débutantes and young society matrons in the larger cities of the United States for the purpose of giving financial and volunteer aid to local charities, giving help to all philanthropic movements, such as baby dispensaries, homes for aged men and women, for delinquent children, juvenile court and free kindergarten work, also aiding civic and patriotic movements.

Mrs. Willard D. Straight, President of the New York League, gave a report on the work done by our league.

The Committee for Free Milk for France has organized, through the efforts of Miss Josephine Osborn and Mrs. Warren McConihe, for the purpose of sending a ton of dry milk a day to war-stricken France.

A large group of society women are daily at work at the headquarters, 675 Fifth Avenue, that wounded soldiers, dying babies, and tuberculosis sufferers in France may have milk as the result of their efforts. A ton of dry milk costs $1,100. It is the equivalent of 8,400 quarts of liquid milk. Little babies require a quart of milk a day, so that the Committee for Free Milk for France has undertaken to daily succor 8,400 starving infants.

Miss Grace Hendrick, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ellwood Hendrick, Whose Engagement to Rodney Chase Has Been Announced.

The committee never doubts that the immediate needs of France will be met generously by New Yorkers. The milk question is critical. The milk famine that France faces is the result of the war's hideous havoc on the farm and pasture lands of that devastated country.

The initial call that Miss Osborn sponsored resulted in the organization of the committee. The members consist of Mrs. Gordon Auchincloss, Mrs. Whitney Warren, Miss Caroline L. Morgan, Mrs. Robert L. Bacon, Mrs. John H. Iselin, Mrs. Bernard Baruch, Mrs. William Thaw, Mrs. Joseph B. Thomas, Mrs. James A. Burden, Jr., Mrs. W. Bourke Cockran, Mrs. Nina Larrey Duryea, Mrs. Frederick Patterson, Mrs. S. Stanwood Menken, Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Alvin Untermyer, Mrs. Chadbourne, Mrs. George Ethridge, Mrs. Stephen C. Clark, Mrs. Alfonso Villa, and Miss Elizabeth Bowen; with Miss Osborn as Chairman and Mrs. Warren McConihe as Vice Chairman. The Treasurer is the Equitable Trust Company, 37 Wall Street.

From Mrs. Warren McConihe came the urge that led this group of women to organize. For nearly a year she served as a nurse in Janson de Sailly, a hospital devoted to the care of the most seriously wounded. She knows the perilous shortage of milk for wounded soldiers in French hospitals. A feature of the Summer months, according to present plans, is to be a series of concerts at the Summer watering places, Bar Harbor, Newport, Gloucester, Southampton, and Oyster Bay, under the auspices of the American Friends of Musicians in France. This is the newest of all the war relief enterprises, and is helping the impoverished French and Belgian musicians whom four years of war have left in distressing straits.

Among the musicians in this country who have volunteered to come anywhere, at any time, for these musicales, are George Harris, Miss Ethel Leginska, Mischa Levitski, Carlos Salzedo, Miss Lorraine Wyman, Rudolph Ganz, the Flonzaley Quartet, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Rogers, Miss Marcia Van Dresser, John Powell, and Tom Dobson.

Mrs. George Montgomery Tuttle, Mrs. J. West Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Harkness Flagler, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch, Mr. and Mrs. James M. Beck, Reginald de Koven, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Garrison Villard, Mrs. Edwin T. Rice, Miss Georgina Schuyler, Robert Underwood Johnson, Mrs. Ethelbert Nevin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, and Mrs. Frederic Tams are among those on the committee.

The entertainment unit of the Dewey Navy Recreation Committee of the Woman's Naval Service, Inc., is arranging an entertainment intime, to be given Sunday evening, May 19, at the Studios, 40 West Fifty-seventh Street. Many prominent theatrical stars have volunteered their services for the unique program, and the entire proceeds of the benefit will go to the Smoke and Canteen Fund of the committee.

Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury, who is National Chairman of the Navy Recreation Department, is to bring a large party from Philadelphia to the benefit.

The tickets, which are $5 each, are being sold by the members of the Canteen unit, Miss Julie Lentilhon, Chairman, under the direction of Miss Marion Tiffany. They may also be obtained at 40 West Fifty-seventh Street and at the headquarters of the committee, 27 West Fifty-seventh Street.

THE week is almost weddingless, according to the social calendar. The outlook was the same last week, and yet there were a number of interesting nuptials, most of them hurried by the war, before the week was over.

One wedding, scheduled for Tuesday, took place yesterday, the bride being Miss Janet Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Sheppard, Jr., who was married to Ensign Charles Lane Poor, Jr., U. S. N., in the chantry of St. Thomas's Church. The change of date was brought about by the exigencies of war. GERMAN CRUELTIES TO WAR PRISONERS

Official British Document Shows Captives Do Military Work Under Guns—Ill-Fed and Ill-Treated

By those laws of war agreed upon at The Hague in 1907, which seem now so far away, belligerents are forbidden to employ prisoners of war upon war operations. Other regulations are that prisoners must be humanely treated and not overworked, that their personal belongings not of military use remain their own, that their captors are charged with their maintenance, and that in default of specific agreements between the belligerents they are to be rationed, quartered, and clothed on the same footing as the troops of the Government whose captives they are. Not only did Germany agree to all these things, but in the German War Book the military authorities laid down strict laws to that effect.

The British Government Committee on the Treatment by the Enemy of British Prisoners of War has just issued a report upon the Germans' treatment of British prisoners of war behind the firing lines in France and Belgium. The report is the latest of a series, each dealing with some specific phase of the war prisoner problem. It throws light upon a condition of real frightfulness—the employment of ill-fed, half-starved, half-clothed men on military operations against their own country, within range of their own army's guns, and the keeping of these men, dirty, verminous, sick, shut off from any communication with their own people, from whom they received no letters or parcels. These men were not subject to neutral inspection.

In January, 1917, the German Government informed the British Government that British prisoners would be kept at work close behind the German lines, in reprisal for alleged similar treatment of Germans by Great Britain. No such treatment, the report states, existed; but even if it had, evidence showed that Germany had had British prisoners at work within range of British guns behind the lines as early as August, 1916. In reply to the German note, Mr. Balfour stated that the British were under strict orders to employ no prisoners in handling munitions or within range of the enemy's guns. But in April, 1917, an agreement was concluded between the British and German Governments that prisoners of war should not on either side be employed within thirty kilometers of the firing line. The report contains evidence up to the end of 1917, which shows that Germany disregarded this agreement; it may be a dead letter still.

Part of the evidence is from the reports of prisoners and of men who had been and talked with them, part of it from German documents. On April 15, 1917, the following notice, "Concerning Prisoners of Respite," was handed to a British noncommissioned officer to be read out to his fellow-prisoners at Lille:

"To the German request to withdraw the German prisoners of war to a distance of not less than thirty kilometers from the front line the British Government has not replied, therefore it has been decided that all prisoners of war who are captured in future will be kept as prisoners of respite.

"Very short of food, bad lighting, bad lodgings, no beds, hard work beside the German guns, under heavy shellfire. No pay, no soap for washing or shaving, no towels or boots, &c."

The notice goes on to state that the prisoners must let their relatives know how badly they are treated. As the official British report comments:

"These documents definitely commit the German Command to at least a threatened course of conduct for which the committee would have been slow to fix them with conscious responsibility. As will presently appear, this document certainly did not err on the side of overstatement."

The treatment of prisoners here threatened had, however, begun many months before. Furthermore, the German Command does not officially acknowledge the existence of prisoners in occupied territory, and not only are they not visited by neutral inspectors, but their whereabouts may not be disclosed. For months before the command to "write home" quoted above, prisoners of war had been kept in secrecy behind the firing line, with none of the safeguards of ordinary prison camps—bad as some of these might be. Following are quotations from the report:

"The treatment in question commenced to be systematic, not later than August, 1916. The prisoners were, it seems, kept in large numbers at certain places in the west—Cambrai and Lille are frequently referred to in the evidence—but in smaller numbers they were placed all along the line. Their normal work was making roads, repairing railways, constructing light railways, digging trenches, erecting wire entanglements, making gumpits, loading ammunition, filling munition wagons, carrying trench mortars, and doing general fatigue work, which under pain of death the N. C. O.'s were compelled to supervise.

"This work was not only forbidden by the laws of war, but it was also excessively hard. In many cases it lasted from eight to nine hours a day, with long walks to and fro, sometimes of ten kilometers in each direction, and for long periods was carried on within range of the shellfire of the allied armies. One witness was for nine months kept at work within the range of British guns, others for shorter periods. Many were killed by these guns; more were wounded; deaths from starvation and overwork were constant. The men were half starved. • • • One of them at Cambrai says:

"'If it had not been for the French civilians giving us food as we went along the roads to and from work we should most certainly have starved. If the sentries saw us make a movement out of the ranks to get food they would immediately make a jab at us with their rifles; but conditions here were not so bad as at Moretz, where if a man stepped out of the ranks he was immediately shot. I heard about this from men who had themselves been working at Moretz and had with their own eyes seen comrades shot for moving from the ranks. • • •'

"At Ervillers in February, 1917, a prisoner's allowance for the day consisted of a quarter of a loaf of German black bread, (about ¼ pound,) with coffee in the morning; then soup at midday, and at 4:30 coffee again, without sugar or milk. On this a man had to carry on heavy work of the kind just indicated for over nine hours. • • •

"Conditions at Marquion a little later are thus described:

"'• • • While we were here our Sergeants put in for more rations, but the answer they got was that we were prisoners of war now and had no rights of any kind; that the Germans could work us right up behind their front lines if they liked, and put us on half the rations we were then getting.' • • •

"'The German Sergeant in charge at Ervillers,' says one prisoner, 'was very harsh. Twice I saw him (this prisoner was there for a month only) using a dog whip, and heard of his doing so on another occasion. He used it mostly on men who were slow in getting out to work owing to weakness.' • • •

"To add to their miseries, the accommodation provided for these prisoners was in many cases pathetically inadequate. The witnesses recur to this again and again. One sleeping place, for instance, for a large party was a barn with no roof. The rain poured in upon them. They had to sleep in their wet clothes and work in the same clothes. They had no change of any kind. And yet some of these prisoners, if they survived so long, were kept behind the enemy lines for over a year. One of them thus describes their quarters at Cambrai:

"'We slept about twelve in a room in our uniforms without either greatcoats or blankets. There was no fire, and it was very cold. We lay on loose straw, which was full of vermin. We could only wash in a bucket of cold water without either soap or towels.'

"Another adds: 'The Germans did not supply us with any clothing, and, as we had to work in all weathers, conditions were very hard. It was terribly cold, also. We asked for clothing, but never got any.'"

Much of the evidence is from prisoners in camps who saw the men from behind the lines as they came at last to the camps themselves. The following is a typical extract from one of these reports:

"In May of this year a large party of British came into the camp who had returned from behind the German lines. They were ravenous through being starved, and half savages. I spoke to several of them. • • • Men were shot at sight for a slight cause, such as dropping out to get bread from Belgian civilians.

"The state in which they returned was the worst sight I have seen in my life. Their clothes were ragged, they were half shaved, verminous, suffering from skin diseases, and were half savage from hunger and bad treatment."

An army Chaplain reports:

"On Feb. 16, 1917, there arrived in Minden Hospital sixteen men who had been working behind the western front, attached to Camp E. K. 5. The thermometer registered 10 degrees, Fahrenheit, below zero. They had walked seven kilometers from the station. Their clothing consisted of tunic, trousers, and thin shirt, boots and socks, and an old hat—no coat and no underclothes. They had been two days and two nights in the cold train with very little to eat. • • • Two of these men died latter of consumption in Minden. They had all been captured in November, and their relatives did not know even that they were alive. These men report, too, that they are brutally treated; human life is not worth so much as horseflesh. They are worked until they either die or so completely collapse that they are useless. • • • They said it was nothing to wake up in the morning and find the man sleeping beside you dead. I got the names of several who had died and wrote to their people to inform them."

FRENCH MASONS AND THEIR CRITICS

To the Editor of The New York Times:

YOU published last Sunday the letter of an official of Scottish Rite Freemasonry in Paris, taking exception to certain statements of mine in a recent article.

I spent an hour this afternoon going over in Le Figaro the details of the great Masonic scandal which brought about the fall of General André and wrecked the Combes Ministry in the last three months of 1904. The situation revealed in column after column, issue after issue, of Le Figaro, Le Matin, Le Temps, and all the great Parisian papers was this:

General André, as Minister of War, with the aid of officials of the Grand Orient of France, had organized a gigantic spy system, by means of which Masons affiliated with that body reported on the religious convictions and practices of officers in the army in such terms as these: "Goes regularly to church." "His children are at a religious school," "Is a communicant," "His daughter collected money for a church charity," and so on, officers thus reported on being barred from promotion by the Minister of War, however excellent may have been their military records.

This had been going on for years. General André had systematically directed his subordinates to seek this kind of information from the Grand Orient, and the Grand Orient had systematically provided it. The documents are here in New York in facsimile: letters on the official note paper of the Ministry of War, with the visé of the Grand Orient of France stamped on them, addressed to the Grand Secretary of that body, and answered by him—documents by the hundred. I cannot believe that M. Raymond will undertake to defend such a system as that to an American audience, or that any body of Americans will tolerate it, much less commend it.

But perhaps the explanation of M. Raymond's attitude is this: There are, in France, as in Italy, two bodies, each claiming to be the genuine representative of Freemasonry. There is, on the one hand, the body affiliated with the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite, which was established in Paris, I believe, in 1804. This is so distinctly a religious body that many lodges will accept only professing Christians as members. This is, probably, the body which M. Raymond defends, and he is doubtless correct in saying that Caillaux does not belong to it.

But there is, besides, an older body, whose spy system I have touched on, the body which, on Sept. 13, 1877, erased from its rules the paragraph declaring that the existence of God and the immortality of the soul were the basis of Freemasonry; which, on Sept. 10, 1878, expunged from its ritual the symbols of the Grand Architect of the Universe. This is the body which I described as irreligious.

M. Raymond criticises the French military three years' law, saying that "it does not take three years to make a soldier." But surely that is not the point. The annual draft in France is about 350,000. This will mean, under the two years' law, that there will be at any moment with the colors some 700,000 men. Under the three years' law there will be with the colors 1,050,000 men. This is what Germany described as an outrage, but I cannot understand any patriotic Frenchmen sharing Germany's opinion.

STRANGE CASE OF CHARLES F. STIELOW

Governor's Action Ends Long Controversy on Life of Man Who Was Influenced to Confess Murder

CHARLES FREDERICK STIELOW and Nelson I. Green, his brother-in-law, are free men today by order of Governor Whitman. The fact of their freedom means that one phase at least of one of the most unusual murder cases in the history of the State is ended. It means for Green that he does not have to spend his life in prison and for Stielow that he may go and come as he pleases after as narrow escapes from death in the electric chair as any man ever had. Convicted of murder in the first degree, sentenced to die a number of times, reprieved by the Governor on three occasions, and snatched from the chair once within less than an hour of his scheduled execution by the act of a Supreme Court Justice, Stielow may now have his own home, live with his wife and children, and follow whatever ways please him best.

On the night of Sunday, March 26, 1915, Charles B. Phelps, an elderly, well-to-do farmer living near West Shelby in Orleans County, N. Y., and his housekeeper, Margaret Wolcott, were murdered at their lonely home. Apparently they were shot while attempting to defend themselves against robbery. Orleans County was excited by the crime and the authorities began a determined investigation. After a time suspicion began to point to Stielow and Green, poor farmers who lived near Phelps's place. Largely as the result of the activities of George W. Newton, a private detective engaged by Orleans County, Stielow was charged with the murder. At his trial in July a confession of the crime obtained from him by Newton was introduced. It went into considerable detail, telling how Stielow and Green had gone to the house to rob it and how Green had shot the man and woman when they sought to thwart them.

Stielow was convicted of murder in the first degree, and Green then pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree, in order to save himself from his brother-in-law's fate, and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Stielow, of course, was condemned to die in the electric chair, and was sent to Sing Sing to await execution.

So far the case had become little known beyond the vicinity of the murder, and it seemed that Stielow would pass out as hundreds of other condemned men had gone in the routine of the administration of the criminal law. But after Stielow had been confined in the death house at Sing Sing he began to assert his innocence, saying that the confession had been wrung from him by methods of the third degree and false promises of protection. Spencer Miller, Jr., then Deputy Warden of Sing Sing, was impressed with the prisoner's statements, and set an investigation afoot.

A number of philanthropic organizations and individuals became interested in Stielow's behalf, and the case began to attract State-wide attention. The friends of Stielow soon became convinced that the man was innocent, that he was subnormal mentally, and that while he was in an irresponsible condition his so-called confession had been wrung from him by Newton, who had reduced him to a state of terror by application of the third degree.

It was maintained that Stielow could not read or write and that the confession he was reported to have authenticated contained words not in his limited vocabulary and phrases beyond his comprehension. It was also said that the detectives responsible for the arrest and conviction of Stielow had been liberally rewarded by Orleans County.

Governor Whitman granted three reprieves for Stielow while those working for his life continued their efforts, which resulted in July, 1916, in the presentation of evidence before Justice George W. Cole of the Supreme Court in Buffalo on which a new trial was sought. Part of the evidence was a dictaphone record of a conversation alleged to have taken place between Detective Newton and a New York detective engaged by the appellants, in which Newton was represented as boasting of the manner in which he had forced Stielow to confess. This evidence was not accepted by Justice Cole, however, on the ground that it was hearsay, and on July 26 the Justice denied Stielow a new trial.

The condemned man then stood sentenced to die at 6 o'clock on the morning of July 28, and it seemed that only action by the Governor could save him. The late Inez Milholland Boissevain, one of those active in Stielow's behalf, and others hurried to Albany and appealed to the Governor, who denied their plea, saying that Stielow must die according to law.

It was July 24 when the Governor made his decision known, and it seemed that nothing could save Stielow from the chair to which he was scheduled to go early the following morning, but Mrs. Boissevain hastened to New York City, and at 1 o'clock on the morning of July 29, five hours before the time set for the execution, she, accompanied by several associates, woke up Justice Charles L. Guy at his home in Convent Avenue and asked him to consider the evidence in the case.

Justice Guy accepted the numerous affidavits and statements offered, but realized by 5 o'clock that he could not possibly go through them carefully in the time remaining before the execution. He read enough, however, to persuade him that the condemned man might have a good case, so he called up Sing Sing Prison on the long-distance telephone and notified the principal keeper that he would issue a writ postponing Stielow's death until 11 o'clock on the night of that same day, which would leave just an hour before the expiration of the week in which Stielow had been sentenced to die. The telephone message reached Sing Sing about forty minutes before Stielow would have walked to the electric chair. If a storm had destroyed communication between New York and the prison the man now free would have been executed.

Soon after the telephone conversation that saved Stielow's life Stewart M. Kidd, attorney for the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing, which had taken up the case, left New York in an automobile carrying Justice Guy's official order. The machine broke down before he reached Sing Sing and there were other accidents that delayed his arrival until an hour before that set for the postponed execution. He presented the first material confirmation of the telephone conversation received at the prison. But before his arrival Stielow's life had been further extended, for Justice Guy, having examined evidence in the case and heard arguments by James W. Osborne and David A. White, counsel for Stielow, that had induced him to grant a stay of execution at 7 o'clock in the evening, four hours before Stielow would have been put to death according to the postponed plans, had again telephoned to Sing Sing, notifying the Warden of his action. Stielow was thus saved, at least until the District Attorney of Orleans County had responded to Justice Guy's summons to appear in the Supreme Court in Rochester on Aug. 23 to show cause why the man should not have a new trial.

While every one was waiting for the hearing in Rochester the biggest sensation of the case and what ultimately saved Stielow's life occurred. Erwin King, a junk dealer, was reported to have been seen in the neighborhood of the Phelps place on the day of the murder, and a few persons had suspected him of knowing something about the crime, but no positive evidence had pointed to him and he had not been taken into custody. Early in August, however, he was arrested in Little Valley, N. Y., and charged with complicity in an assault and robbery of which A. H. Brown, a storekeeper of Randolph, N. Y., was the victim, and for which Clarence F. O'Connell was then serving a term in Auburn Prison. Although his arrest had nothing to do with the Phelps case, King was said to have felt the stirrings of a guilty conscience and to have believed that he was really wanted for the murder of the old farmer and his housekeeper. At any rate, he suddenly confessed that he and O'Connell had committed the crime, he participating in the capacity of accomplice, while O'Connell had done the shooting. The friends of Stielow rushed to the Little Valley jail, and some of them were present when King's confession was formally recorded. O'Connell swore that King's confession was false, but those working for Stielow said they had obtained evidence against him, one item being the affidavit of persons with whom O'Connell had boarded that he was absent on the night of the murder.

The hearing in Rochester ordered by Justice Guy, after an adjournment, was finally arranged to take place before Justice Adolph J. Rodenbeck on Sept. 27. Before this date King repudiated his confession completely and denied any knowledge of the murder. King repeated his denial at the hearing, and, from the point of view of the Court, the Stielow case fell down. Justice Rodenbeck refused to grant a new trial. Once more Stielow was sentenced to die. The Court of Appeals fixed his execution for the week of Dec. 11. The man's fate again seemed finally determined.

But the alternating of Stielow's friends between the courts and the Governor continued, and it was the Governor's turn again. Appeal was made to him. He consented to give the case a hearing on Nov. 28. Discouraged in their efforts to obtain a new trial, those working in Stielow's behalf changed their objective and asked the Governor to commute the man's sentence to life imprisonment. On Dec. 3 the Governor announced that, although he believed Stielow guilty, he would grant this plea. He gave as his principal reason the assumption that, if King's repudiated confession had been before the jury that convicted Stielow, it would have created such doubt in the minds of the twelve men that they would not have voted as they did.

And so Stielow's life was saved—but it was not his own. He was doomed to spend all of it in prison, as Green had been sentenced to do from the beginning. Once more, in a different way, it looked as if the case had ended.

The fight for Stielow was still on, however. The New York World had become interested in it and was moving energetically in the prisoner's behalf. Thomas O'Grady, a Buffalo detective, acted for The World and began the collecting of evidence. King, the junk dealer, was in the Cattaraugus County Jail in November, 1916, held on a charge of perjury in connection with the assault case in which he and O'Connell had been involved, and O'Grady placed another detective, Thomas Fogarty, in jail with him. Fogarty obtained King's confidence, and some time later delivered to O'Grady letters which he said King had written to relatives and friends and asked him to smuggle out of the jail. These letters, published in The World last Friday, seemed to show King's guilty knowledge of the murder of Phelps and his housekeeper and to represent his clumsy efforts to divert suspicion from himself. Here are several of them, the wallet mentioned in the first being that stolen from Phelps, according to the belief of O'Grady and others:

Nov. 13, 1916.

Dear Friend Pete: I am down here in Little Valley jail, held for perjury, Dec. 4. I don't think this will be much. I wish you would get to —— and tell him to go to Kearney, to say, if they go to him and ask him if I left a wallet there and some stuff, to say no, as they say he has told O'Grady so, and it may go hard with me if he has told it. —— will do this for me. I did what he wanted me to do for him, and he told me he would do it for me.

ERWIN KING.

Nov. 15, 1916.

Dear Friend: I wish you would go to Kearney and tell him to keep still, and tell Kinnie to say I said nothing to him about the wallet, or who got it. You had better see Mrs. O'Connell. Tell her to say she gave it to me, and that it was not the Phelps pocketbook, for it would be just as bad for Clarence as for me. For God's sake do this, ——, and save me.

ERWIN KING.

Nov. 15, 1916.

Friend Joe Kinney: I hear that you have been squealing on me. Now you know that if you tell on us it would be the way that they would send me to the chair. You know what I said to you at Parker's Livery. No one knows but you, and you can save me from the chair.

ERWIN KING.

Nov. 17, 1916.

Dear Friend Pete: Did you get my letter and did you go to Albion? Did you see —— and what did he say or intend to do for me? Now, they have got me if Kinney squeals on me about the Phelps case and what I said to him.

ERWIN KING.

The "Kearney" mentioned is a saloonkeeper in Akron, a few miles from the scene of the murder, and "Kinnie" is Joseph Kinney, with whom King shared a bunk in Parker's Livery Stable at Akron on the night following the murder.

All of this and other evidence was presented to Governor Whitman on Jan. 31, 1917, and so impressed the Governor that he appointed George H. Bond of Syracuse as Special Deputy Attorney General to investigate the whole case. In February, 1917, at the Governor's request, the Legislature appropriated $25,000 for the expenses of the investigation. Mr. Bond and Deputy Attorney General Charles E. Waite began the presentation of evidence before a Special Grand Jury sitting under Justice Wesley C. Dudley at Albion, Orleans County, in December of last year, and for more than a week the jurymen officiated at the examination of witnesses and the taking of testimony. King was then ready to plead guilty to the murder of Phelps, according to Mr. Bond, but the court could not accept the plea because it was in conflict with the legal decision of the case then standing.

While the Grand Jury was sitting, there were stories of attempts by interested persons to reach it, and the atmosphere was full of charges and countercharges. Almost every one outside of the jury room was surprised when, on Dec. 21, the jury reported to Justice Dudley that it had "nothing to report," which meant that it had refused to indict King and so to act to free Stielow. The case then stood just where it had been at the time of the commutation of Stielow's sentence. Once more the courts had afforded no relief. And King, whom the jury had refused to indict, was set at liberty.

But Mr. Bond, in company with many others who had made a personal study of the Stielow case, had become convinced of the man's innocence, and made a report to Governor Whitman in which he said that, in his opinion, there was a prima facie case of murder against King and O'Connell, that Stielow's so-called confession had undoubtedly been made under compulsion and was untrue, and that Stielow and Green were innocent of the crime.

Mr. Bond said that the Grand Jury seemed to have failed to give the evidence presented by him full weight, and he went into details to show that, while there was in Stielow's confession much that did not tally with known facts and the laws of physical possibility, King's confession, on the other hand, was supported in many points by external evidence. King supplied him with details, Mr. Bond added, which seemed to show his connection with the crime unmistakably. The report was a careful argument of the case and led to the logical conclusion of Stielow's and Green's innocence and King's and O'Connell's guilt. It was said that seven of the members of the Grand Jury wanted to indict King and O'Connell, but that fourteen others would not do so.

Governor Whitman kept the report under consideration for some time, and finally on last Wednesday announced the complete commutation of the sentences of Stielow and Green, and directed that they be set at liberty. He said he was convinced that if the evidence presented by Mr. Bond had been available at their trials both men would have been acquitted, and that, as there was no legal process by which they could obtain another trial, he felt it his duty to give them their freedom.

So, on Thursday night, Stielow and Green stepped through the gates of Auburn Prison, free men after three years of confinement. Stielow said he would go with his wife and three children, one born after his arrest, to Buffalo to work for O'Grady, and Green planned to get back to farming as soon as possible.

How the Phelps murder case stands with relation to O'Connell and King is uncertain. O'Connell is still in prison, serving a sentence for assault. King's whereabouts are unknown. Whether another Grand Jury will consider indicting them cannot be said.

Many persons in Orleans County, which spent something like $20,000 in the prosecution of the case against Stielow, are displeased at the Governor's act, but throughout the State there has been comment indicating a general feeling that two innocent men have been freed.

The Kind of Soles You Need

When you analyze your shoe problem carefully you are bound to consider chiefly what kind of soles you need.

You need long-wearing soles—to cut down mounting shoe bills.

You need waterproof soles—to protect against dampness when rubbers are left off.

You need soles that resist slipping and so make walking safer.

You need flexible soles—to be easy on the feet and do away with the old torture of breaking-in.

You need soles that have all these good qualities.

There are such soles—Neōlin Soles, developed by scientists to have all the qualities soles should have.

You and your family need Neōlin Soles and are entitled to them.

Get them on the shoes you buy this Spring.

And have the shoes you have worn re-soled with them.

Learn the economy, comfort and safety of these soles. Give yourself and your family the treat of wearing them.

They cost no more than other soles, to start with, and they save much by their long service.

They are found on new shoes for men, women and children in most good shoe stores, and are used for re-soling in most good repair shops.

When you ask for Neōlin Soles look for the Neōlin trade mark underneath. Dealers and repairmen in the lists below will point out this mark to you as identifying the genuine.

Mark that mark; stamp it on your memory: Neōlin—

VICTORY TALK IN BOOK BY SECRETARY BAKER

Cabinet Member's Departure from Pacifism Indicated by Speeches Just Collected Into a Volume.

UNDER the title of "Frontiers of Freedom," the principal addresses of Newton D. Baker, Secretary of War, have just been published in book form by the George H. Doran Company. There are two editions of the volume, the ordinary "trade edition" and a special limited number of copies. Two of the latter, inscribed by the Secretary of War, one to President Wilson and the other to Postmaster General Burleson, will be carried in the first aerial mail next Wednesday from New York to Washington.

In almost all his speeches Mr. Baker has spoken of the principles for which we fight, of democracy at home and abroad, of the heroic dignity of our cause, and of our disdain to conquest. But Mr. Baker's book contains utterances of a fighter. He used to be a pacifist. But in the book he shows that when he talks about peace he means a victorious peace.

That is clear from such sentences as the following, quoted from an address at a mass meeting in Cleveland, Oct. 17, 1917:

"There isn't a man in America who has inherited any of the spirit of the founders of this Government, or caught any of the inspiration of liberty and freedom; there isn't a man who loves his children and wants them to have a chance, who does not believe that this war must be fought to a finish. By that I do not mean fought to an end, but fought to a finish, and that finish must be an absolute victory over any power existing in the world that can visit another such catastrophe upon the human race."

Speaking to labor men at the Labor Day celebration at Newport News last September, Mr. Baker said:

"The American people have a relentless and unalterable determination to stay in this struggle until this reign of terrorism is forever banished. * * * Some people say that they do not know how long the war will last. I do. It will last until we win it."

The "reign of terrorism" which Mr. Baker mentions is, of course, the reign of German ambition and "Schrecklichkeit." Throughout his speeches he makes many references to this, to the invasion of Belgium, the deportations, to what happened in Poland and Serbia, to submarine warfare, and again and again to the Lusitania. In this speech to the labor men, after tracing the events that led up to our entrance into the war, he said:

"It seems a remote thing, and yet every time I close my eyes I can see the docks at Queenstown—the boats coming in and landing women and children, mothers dead with babes clutched in their arms. All day long that procession comes, until at nightfall there lie on those docks hundreds of people, many American men and American women slaughtered by the juggernaut of German imperialism."

In a tent meeting at Cleveland, Oct. 17, Mr. Baker said:

"We must realise that we are at war; we must realize that the very character of our adversary and the aggression which brought on our own participation mark it as a supreme struggle. Let no man imagine for a moment that a feeble effort will suffice. If we are in truth to rescue civilization out of this conflagration, then every nerve, every muscle, every thought, every affection, every impulse, every capacity both in us as individuals and collectively in us as a nation must be devoted to this undertaking, not only that we may win, but that we may win quickly."

Later in the same address he spoke of the cause of the war, said that every man in the country had hoped it would not be necessary, and traced the German conduct which made it inevitable, continuing:

"And then came the notice that the German Government had built enough submarines to feel safe and would march on the open highway of the commerce of mankind and mark out lanes through which we might send a ship or two, provided we painted them like barber poles! We could not be assured that even these ships would be safe. We were told that the Master of the Universe and the Partner of God had decreed that certain parts of the ocean could not be traversed by ships and that if we undertook to continue our commerce the ships would be sunk without warning. We had two courses. We could send the Ambassador home and rest with a protest. We could have shrunk and shriveled and said, 'So long as you don't pinch us, you can eat everybody else.' We could have given up our rights as a nation. We could have knelt at the foot of the Hohenzollern throne and said: 'Thy will, O Lord, is enough for us.' We didn't do it? We had no intention of doing it. * * *

"I came not so much to tell you why the war is being fought, or its nature, but I came to tell you that this is your war and mine."

In an address at Richmond, Dec. 5, 1917, the Secretary spoke of Germany, and again of our national choice:

"When this war broke out, almost the first movements of Germany were true to form. She brought her ships off the coast of England, not by its forts, where its ships of war were, but along its undefended coast, its peaceful seaside villages, its little Summer resorts. They stood fourteen or fifteen miles out to sea, and under cover of darkness bombarded sleeping towns, killing defenseless women and children. When the great Zeppelin raids began to come over England there was no attempt made to attack fortified places. Their whole object was to use frightfulness as a means of driving the people of England into submission.

"Now, one of the greatest surprises to the German Government, but which doesn't surprise any other people in the world, is this—that you can't scare Englishmen into submission by killing babies. Nobody knows what is in store for us in this war. We are in it until we win it. It is just as well to have some understanding at the beginning, and Germany should learn now that, if, with the help of the devil, she is able to find some way to cross the 3,000 miles of ocean that separate us and to make a secret and stealthy warfare upon the women and babies of this country, she will not scare our men either.

"The same policies were pursued with submarines. * * *

"We had a choice then; by that time the game was perfectly clear. It was the intention of the Hohenzollern family to throw a shadow across Europe, beginning at the North Sea and extending to the middle of Asia as a start. Their intention to destroy France was clear; their purpose to destroy England was clear, and the German Emperor did not hesitate to say to certain Americans, prominent Americans, 'When I am through with the rest of these fellows, America had better look out.' So we had a choice to make. We could either cower and crawl to the feet of the Hohenzollerns and say, 'O Cleveland! It is being fought in Seattle, and in Waco, Texas. We think of it as being fought by these army officers and the men in uniform in the other countries. It is being fought by you. * * * It calls on each of us to do our utmost in order that it may be successfully and speedily brought to an end. I am mightily interested in bringing this war to an end. But I have no reference whatever merely to having it stop.

"This alternative presented itself to us. We could either yield—we could either say that we had grown so fat and lazy and money-loving that we had forgotten liberty; or else we could say, 'No, all the prosperity, all the success, all the civilization, all the ethical advance of our people, is due to one thing, and that is that we have been free, and we intend to remain free.' And that is what we have said. Now we are dedicated with all of our efforts of every kind, with our lives, our fortunes, to win this war."

Speaking to the Chautauqua representatives in Washington, Jan. 2, 1918, he said:

"Every man in America is interested in this war; it is not the war of the people in Washington; it is not the war of the people in the army; it is the war of every man in America. * * * This war is the greatest thing that we have been privileged or will be privileged to see and help in."

His address on "The Embattled Democracy," before the New York Southern Society, Dec. 12, 1917, concluded with a declaration of the "joy in store" for us, not only that victory would bring a better era and larger liberty, but that, by joining in the war, "we Americans have been privileged to participate in making them a common asset for mankind."

For himself, he said, in speaking to the National Conference on War Camp Community Recreation Service in Washington, Oct. 23, 1917:

"I suppose I am just like everybody else. I would like to go over the top. I would like to storm a rampart. I would like to grab a flag which was shot down and raise it up and go forward with it, and feel that I had taken Old Glory where it ought to be."

There is another personal touch in Mr. Baker's answer to the remark that we are "fighting for France and England." That, he says, isn't true. But suppose it were? In his Richmond address he said:

"I do not know how it is with you, but I have a limitless admiration for the British and French people. I am not very sure that I would not be perfectly willing to fight for them and for them only."

Of the union that war has brought us, he said, in Washington, Oct. 8, 1917:

"We are more of a nation todsy than we have been at any time in the whole hundred years and more of our glorious history." And to the Boston City Club, "We are consolidated as one people. We have one thought. * * * We are Americans now, joining hands with the heroes of France and England."

Secretary Baker has a good deal to say that is of interest to pacifists—not the pacifists of today who use the word as a bad cloak for disloyalty, but the idealists who cannot bear the thought of any war. The following sentences are taken from different speeches:

"I do not love war. * * * I do not enjoy the idea of war, and yet there are some things dearer than life. Our fathers fought from 1776 to 1783 to establish freedom. Would we call back the Continental Army? Would we send Lafayette back to France—and Rochambeau? Would we take Washington's sword out of his hand and break it over our knee and say: 'Don't do that. We would rather live forever slaves to a tyrannous Government than have a fight about it'? Would we call back any of the true wars that have been fought for principle and for the establishment of right in this world? No!

"By the rotation of events and the irresistible logic of righteousness which summons every brave arm to the right side of the cause, the United States has entered this war. And it will never turn back until it has given the world peace; not merely a cessation of conflict, but peace based upon righteousness.

"The end of this whole matter is that when this war is over and it is definitely determined among the children of men that autocracy is bidden to veil its face forever; when government becomes all over the world merely the instrument of enlightened popular will and judgment; when the interests of the lowest and the least in every society are vital to the welfare and the interest of all that society; when the rule of the people is established in the world and the historians write it down that America, born in freedom and dedicated to liberty, has saved that great doctrine for the salvation of mankind—it will then be said that in 1917 we arrayed our nation and sent to the war our soldiers; that we sustained them by our industrial enterprises at home; that we kept our national spirit pure and undefiled, and that the dawn of liberty for men all over the world dates from that day when our soldiers landed in France and began the final battles of freedom."

The book contains the three principal addresses made by the Secretary of War to our troops in France. At the close of his speech to the Rainbow Division, March 20, 1918, he said:

"I thought you marched well and drilled well when I last saw you, but what I have seen of you today gives me a new standard of comparison. The mark of the thorough system of our army in France is upon you. I feel you have all grown to greater manhood, and that the steel of your spirit has now the fighting edge."

AMERICAN SOLDIER WRITES CHEERY LETTER FROM FRANCE

PRIVATE N. C., a New York boy, but of a New England regiment now in France, did not have to go to war. He could have been exempted. But he spent months trying to volunteer—first, in the regular army, then in the marines, then in the first Forestry Regiment, for which he might have been adjudged especially well qualified, as he had studied forestry in this country and Germany, and had had experience in lumbering in Washington and California.

He did everything he knew how to get himself into a perfect physical condition, even to the extent of having gold fillings painfully removed from teeth and porcelain substituted. But in each case when the physical examination came the doctors turned him down because of an eye that would not focus. This was done, too, when he tried to get into the hospital corps. He was told that the only way he could get to France would be to pay his own expenses over and maintain himself in some voluntary service attached to the French army when he got there.

He decided to wait for the draft. He was called among the first and was ordered to appear for the physical examination. While waiting for his turn he heard the candidates in the next room going through the eye tests. He memorized what he heard them say. When his turn came he went and passed with flying colors—the doctor complimenting him upon his "perfect" condition. After ten days in a New England camp he and his company were thrown into a National Guard regiment to fill the latter's quota, loaded on a transport and started for Europe.

Letters from N. C. have come very irregularly. Once there was a lapse of six weeks. Numerous parcels have been sent him that he has never received, particularly of chocolates. Many letters have been lost, but in no letter has he ever really grumbled.

As a presentation of the happy, philosophical spirit which animates the majority of American youngsters in France, the following letter may offer comfort and consolation to those mothers whose minds are continually filled with pictures of their sons spending their days and nights dodging shells:

"April 10, 1918.

"Dear Mother:

"I started a letter April 4th to show I had not forgotten your birthday, but that unfinished 'opus' happened to fall to a muddy floor in the night and consequently was in no condition to be preserved for posterity. My letters do seem to become as infrequent as the important dates in the calendar, and I am quite ashamed of my negligence. But, as I explained in my last letter, it was because we had been in the trenches.

"I suggested in my last letter that you could follow our activities more closely than I could write about them if you had a clipping bureau send you clippings from Connecticut papers. But I rather regret that suggestion; a paper one of the boys received recently had glaring headlines and a sort of retraction for a story it had apparently printed the day before of a rumor that one of our companies had been wiped out! German propaganda was loudly blamed. It is best to rely on the official reports from Washington and believe nothing else, however reliable the source.

"Our trip to the front did not develop many data for the archives of historical fact perhaps, but to most of us it was undoubtedly the most interesting experience of our lives. We were fortunate in having been sent to a famous sector—I cannot name it, although THE TIMES printed a map with our exact position indicated, and told what occurred while we were there; 'fortunate,' because we saw at its almost worst—I am going to say 'best'—what hundreds of thousands of sightseers are coming from all over the world to see, a famous battlefield of this war. It will undoubtedly be one of the 'things one does,' like running down to Palm Beach or going to the opera, before long, and the nice part of it is, when you and Dad come over you will simply have to take me along as a guide.

"Are you one of those fond mothers who cannot understand how the French Government has happened to overlook, and failed to honor with at least a Croix de Guerre the sterling worth of her particular pride and joy? But I know that you are not; that it is much more pleasant to know you need not have the slightest worry for my safety; to know that even if I do return plain Private N. C., 'unhonored and unsung,' at least I'll return. It is a great mistake to regard newspaper stories and magazine articles as giving accounts typical and representative of life at the front. They touch only the high spots, the unusual, because it is only the unusual that makes news. In reality, an average day at the front is likely to be no more dangerous than most any job in civil life requiring care and common sense. * * *

"I have hesitated to write much that might be termed 'news,' for it is hard to guess just what can or cannot get by, and I don't want my letters delayed on that account. You get it all in the papers, anyway, as the clippings referring to the raid of Feb. 28 show. The largest encounter American troops have yet participated in,' so I suppose I ought to have a lot of thrilling and heroic details to write about. But I was deep in a dugout, more nervous than thrilled, during the barrage, and it was a week before I knew as much of what occurred as the New York papers had two days later. We had some wonderfully good times, hundreds of amusing incidents, up there in the dugouts. It may seem strange, but with the detail I was with, I had at the front the happiest days I have had in France."

PLAYS AND PLAYERS IN THE NEW YORK THEATRES

Silly Jenny

By JOHN CORBIN.

WHAT is the feminine of "silly ass"? The male of the species has been familiar to the stage since Lord Dundreary; but if the female has ever come prominently among us until Miss Barrymore gave us "Belinda" the occasion has escaped my memory. It is a highly interesting type, for, paradoxical as the statement may seem, it is primarily a mental type.

Surely Joseph Jefferson's account of Sothern's development of Dundreary as a mere matter of skipping and sneezing needs amplification. Sothern was at first "much dejected at being compelled to play the part." For two weeks "it was a dull effort, and produced little effect." Then, with the intention "to injure the character," he began to introduce extravagant business, "skipping about the stage, stammering, and sneezing." Finding to his surprise that the audience was delighted with these antics he developed them and "at the end of the run was, in my opinion, considerably in advance of us all." Yet the autobiography of the younger Sothern makes it amply evident that the part was "worked up" chiefly by means of new dialogue—at the composition of which Jefferson himself assisted.

It is not the physical antics of Dundreary that remain memorable, but the antics of his mind. What he said delighted his audiences not merely because it was vacuous, preposterous, but because it had its own peculiar twist—a twist that resulted from a distinctly active imagination playing upon a mentality as distinctly imbecile. He was not merely an idiot, but an inspired idiot. No one could forecast the quaint workings of this intellect, but, once revealed, they were recognized as inevitable. This high quality has clung to the silly ass ever since. Who does not remember G. P. Huntley's delight and wonder at the skill of the teahouse maid who was able to pour "right in the middle of the cup every time!"

There have been vacuous women on the stage, Heaven knows, but their vacuity has lacked this authentic inspiration. The best remembered of the lot is Mrs. Malaprop. Sheridan, in the person of his Julia, speaks of "her select words so ingeniously misapplied without being mispronounced." The adverb is perhaps used in the now obsolete sense of "ingenuously." Certainly the voluble lady has no hint in her mental makeup of what we call ingenuity. Her mistakes are plain blunders. "I would by no means wish a daughter of mine to be a progeny of learning. . . . She should be mistress of orthodoxy that she might not misspell and mispronounce words so shamefully as girls usually do; and likewise that she might reprehend the true meaning of what she is saying. If I reprehend anything in this world, it is the use of my oracular tongue and the nice derangement of epitaphs." Surely, if any one is ingenious here it is Sheridan. Even in that most famous of her malaprops, "as headstrong as an allegory on the banks of Nile," the ridiculous image is external, fortuitous—originating in the mind of the author, not of his character. Throughout, in a word, the confusion is purely mechanical, not at all mental. To produce it, Sheridan endows the simple creature with not only a vocabulary but a range of ideas far beyond her scope—his own, in fact. No one but a scholar thinks of spelling as orthography; no one but a true artist in words prizes a vernacular style and nicelies in the arrangement of epithets.

Shakespeare anticipated Sheridan in the comic device of the malaprop and used it far more sparingly and credibly. If any of our elder dramatists has given us a real silly jenny it is he. Hostess Quickly has many an "aspersion" on her "parts of speech," but at her best her linguistic twists have a rarely comic idea behind them. There is no richer humor in the language, or more deeply characteristic, than her comforting words to Falstaff on his deathbed. "'A cried out 'God, God, God' three or four times: Now, I, to comfort him, bid him 'a should not think of God; I hop'd there was no need to trouble himself with any such thoughts yet." The words are as mal apropos as any used by Sheridan's lady, but they are her own words, and behind them lies an idea as real and human as it is unconsciously humorous—an idea that throws into vivid relief the character of Falstaff and his hostess alike.

Roland Young (as Dr. Rank) and Mme. Nazimova in "A Doll's House."

Peggy Wood of "Maytime"—Which, Having Waited for the Calendar to Catch Up With It, Now Bids Fair to Remain for a Summer Run.

It is the distinction of Belinda that her quaint conceits are very largely character-revealing. She is the veriest fluff of a woman, if the truth be told, lacking in any real quality of heart or of mind. Eighteen years before she and her husband parted because he wanted her to do her hair differently and refused to shave his beard. This is no epigram from a case-hardened worldling, but a statement of fact. That is the way Belinda is, quite simply and blandly. Her daughter arrives from school graduation, only mildly surprised that Belinda has not been present. "I thought it was on Thursday," said Belinda. "It was," answers the child, "last Thursday." "Oh," says Belinda, frowning severely. "So stupid of them both to be Thursday!" And thus the fault of her absence is definitely placed. The most nearly genuine instinct of her heart is for flirtation. She has two men in attendance, and presently adds a third—her own husband, as it happens, who has by now shaved his beard. The way she handles the trio is a marvel and bland and instinctive coquetry. Her daughter remarks that she is "being bad again," but Belinda shifts responsibility. The trouble is that it is April, and in Devonshire. So the child bows to the inevitable and becomes an accomplice, passing for a niece. It is all as silly as you will—but so is Belinda; and somehow every one likes her for it, at least in the first half of the play. After that the farce becomes rather thin and preposterous. Yet the production is likely to have a very definite success, thanks to the originality and humor of this silly jenny.

Thanks are due also to Miss Barrymore. For her to make Belinda personally charming is, to be sure, no great feat of artistry. Much as one would like to praise her for it, it is impossible to do so. A strictly critical conscience forbids. Yet praise may be freely granted for the manner in which she realizes the character. Physically it is as alien as possible, and Miss Barrymore's artistic discretion is nowhere more evident than in the manner in which she refrains from any attempt to make visually manifest the kittenish woman. She bends her personality to the part, but never for a moment to the point of breaking. That she ultimately encompasses it is the result of inward sympathy and flexibility of mind. From the point of view of the manager who casts by "types," she is perhaps the last of our leading actresses who would be chosen for the part; but it is equally probable that no one else could have realized it so completely and so humorously.

A Daniel Judges Ibsen.

THE following communication is of interest, among other reasons, because it comes from a Justice of the Municipal Court in the Borough of Brooklyn. John A. Valentine, who is presumably not unacquainted with marital difficulties, whatever may be his experience of the more formal order of drama:

> After a perfect evening with Mme. Nazimova, an evening perfectly boring, I come upon your lines in THE TIMES this morning. You begin with the assumption that Ibsen is literature because he happens to outshine the giants of our own generation, such as George M. Cohan and David Belasco. Don't you think you are assuming your premises as well as your conclusions?
>
> You are correct in saying that Ibsen was not a constructive social thinker; but for all that he was primarily a social thinker, and not a dramatist. Take the play freshest to our minds at the moment, "The Doll's House," and the underlying thought is a woman's right to a freer life. Tons of words have been printed on this subject in recent years, and many a true word has been said, but nevertheless very little of it is literature. And Ibsen sacrifices brilliant possibilities to a demonstration of a pet social idea. Nora has been the petted and spoiled child wife. In a crisis her husband fails to reach the heights she anticipated, and so in a moment the child becomes a woman. She realizes that her mate is not the god she has adored, and she throws him off without a struggle. Either the play is untrue or the affection of this champion of her sex was not worth the winning or the keeping. To be sure, the unreality was heightened by the nonchalance with which Mme. Nazimova repudiated her conjugal ties and ignored the maternal instinct, and by the thoughtlessness with which she plunged into the cruel, outside world.
>
> But the fault of the play is that Ibsen developed a social idea and forced poor, weak human character to adapt itself to the demonstration of the author's theory. The truth is that Ibsen, like Euripides before him and Shaw in our own day, sought to draw attention by the attitude of revolt he took to the established order of things.
>
> It is to hoped that Justice Valentine is more attentive to evidence in court than he was to the article which he condemns. It contained no mention of Mr. Cohan or of Mr. Belasco, and no allusion to either. Ibsen was measured by his influence upon Sudermann, Hauptmann, Shaw, and Pinero, all of whom were named, and on the modern French dramatists, who were spoken of collectively. His greatness was measured by the greatest of his contemporaries.
>
> The point of real interest is the assertion that Ibsen was primarily a "social thinker," and that he "forced poor, weak human character to adapt itself to the demonstration" of a theory.
>
> If this is so, it is very strange that he distrusted his own power of abstract thought, specifically declaring his inability to "follow out a thought to the end without coming upon self-contradictions." It is even more strange that his plays show the same distrust of definite demonstrations. He never exhibited a strong character in vigorous revolt against its environment without very soon exhibiting its "self-contradiction"—the corresponding weak character, succumbing—after Brand, Peer Gynt; after Stockmann, Gregers Werle; after Nora, Hedda.
>
> As a thinker in terms of ideas, Ibsen really does not exist. Of the social creed of Sudermann, Brieux, Shaw, we are fully informed, but not of Ibsen's. He neither upheld nor attacked any social system of his time. His thought, if it may be called thought, became articulate and comprehensible only when he embodied it in a concrete character, developed in the heat of some great dramatic crisis. In other words, what he dealt in was not sociological ideas and theories, but individual character forces. His influence on the social development of his time was undoubtedly great; but, in any strict use of language, it was the effect not of a thinker and his theories, but of a dramatist dealing in the object lessons of concrete character.
>
> This distinction may seem fine-spun, but it is really fundamental. The idea that any play can "demonstrate" a theory is a fallacy long ago discarded by those who understand the limitations of drama and its essential qualities. A play may, indeed, discuss a theory, even illustrate it, and has often been made to do so with very interesting results. Yet, accumulating experience of this kind of play has rather lessened than increased our valuation of it. The distinctive material of drama is character, sheer and absolute; and it is a matter of interest that today, as in the day of Shakespeare and of Sophocles, the leading dramatist, though dealing largely in forces that are social, did so in terms of concrete character, indifferent to the underlying idea, or perhaps not fully aware of it.

Edna Mora, a Newcomer in "Flo-Flo," at the Corl.

THE U. S. AND SHOW BUSINESS

THE United States Government in the rôle of theatrical manager would surely have been inconceivable not so many months ago, but the war, which has shattered so many other traditions, has shattered this one, so peculiar to the English-speaking nations, viz., that the business of the theatre is entirely a private affair. At the present moment our Government, through the War Department, is breaking into the field of theatrical producing on an extended scale, and already owns and manages three theatrical companies and a complete vaudeville bill. A number of other companies are in process of formation and will be taken over by the Government within two or three weeks. These companies are to tour exclusively through the thirty-two Liberty Theatres established in the national army and National Guard encampments throughout the country, and both the artistic and financial responsibility is to be borne by the Government.

The first company formed on this plan was "Turn to the Right," which was offered free of all profits or royalties by Messrs. Winchell Smith, John L. Golden, and John E. Hazzard. This company was organized by Messrs. Smith and Golden; the Government, through the Commission on Training Camp Activities, of which Raymond B. Fosdick is Chairman, simply paying the bare expenses of organization, the company then becoming the sole property of the United States Government. "Here Comes the Bride" was likewise organized by Marc Klaw, the company, after the initial expenses were paid, being turned over to the Government. Mr. Klaw, who was originally in charge of the camp bookings, is planning to book many of the Klaw & Erlanger productions through the Liberty Theatres during the coming season.

A new play, written by an officer in the national army, Captain H. H. Hughes of Camp Lee, is in rehearsal and will shortly be produced. This play was written expressly for the Liberty Theatres and marks the initial attempt of the United States Government in the encouragement of the young dramatist. An excellent company has been engaged for this venture, the actors including Willis P. Sweatnam, Robert Rendel, George Backus, Bruce Elmore, Gretchen Yates, James Manley, and Alathea Luce.

In addition to the strictly Government-owned organizations, there are a number of companies touring through the camps under private management. The plays produced include "Fair and Warmer," "Flora Bella," "Furs and Frills," with Richard Carle; "His Bridal Night," "Nothing But the Truth," "Twin Beds," "Very Good, Eddie," and "When Knights Were Bold," besides a number of vaudeville acts booked through the United Booking Agency. These organizations play on a percentage basis, and the responsibility for their success rests entirely with their producers. About the middle of June the Shuberts are to put out a number of companies to present such musical shows as "Love o' Mike," "The Midnight Girl," "Oh, I Say," "The Bond Street Girl," "The Royal Chef," "Fantana," "Mlle. Mischief," "The Red Petticoat," and "Two Little Brides."

The admission to all the Liberty Theatres, with the exception of a very few seats, is 25 cents, and, even in those theatres which seat between 2,800 and 3,000 persons, it would be obviously impossible for any company to make both ends meet at this figure unless their salary lists were greatly reduced. The actors and directors appearing in these companies have all volunteered their services at salaries which will simply pay expenses. The organization of the Liberty Theatre work is centred in the Commission on Training Camp Activities, of which Raymond B. Fosdick is Chairman and J. Howard Reber the New York representative. It took a war to bring home to the Government the fact that dramatic entertainment is a human necessity and its encouragement as much a national necessity as the subsidising of libraries and art museums. It will be interesting to watch the developments.

THE WEEK'S HAPPENINGS

A STAGGERINGLY all-star cast, recruited for Red Cross purposes, will naturally overshadow the other theatrical events of the week. These other events are more or less in keeping with the season of the year, being restricted to a pair of new Washington Square offerings and the annual Summer burlesque at the Columbia.

HELLO, AMERICA—Tomorrow afternoon at the Columbia Theatre.

Spring at the Columbia Theatre means the abandonment of the custom of weekly change of bill and the installation for a Summer run of the burlesque which has proved the most popular during the season. This time it is called "Hello, America," and is in two acts and seven scenes. The principals are Sam Lewis and Sam Doty, both well known in burlesque circles. Frank L. Wakefield, the author, is also in the cast. There will be matinées daily.

THE ROPE—Tomorrow night at the Comedy Theatre.

The change at the Comedy tomorrow night will be only a partial one, viz., the substitution of a couple of shorter plays for "Salome." Of the new pieces, one of them has already been played in New York by the Provincetown Players, the other is a new sea drama by Eugene O'Neill, called "The Rope." In it will be seen Whitford Kane and Effingham Pinto, appearing as guest players, and Josephine A. Meyer, one of the earliest of the players, who now returns to their ranks after a considerable absence.

"Close the Book," by Susan Glaspell, is the other novelty. It is a social satire along lines which Miss Glaspell has already made familiar. "Lonesome Like" and "The Home of the Free," two plays of the previous program, will continue on the new bill.

OUT THERE—Friday night and Saturday afternoon and night, at the Century Theatre.

Here, obviously, is the de luxe theatrical event of the year. Only a great charity, of course, could bring together the array of performers who are to appear in Mr. Manners's war comedy—to be precise, George Arliss, H. B. Warner, George M. Cohan, James T. Powers, Helen Ware, Beryl Mercer, Chauncey Olcott, James K. Hackett, Laurette Taylor, O. P. Heggie, Julia Arthur, and George MacFarlane. Not only that, but Mrs. Fiske will read a Red Cross appeal in the course of the piece; Eleanora de Cisneros will sing the national anthems of the Allies, and Burr McIntosh will auction an autographed picture of the cast at every performance.

The tour, which is restricted to three weeks, will be launched tomorrow night in Washington, and there will be but the three performances in New York. A performance will be given in Brooklyn, at the Academy of Music, on Thursday. The entire receipts of the tour will go to the American Red Cross.

The National Vaudeville Artists last year began the custom of giving a great annual vaudeville show at the Hippodrome for the benefit of their organization; the second of these will take place at the Hippodrome tonight. It is, of course, the one benefit of the year for which vaudevillians, big and little, are expected to turn out, consequently disappointments caused by defaulting performers are not likely to intrude themselves. The organization numbers more than 11,000 members in its ranks, and a list of those appearing tonight will include practically all the vaudeville performers now appearing in and about New York. Suffice it to say, therefore, that the roster is a long one, with each player restricted to a very few minutes.

"Der Bottelstudent" will be played all week at the German Irving Place Theatre, except on Friday night, when a performance of Sudermann's "Heimat" will be given. Grete Meyer will return to the Irving Place on this occasion to play Magda.

"Fixing the Border," "Blind," "The Queen's Enemies," and "Free," the quartet of plays which have been on view for week-end performances at the Neighborhood Playhouse, will be acted for the last time at that theatre tonight.

Edith Wynne Matthison's revival of "The Servant in the House" surrendered to the untheatrical weather at the Vieux Colombier last night, but it is not to disappear entirely from our midst. It will begin a brief road tour at the Standard Theatre a week from tomorrow.

And now, as an additional proof of Summer's arrival, comes news that Luna Park is about to reopen. This will happen next Saturday night, and assurance is given that amusement seekers will be treated to all of the famous rides of yesteryear, including the one home on the B. R. T.

Another sign of Summer, if any is needed, is the announced reopening of the New Brighton Theatre, the vaudeville house by the sea. It will resume business two weeks from tomorrow.

AN ACTORS AND AUTHORS' THEATRE

IN the Spring of the year, when the commercial producer grows wary and idle playhouses grow abundant, then look for independent theatrical ventures. (By independent, of course, is meant merely anything fostered by persons other than the previously mentioned commercial managers.) To date by far the most ambitious and promising of these ventures is the Actors and Authors' Theatre, which will formally enter upon its career with the production of a play at the Fulton Theatre in about two weeks—a career, incidentally, which can be halted only by the depletion of the society's exchequer, for of enthusiasm for the venture there seems to be no end.

The Actors and Authors' Theatre is unique of its kind—in this country, at all events. Its ranks, as the title indicates, are made up of the two classes of workers most necessary to the theatre—the actors and the authors. It will be a co-operative institution, with—according to the present plan—all concerned submerging their personalities and interests and working for the common good. It must be admitted that the explanation of this part of the program has drawn knowing winks from many persons acquainted with the artistic temperament, and it must be further admitted that a knowing wink is not altogether unjustified. The actors and authors who have the enterprise in hand, however, are keenly alive to the great professional weakness, but are hopeful that the zest of the game will enable them to triumph over it.

The professionals who attended the first public meeting of the organization at the Fulton last Monday went away fired with the project, doubting it only because most of its provisions sounded too good to be true. The extent of the enthusiasm may be inferred from the fact that Grace La Rue, whose vaudeville salary runs high into the hundreds, offered to cancel her bookings for any period during which the organization intended to present a musical show and to work for the same sum as anybody else—viz., $50 a week. (To be added to this $50, to be sure, is a pro rata share of the week's profits, but experience has shown that prospective theatrical profits are entirely too uncertain a quantity to be counted upon.)

It is not by drawing players from paying engagements that the Actors and Authors' Theatre expects to live, however. On the contrary, the specific aim of the organization is to provide work at a nominal figure for the actor who finds himself with a few idle weeks on his hands between engagements. While remuneration will be inconsiderable, as theatrical salaries go, the engagement at the co-operative house will not only give him practice in his profession, but it will also keep him in the public and managerial eyes, and consequently materially increase his chances of obtaining a regular engagement.

In addition to the opportunity which it will offer to actors, the organization expects to offer an equal opportunity to playwrights. Being largely an experimental theatre, it can afford to produce many pieces which the regular manager has not the time, money or inclination to touch. The present somewhat unsettled plan is to offer two productions simultaneously—one, more or less established in the popular favor, at the night performances; another, more likely to be of an experimental nature, in the afternoons. The present program, also, calls for daily matinées, but this is a matter for future adjustment. It is recognized as unlikely, for example, that daily matinées will be found a profitable investment at this season of the year.

The possibility of using the theatre as a laboratory for the commercial managers has also been mentioned. Nearly every manager, as has been pointed out, has on hand many plays which he has not time to produce, but in which he has sufficient faith to risk production. It will be the business of the Actors and Authors' Theatre in these circumstances to produce the play, although it might be added that the managers have not been heard from on the advisability of Broadway tryouts of plays intended for Broadway. Particular stress is laid on the fact that the new enterprise is in no sense working against the managers, but that it hopes to be utilized by them.

The organization is the outgrowth of a chance remark made by George Henry Trader, well known as a stage director, who will direct many of the Actors and Authors' productions. Mr. Trader merely remarked that it was a pity that idle plays and idle players could not be brought together, and half an hour thereafter—the scene of the conversation was the Lambs—the nucleus of the organization had been obtained. Its President is Edwin Milton Royle, who wrote "The Squaw Man," and men like Augustus Thomas, Louis K. Anspacher, and Cosmo Hamilton will give encouragement, and perhaps something more substantial. As for its roster of playerfolk, it will probably include eventually all but the biggest of the stars.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

THE theatrical collapse which seemed to be in the air a few weeks ago cannot be said to have materialized. An astonishing number of entertainments are still hanging on—about ten more than were in evidence at this time last year—and although tickets for some seventeen of them can be purchased at the cut-rate emporium, the managers have little cause for complaint. Continued prosperity, of course, is dependent largely upon the weather; a week's heat is certain to mark the passing of some half dozen attractions. Even in that event, however, there will be a huge number still on the boards, and for once the confident managerial predictions of an active Summer seem to have some basis of fact. The average number of Summer shows in New York is ten, but it would not be surprising to see that figure doubled during the Summer ahead.

A statement made in or near this spot a week ago—to the effect that Lionel Adams is the only actor except Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson who ever played the rôle of the Stranger in "The Passing of the Third Floor Back"—appears to have been based on anything but fact. An authoritative letter on the subject contains these bits of news:

> "Sir Johnston's brother—Ian Robertson, lately with Guy Bates Post in 'The Masquerader'—played this rôle many times, visiting those cities Sir Johnston could not play, and at one time playing a simultaneous engagement with his more distinguished brother in Chicago—Ian at the Princess and Sir Johnston at the Garrick. The piece was also done by several stock companies in this country. David Powell played the rôle at Northampton, Mass. In England the play was also given by another actor. But, despite all these attempts . . . the play has never been a success except as played by Sir Johnston."

Errors of this sort ofttimes are honestly made by those whose business it is to obtain publicity for a particular play or performer. And at other times they are not.

While slips are being rectified, it should be noted that Fay Bainter's appearance in "The Kiss Burglar" does not mark that actress' début in musical comedy—it having been set down in numerous newspapers that it does. Some eight years ago, at Daly's Theatre in this city, Miss Bainter sang and danced in a musical piece called "Rose of Panama." The piece failed, Miss Bainter attracted no attention at all, and a half dozen years or so were required to bring her back to Broadway.

Without breathing a word about it to anybody, William A. Brady carried a theatrical troupe off to Syracuse a week ago and tried out a new play. The piece is a dramatization of Joseph Conrad's well-known story, "Victory," and marks, incidentally, the first of the Conrad tales to reach the stage. The dramatization was made by B. MacDonald Hastings, author of "The New Sin," produced at Wallack's about six years ago. A. E. Anson is the hero, Alice Lindahl the heroine, and Edward Ellis third in prominence. It seems probable, according to the Syracusan viewpoint, that the play will be given a New York production.

A vigorous week's work by George M. Cohan was followed last Monday by the restaging of "Three Faces East" in Philadelphia. The piece is a war play, contrived by Anthony Paul Kelly, hitherto a scenario writer, and the expert hand of Mr. Cohan is expected to steer the piece safely to New York. Being up to the hour, if not the minute, it is not unlikely that the play will be brought to town this season, although the original specifications called for a Fall opening.

The overwhelming success of "You Know Me, Al," and the moderate success of "Good-Bye, Bill," have encouraged the sailors stationed at Pelham Bay to get together a musical piece called "Biff! Bang!" as their contribution to the theatrical season. It is now in rehearsal at the Century Theatre and will be produced there during the week of May 27.

The Gaiety Theatre, which has been standing empty since "Sick-a-Bed" went on its way a week ago, bids fair to wait another two or three weeks before it reopens. Unless the plans of the powers go awry the next Gaiety show will be "Just Around the Corner," of which Marie Cahill is the star. The play opened in Atlantic City on Thursday, and will be ironed out for two or three weeks on the road before it is revealed to the metropolis. Like "Three Faces East," it was not originally planned to offer this show in New York this season, but in all the theatrical world there is nothing quite so uncertain as a booking arrangement.

On the other hand, the new Weber and Fields entertainment, long announced as a Spring show in these parts, probably will not happen along until Fall. Report from Philadelphia, where the show has been playing, is that all is not quite well, and it is probable that the piece—"Back Again" is the name of it—will be withdrawn after the Philadelphia run for alterations.

Bessie McCoy Davis, the erstwhile Bessie McCoy, is reported to be about to desert vaudeville temporarily in favor of Mr. Hitchcock's fourth coming musical revue. It is officially denied, incidentally, that Mr. Hitchcock will incorporate into the new entertainment a monologue entitled "My Seventeen Weeks with the Fulton Theatre."

Speaking of such things, Frances White and William Rock, who failed to keep the Fulton Theatre alive with their pot-pourri entertainment, have betaken themselves to the road and are reported to be prospering hugely. Furthermore, their only assistance is a single vaudeville entertainer—they had several at the Fulton—and they are supplying an evening's entertainment. After two or three more weeks in the provinces they will return to town for rehearsals of an Elliott-Comstock-Gest musical show, destined to be one of Chicago's Summer attractions.

The auspicious opening of "The Kiss Burglar" on Thursday night launched a new theatrical firm on its travels, and launched it so well that a second production by the same firm is already in prospect. Jack Welch and William P. Orr, the former a well-known theatrical figure hereabouts, constitute the firm. Not the least enjoyable portion of the proceedings—to the Messrs. Welch and Orr, at all events—is the fact that the obliging ticketeers have purchased some four hundred seats nightly for the first six weeks of the run of "The Kiss Burglar." The next Welch-Orr production is a straight comedy called "A Dry Town," being a temperance play by one Louis Ely. It will be produced in Chicago this Spring.

After all, it is not always the newest and biggest success which yields the biggest profits. The example is "The Bird of Paradise," which, although five years old, has been represented by two road companies this season and has profited its entrepreneur—Richard Walton Tully, to be exact—to the extent of $110,000. This piece has been a consistent success in the provinces, although—or perhaps because—its success in New York was anything but startling. Nor is its career over, for two companies will again take to the road next season, and undoubtedly with the same results.

Mrs. Fiske's plans for next season were to have embraced a tour with "Madame Sand" and "Service" as her repertory, but the failure of the latter piece, coupled with the fact that "Madame Sand" does not promise well for road purposes, probably will bring about a change. A piece called "Penny," the work of Martin Brown, an ex-professional dancer, bids fair to be the next Fiskian vehicle. Brown, incidentally, is also the author of "A Very Good Young Man," a comedy which is scheduled to be the August attraction at Mr. Hopkins's Plymouth.

James Doyle and Harland Dixon—otherwise known as Doyle and Dixon—probably will flash forth as Broadway satellites in another season. They have spent the last season regaling the provinces with "Chin Chin," their closest approach to the Rialto having been a week at the Standard Theatre. Now, however, it is probable that their efforts will be rewarded with a new show, fashioned much after the style of the old Montgomery-Stone pieces. And, if so, Broadway is certain to see it.

Valeska Suratt has come out of the movies and probably will appear under the Woods management in a regular old-fashioned speaking play next season.

Robert Hilliard seems destined to miss some of next season's premières, for he has bound himself to Klaw & Erlanger for the star rôle in a new play.

Not every paragraph, where so many are concerned, can be expected to be deadly serious. "Love's Lightning," it is announced, will be sent on tour next season.

LATE SEASON MUSIC.

Nikolai Sokoloff, conductor of the Philharmonic Orchestra of San Francisco, will lead ninety musicians in a concert of French music at Carnegie Hall on Friday evening, presenting Franck's symphony in D, Debussy's "Two Nocturnes" and "Afternoon of a Faun," and Chabrier's "Espana."

Cantor Josef Rosenblatt at Carnegie Hall next Sunday afternoon will sing tenor airs from Meyerbeer's "l'Africaine," Bizet's "Pearl Fishers," Halevy's "La Juive," and Verdi's "Rigoletto," Hebrew melodies by Rosenblatt, Massenet's "Elegy," Gretchninoff's "Lullaby," and Schalitt's "Elli, Elli."

Mischa Elman, the Russian violinist, with Morgan Kingston, tenor of the Metropolitan, and Nina Morgana, soprano, will take part in the season's last concert in a series for working people, under the auspices of the Brownsville Labor Lyceum, next Sunday evening at the Hippodrome.

Yvette Guilbert, Percy Grainger, and the 15th Coast Artillery Band, under Rocco Resta, will appear at the Shubert Theatre next Sunday night in a benefit for the American Committee for Devastated France. Grainger will play part of Tschaikowsky's concerto and a Chopin polonnise, and Mme. Guilbert will sing the "Marseillaise."

Josef Hofmann announces a piano recital at Carnegie Hall on Tuesday, May 21, for the Red Cross drive.

Charles M. Schwab will take a party of New Yorkers to the Bethlehem Bach Festival at Lehigh University on May 24 and 25.

John McCormack announces a concert at the Hippodrome Sunday night, May 26, when he will give his gross receipts to the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of New York. Lieutenant Donald McBeath, recently promoted Flight Commander at Toronto, has obtained leave to reappear as violinist with the tenor on this occasion.

CONCERTS OF THE WEEK.

Marie Sundelius of the Metropolitan will appear as a guest at the thirtieth annual concert of the Swedish Singing Society this evening in Carnegie Hall. Other soloists are Samuel Ljungkvist, tenor, and Oscar Lundberg, bass, together with Herman Sandby, 'cello. Gustav Lindgren conducts the Lyran chorus of thirty men, and Ole Windingstad leads the Scandinavian Symphony Orchestra.

Cantor Schlager will sing Hebrew airs tonight at Temple Emanu-El in an evening of synagogal music by the full choir of the Temple, assisted by its four soloists, Inez Barbour, Mary Jordan, William Wheeler, and Frank Croxton, and by Sascha Jacobson, violin, and May Mukle, 'cello. Among the selections are the "Elli, Elli," the "Min Hametsar," by Halevy, and psalms by Henry Hadley and Cesar Franck.

Christian Kriens will conduct his orchestra suite, "In Brittany," part of Schubert's "Unfinished" symphony, Massenet's overture to "Phedre," and Meyerbeer's "Coronation march" from "The Prophet" at a concert of the Humanitarian Cult on Tuesday evening in Carnegie Hall. Arthur Friedheim, pianist, also appears in solo numbers by Weber, Mendelssohn, Rubinstein, and Liszt.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, Max Rosen, and Maggie Teyte are announced at a concert for the Stage Women's War Relief in the ballroom of the Ritz-Carlton on Tuesday evening. There will be other features, including an address by Daniel Frohman, President of the Actors' Fund of America.

POPULAR CONCERTS AT THE STADIUM.
A series of eight open-air concerts will be given during the Summer at the City College Stadium, 138th Street and Amsterdam Avenue, by the Stadium Symphony Orchestra of 90 musicians led by Arnold Volpe. In inclement weather the concerts will be held in the auditorium. There will also be patriotic addresses by well-known speakers.
The Metropolitan Musical Bureau will have charge of the general management, and it is hoped to arrange the engagement of the Metropolitan Opera House chorus, the Paulist choristers of Chicago, and the Bethlehem choir. It is planned also to give some grand operas in concert form.
A guarantee fund of $10,000 is needed for initial outgoings, and the concerts are expected to be self-supporting. The Executive Committee comprises Mrs. Charles B. Alexander, Mrs. Newbold Le Roy Edgar, Mrs. Hubert L. Gerry, Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Thomas Hastings, and Mrs. Charles H. Senff. Le Roy Baldwin, President of the American Trust Company, 120 Broadway, is Treasurer.

OF THE BRITISH ARMY
FAMOUS INVENTOR OF THE BRITISH TANKS, says:
"I was told by the British War Office to see Mr. Griffith's picture, 'Hearts of the World.' Mr. Griffith is a wonderful playwright. The war scenes in the picture are much better than any we have over in England. Those in 'Hearts of the World' are much better than I supposed could be secured, as it is extremely difficult to photograph except under very great danger. Words fail to describe the cruelty and barbarity of the Huns. What you see in the picture can be multiplied a thousand-fold, and yet it would be too mild."
